AFTER PRESSING, 9.6 value = $4,000

Are you ready to send your collection to CGC? Do you buy and sell high grade books on a regular basis? Or maybe looking to complete that special title in 9.4, 9.6 or 9.8? If any of these apply, pressing is a service you should check out. For years we've helped collectors achieve unbelievable grades through pressing, whether it's one book or 100. Not every book can benefit from pressing, but by learning how to find the right candidates our service will help you get the grades you want, allowing you to reap the profits you deserve.

One collector who was about to grade and sell his run of Spidey #100-200 came to us first. Of those 100 issues, 28 were pressed to 9.6 and 9.8. Had he sent them directly to CGC, these issues would have only graded in the 9.2 to 9.4 range, resulting in a much lower sale price. The value increase of only three of those Spideys paid for his entire pressing and grading bill. The rest was gravy.

For full information on proscreens, pressing and submissions (and our many other services...we do it all), check out classicsincorporated.com. We'll also be at all the major shows in 2008 performing on-site proscreens and pressing education, including Wondercon, New York Comic-Con, Philly, San Diego Comic-Con, Chicago Wizard World, Baltimore, Big Apple Con, and Dallas Wizard World. You can't miss us!

A Proven Standard of Integrity

CGC has made a commitment to exceed the market's unique requirements by applying its graders' experience and reputation for integrity in certification. And since CGC's employees are not allowed to commercially buy or sell comics, CGC can remain completely impartial and committed to serving clients through accurate and consistent grading and professional, courteous customer service.

CGC's attractive, and durable, tamper-evident holder utilizes cutting-edge technologies to provide the best protection for your books. The holder is slim and lightweight, making for easy storage and transportation. Its front and top labels display comprehensive information about the book and its grade.

Benefits of CGC Grading

- CGC has an established and trusted grading standard. CGC's grading team includes the most experienced, knowledgeable and recognized experts in the field, with over 150 years of combined grading experience.
- CGC provides a restoration check for each book submitted. When detected by our restoration experts, a description of the restoration is noted on our CGC purple label.
- Better protection for your comic books. The CGC holder is made with state-of-the-art materials and is designed to meet the needs and demands of comic book collectors.
- Buying comic books on the Internet has never been safer. Each comic book certified by CGC has been reviewed by the hobby's most expert team, and is then encapsulated with a detailed grading label inside our tamper-evident holder. Collectors know what they are getting when buying a CGC-certified comic book.
- Access to the Message Boards. Talk to the experts and collectors who have similar interests to yours. Do you have a question about a rare piece? Ever wondered who's collecting what? Maybe you want to share a bit of interesting information? Speak out on the Message Boards, get your answers and become a more knowledgeable collector today!
- Access to the Comic Population Reports. A comprehensive database lists comic books graded by CGC. Watch for updates and see the trend shift month-by-month.

> "...probably the most important event [in our hobby] to date was the arrival of comic book certification with CGC. The technical grade applied to each comic has become the standard used for buying and selling."

Let's talk comic books.

At BEDROCK CITY COMIC COMPANY, we have an UNTAMED LOVE for comic books. We dig 'em all—everything from ACTION COMICS to ZOOT, and this leads some to declare us certifiably MAD. Still others call us unseemly names like TEEN-AGE DOPE SLAVES, REFORM SCHOOL GIRL!, or TEENIE WEENIES (ouch!) And, hey, we were in the pool!

Savvy YOUNG ALLIES and grizzled old veterans alike frequent BEDROCK CITY COMIC COMPANY. We share a MONSTERous appetite for all things collectible, STRANGE, or just downright CREEPY. As you know, the WEB is lousy with SHOCKingly slimy dealers, some of whom (allegedly) practice VOODOO. But at www.BEDROCK CITY COMIC COMPANY.com, you'll find big SELECTion and TERRIFIC COMICS service… In a word… MORE FUN. We speak Comics.

Mission Statement

The goal of Comic Art Appraisal LLC is to establish The Comic Art Appraisal Rating which identifies the key factors that affect value in the narrative and illustration art market through a 100 point standard. Not to be confused with a price guide, this evaluation service provides a numerical rating for examples of original art while establishing authenticity and proof of ownership.

Collectors, dealers, enthusiasts as well as institutions can authenticate, document and ascertain the relative factors that determine the value of narrative and illustration art. A security laden, Comic Art Appraisal Rating Certificate is issued with each rating.

WANT TO SELL FOR MORE $$$ ?

In the past ten years or so I have been buying comics from dealers throughout the country . In fact, over the years I have bought comics from just about every dealer who advertises in this book. I spend millions of dollars a year buying. If professional dealers sell me comics why can't you ? A dealer is extremely knowledgeable, has shown his comics to all kinds of buyers from retail customers to every other dealer in the country at shows. They choose to sell to me because of honesty, financial reliability, and of course the prices I pay.

The Amazing Spider-Man
The Incredible Hulk

WHAT DO I BUY ?

Avengers
Captain America
Action Comics

Entire intact collections and dealer stocks are our specialty. I buy platinum age, golden age, silver age, and modern comics. I also buy toys, pulps, premiums, magazines, paper collectibles, sports and non-sports cards, music collectibles, movie posters, anything you can collect I will consider.

Desperate for Original comic art

SO WHY DO I NEED YOUR COMICS ?

Well, frankly, the dealers are not coming up with enough comics and I need more than they can currently provide to serve our collectors. This is a big opportunity for you. If the dealer pays you and re-sells it to me clearly I can pay you more money. I get more comics which I desperately need, and you get a better price. I do not know how long it will last that the dealers cannot satisfy me, so please act now and call me now while my needs are great.

I will personally make sure your are satisfied and every detail of our dealings are to your needs.

Keep up the excellent service!!!! I recommend you to anyone I cross paths that collects comics. Us folks out in rural nowhere depend on you.

Hi. Your service to me is excellent, and the new web site is great! Very easy to use, and I really like the improvement. I am from Norway, a long way from the US, and I am here to stay with you, and will continue to use you as my only supplier as long as I read Comic Books.
Best, P A Byrud Norway

Your new system is excellent! Thank you for keeping up with current technology.
M McIntyre

Your announcement that everybody who ordered Cap #25 would get it no matter how much the market offered was like seeing a white hat in the wild west. Cap'd be proud.
Thanks. P Santoro

Let me say how pleased I am with your service. Before I tried M&M, I experimented with different services. There was always some problem: either their product and shipping prices were too high, or they offered only a fraction of what was available. In the five years I've been using M&M, I have never once been disappointed with the securely-wrapped package that appears without fail on my porch the first week of every month. I love being able to order virtually any item from the Previews catalog. Every item I order (that has been released, of course) is in there, even the most obscure titles from tiny indies. In an age where simple competence is an increasingly rare commodity, M&M adheres to an old-fashioned "quality and service at a fair price" philosophy. Bravo, M&M! Please stay in business forever.
Thank you, J. St.Lawrence

ACROSS THE BOARD!

2007 IN REVIEW

by Robert M. Overstreet

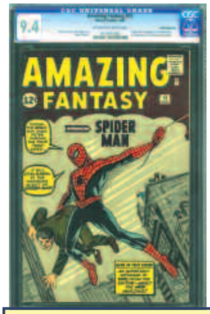
In spite of gold reaching its highest level in decades and the stock market's volatile swings, the collectable markets, including comic books, have enjoyed yet another banner year. The 11,000-issue "D Copy" Davis Crippin collection of Golden Age books came out in late 2005 and was offered over the past two years in several auctions by Heritage Auction Galleries to anxious buyers. Just as in the past, whenever large collections of this type emerge, collectors seem to always be there to absorb the books.

Comic books, of course, are not only sold to the public through the old traditional channels such as comic book stores and convention and mail order dealers, but today are also sold on the internet through auctions and sites such as eBay. As dealer Harley Yee observed, "2007 was one of my best years ever with the internet playing an important part. I am completely astounded by the hundreds of new buyers I am finding."

After handing the responsibility of grading to third party certification companies, auction houses can now sell certified (or "slabbed") comic books to their customers. This has certainly been a factor in record prices, but the demand for certified comics is still mixed. Many collectors want uncertified (or "raw") issues, others accept raw and slabbed copies, while still others only want the slabbed comics.



© MAR

Amazing Fantasy* #15
9.4 White Mountain pedigree copy sold for a record $227,000

As experienced collectors and dealers detected some time back, there is definitely a phenomenon with certification in that certain collectors are willing to pay multiples of Guide prices for books that are listed in the CGC Census as the highest graded copies. Some collector-investors are betting that these copies will not be out-ranked.

Additionally, near perfect to perfect copies in 9.9 or 10.0 have become sought-after as well, and this clearly includes even the more recent comics. While the vast majority of recent releases – and indeed, many books available from the past two decades – have values too low to be slabbed economically, the wise investor of this kind of material should be aware that the published population reports are only for copies that have been submitted and do not include the larger quantity of those yet to be certified.

The reasons for the impressive growth in independent certification have a lot to do with the comic book grading as a balance of science and art. Grades on raw books can vary considerably from dealer to dealer (or from collector to collector). Correspondingly, so would the prices realized from their sales. The results of these disparities are obvious.

The inconsistency in grades between different parties lends itself to restraining consumer confidence. For instance, take a raw book that has been designated with a high grade. If it was not graded accurately and then was submitted to a grading company, it could very well come back with a lower grade than expected, disappointing the purchaser. The benefit of a third-party grading service using consistent and accepted benchmarks has instead increased confidence in the grade and therefore the price. For this reason we have seen many slabbed books sell for prices much higher than their raw counterparts.

This has produced a certain volatility in the marketplace (this is particularly true of Silver Age and later comics). Along with other industry veterans, we have noticed when particular books are sold and then later resold at auction with widely varied results.

In the Golden Age, for instance, a CGC-certified Denver copy of Special Edition Comics #1 (9.4) sold in 2001 for $26,450 and again in 2005 for $15,525. If the Guide had raised the list price too much based just on the 2001 sale, it would later have to lower the price in 2005 when it sold for much less. Indeed, special issues and pedigree books can become very volatile at any time selling for prices way over the listed values.

Warehouse finds can also affect the sales price realized. A case in point is the recent warehouse of Gold Key books from Random House released into the market in 2007 as noted by advisor Lon Webb: "Gold Keys and Dells are slowing with the Random House file copies that flooded the market and buyers are picking and choosing among high (grade) copies at small to large price reductions."

During 2007, we saw thousands of changes in values – both up and down – which are reflected in this volume. Many titles and individual issues have enjoyed increased demand forcing prices higher while other titles have been selling for under Guide list with prices adjusted according.

Platinum Age: Steady and sometimes surprising growth in this market has been witnessed throughout 2007 in auctions from Heritage Auction Galleries, Hake's Americana & Collectibles and eBay. There have been record prices, to be sure, but it is more impressive to note the wider and stronger support of this particular part of the overall comic market. As collectors continue to seek out the history of the comic book medium, they are increasingly drawn past the artificial limits and into this early realm.

Golden Age: Early Archie books remained scarce with copies selling at above Guide. A 3.0 copy of #1 brought $6,500, a good/very good #1 sold for $5,748. A CGC-certified Pep Comics #22, the first Archie, in 7.5 sold for $70,000 ("Archie titles have always sold well over many generations" noted Harley Yee).

Among the successes reported to us in 2007: Timely comics as a group sold briskly, a CGC-certified Detective Comics #27 in brought $190,000, early Action Comics seemed impossible to find, Centaur and Fiction House titles – always hard to find – became hot books. A Good copy of Action Comics #1 sold for $85,000. All-Negro continued to outpace the Guide as a Good+ copy sold for $3,720 and Very Fine- copy sold for $10,063. Matt Baker books such as Giant Comics Edition #12, Teenage Diary Secrets, etc. were in very high demand along with Reform School Girl and Phantom Lady. A Phantom Lady #17 in fine sold for $3227 while a copy of Daring Love #1 (Ditko's first published story) sold for a record $1,793!

The Atlas superhero revival books that occurred between the Golden and Silver Ages in 1954 continue to set record prices as they have in years past. An uncertified Captain America #78 in NM- sold for $4,182. It is difficult to say for certain, but we can't help but wonder if Marvel's Agents of Atlas mini-series and the beautiful hardcover collection of same with its glorious reproductions of key Atlas issues helped fuel awareness of this material.

© DC

Superman Comics ashcan CGC-certified 9.0 sold for $90,000 in a private transaction in 2007.*

Due at least in part to the continued availability of the Gerber Photo-Journal reference books, more and more covers are being singled out and collected. Because of the high value of Golden Age runs in today's market, most collectors can't afford to collect entire runs. Therefore, collectors are picking the best covers and are willing to pay more to get that "special" issue for their collections. As Heritage's Lon Allen and Barry Sandoval reported, "Superman #14 (Fred Ray Patriotic cover) sells for at least double what a #15 sells for." They also suggested that Exciting Comics #39 (the one with Nazis giving poisoned candy to kids on the cover), "should be doubled."

EC Gaines file copies continued to sell at multiples of Guide during the year while non-Gaines copies in high grade remained scarce. Vincent Zurzolo wrote, "Of particular note is the returning strength of pre-code horror and the ever-present popularity of ECs. ECs sell because people love quality art and story-telling."

In the past few years early issues of Walt Disney's Comics & Stories, Uncle Scrooge and the duck one-shots have been scarce in high-grade selling at significant prices whenever they do appear on the market. A CGC-certified Uncle Scrooge #386 in 9.4 sold for $8,000 in 2003. In 2006 that copy sold again for $26,290 and then another certified 9.4 brought $28,680 which is over 10 times current Guide. A CGC-certified WDC&S #2 in 9.0 sold for $16,100 and $13,145 in Very Fine. When it comes to high-grade copies of this title, early issues remained scarce to non-existent. A Four Color Comics #4 Donald Duck in VG-F went for $6,573, two and one half times Guide.

This has not been a casual blip or anomaly. Rather it has been a sustained interest in high-grade Disneyana reaching far beyond comics. By setting its various benchmarks (and including Overstreet pricing on its selected comics), The Official Price Guide to Disney Collectibles may have been all the encouragement consumer confidence in this area needed. Its second edition is now available. We should also note that numerous other duck one-shots were consistently selling for over Guide in Very Fine and better. CGC-certified issues in 9.4 or better can really get crazy, selling for up to 10 times Guide.

"Significant amounts of quality material became available to the market as a result of individual collectors deciding to part with portions of their collections." noted Dave Anderson. "There are currently more options for selling material of any value level than ever before. Auction options include Heritage, ComicLink, Hake, and of course, eBay."

Many of our advisors have reported a pick-up in sales for restored books. Collectors are discovering that books with slight restoration such as minor color touch or glue repairs can be bought at a discount. "While they categorically sell for prices well under Guide, hobbyists are realizing that a few dots of glue are not equivalent to more extensive treatments," wrote collector Peter Bilelis.

Silver Age: There is a big disparity in the perceived value between Silver Age comics that are uncertified and those that are certified. The certified copies tend to sell for much higher prices generally even though there are numerous raw copies that might grade exactly the same.

Given our continued focus on consumer confidence, this discrepancy is logical since collectors can't be certain of what the "official" grade of an uncertified issue might be if later submitted to CGC for grading. Correspondingly then, even though we raise many of the prices for these issues graded 9.2 each year in the Guide – and there continue to be many examples sold in this grade – our top price listed may well fall short of what these issues bring when certified.

Silver Age keys such as Tales of Suspense #39, Journey Into Mystery #83, Incredible Hulk #1, Amazing Fantasy #15, Fantastic Four #1, Amazing Spider-Man #1 all sold for record prices during the year, and some broke records more than once. Marvel's success at the movie box office (and with subsequent DVD sales) certainly doesn't hurt this.

Two CGC-certified copies of Amazing Fantasy #15 (the first Spider-Man story) sold in 9.4 for $210,000 and $227,000, respectively, and another in 7.5 went for $23,200. Other amazing sales included Amazing Spider-Man #1, which brought $100,000 in 9.6 and another copy sold for $34,000 in 9.0. Others: a Fantastic Four #1 went for $23,500 in VF and another copy sold for $13,384 in Fine+, Incredible Hulk #1 fetched $82,500 in 9.2 while another copy in 9.0 went for $50,000; a Tales of Suspense #39 got $25,000 in 9.2, $11,950 in 9.0 and $1,600 in Fine-Very Fine. DC war books have enjoyed a marked increase in prices realized this year.

Bronze Age: "1970s' comics are now out-selling all other eras by volume," wrote dealer John Haines. The level of enthusiasm for this period was seconded by Heritage, which reported getting multiples of Guide for copies of Green Lantern #76 and Detective Comics #400, among others.

Further confirmation comes from Valiant expert Greg Holland, who hosts an analysis of the CGC Census on his site at www.valiantcomics.com/cgc/. Through this evaluation, we are able to observe that the Bronze Age comics clearly make up the largest percentage of comic books certified by CGC with over 205,861 books as of October, 2007. While facing only grudging acknowledgment from certain quarters, the comics of this era are over thirty years old.

While the typical Bronze Age keys including Amazing Spider-Man #129, Giant-Size X-Men #1, Incredible Hulk #181, and X-Men #94 have performed for a protracted period, the aforementioned Green Lantern #76 has also seen new records. A CGC-certified copy graded 9.4 sold for $8,365.00 (Spring '07) was followed another 9.4, which realized $9,030 (Fall '07). Copies in 9.0 and 9.2 have repeatedly sold in the $700-$2,000+ range.

For specialty comics within this category, historian Jon McClure reported "The Holy Grail of 35¢ variants, Iron Fist #14, sold in three notable transactions," and nominated it for the top spot in Bronze Age books, listing at 9.2 for $2,000."

Copper Age: With Transformers #1 in 9.8 bringing in $500+, Amazing Spider-Man #300 selling over $800, this is an area of the market that will warrant continued reevaluation. Many of those predisposed to dismiss Bronze Age comics will doubly miss out on the growth of this market sector. The prices in higher grades are significantly more volatile than in lower grades, but don't underestimate the market for the keys. Be sure to check out our top sales lists for more.

Modern Age: Last year Marvel killed off one of their main characters, Captain America. Even in this media-savvy age of marketing, the national and international reaction was somewhat surprising.

Retailer D'Arcy Farrel wrote, "Marvel then supposedly kills Cap off in an unexpected issue, Captain America #25. That had a lot of real press. So much that it reminded me of Superman's death in the early 1990s."

Green Lantern #76 continues to be a popular book with collectors, as copies sold for record prices in high-grade condition.

Regardless of the comparisons, Lauren Becker of Warp 9 Comics reported, "Prices soared...a lot! eBay had first printing sets (two covers) from low $25 to $200+ within 24 hours of release."

Prices, of course, dropped significantly afterward then stabilized. This has not slowed the flood of variant or retailer incentive covers. The market has fluctuated on these often and rapidly, and the pricing of such issues (including second printings, sketch covers, logo-free editions and numerous other gimmicks) remains anything but consistent. We have seen everything from the most egalitarian offerings to price gouging when it comes to these novelties. The best advice when collecting these remains "Collect what you like," because this particular niche market continues to flip-flop.

The impact of the rapid publishing cycles that release trade paperbacks and hard covers soon after original individual issues are published has yet to be fully understood in the recent back issue marketplace. Large scale "events," such as Civil War, World War Hulk, and Infinite Crisis continue to dominate the marketing of new material from Marvel and DC.

In summary, 2007 has been a very good year for comic books as the market continues to grow. Most would agree with our Advisor Mark Zaid, who wrote, "…within the Golden Age market, I do not envision a significant slow-down for sales in the coming year. Indeed, I believe the opposite will happen as a new wave of collectors continue to enter the marketplace."

We would like to personally salute our friends at CGC, who certified their one millionth comic just as we were in the final editing stages of this market report. Congratulations to Steve Eichenbaum, Steve Borock, Mark Haspel, Paul Litch and everyone at CGC on this monumental accomplishment.

Additional congratulations to Jamie Graham, whose Graham Crackers chain reached its twenty-fifth anniversary and to all of our other contributors who celebrated important events this past year.

The following market reports were submitted from some of our many advisors and are published here for your information only. The opinions in these reports belong to each contributor and do not necessarily reflect the views of the publisher or the staff of The Official Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide or Gemstone Publishing.

Have a great 2008 everyone!

After 39 years of continuous operations we have seen an increase in collector enthusiasm in 2007. More fans are entering the field of hard core collecting and lots of collections have hit the marketplace. There does not seem to be any lack of interest in the items that have come into our hands in 2007. A lot of collections are being released by older collectors or the estates of deceased collectors. Many books that have been hidden away for decades are available again. Generally there is only one copy per item and the scramble is often quite fierce to get that elusive copy. When a rare book goes into another collection it probably will be decades before it hits the market again.

Internet Sales: We have been continually producing and mailing catalogs since 1969. Many of our past catalogs are considered by prominent comic book historians to be ground breaking reference works in the field of comic book collecting.

During the 1970s thru the mid 1980s, under our retail store name – The American Comic Book Company of California, we produced many tabloid catalogs that were distributed as supplements to Alan Light's original fanzine, The Buyer's Guide For Comic Fandom, which today is the monthly Comic Buyer's Guide. A number of these catalogs were 80-90 pages in length and heavily photo illustrated. In total we have produced over 200 catalogs of various sizes. As far as we can determine no other dealer or store has produced a larger volume of original material. Sadly, in 2007 we did not issue a single new catalog, devoting all our energy and man power to our website. The internet has changed daily activities for all of us and we sincerely hope it is for the better. As we write this our site has around 30,000 individually scanned and described items and we anticipate that we will have around 50,000 items on site when this sees print. Check our site when you get a chance. We'll have lots of original material, unique descriptions, and important comments.

In 2007, Timelys were selling faster than they came in. (All Winners Comics #2 shown)

Collections: The best original owner collection that we acquired in 2007 came out of Florida. The owner bought the books as a child in Egypt at an American military base PX store and various newsstands that carried American material. Made up of almost 600 books from 1945 to 1954, the collection is characterized by the white and bright off-white page quality that is present in every book. For several decades this collection was stored near the pyramids in the arid desert climate that is so well known in Egypt. The books did show some wear as they were accumulated by a child, but they were well taken care of and the average grade is in the Fine/Fine+ range. We did buy them from the original owner who had moved to the US and had retired in Florida. Several of the books have distinct distributor marks on them and a few have Arabic writing. We were quite thrilled to get an original owner collection that is entirely made up of pre-code comic book issues.

Highlights of the collection were: Catman Comics (how often do you see even a small run of this title?) and long runs of Fawcett titles – Captain Marvel, Whiz, Marvel Family, Mary Marvel, Lash LaRue, Hopalong Cassidy, and Nyoka. Fiction House was represented by Jungle, Jumbo and Planet. Action, Superman and Adventure were the predominant DC titles, with a handful of war titles mixed in. There was a small stack of pre-code horror issues, which was a surprise to us, as we had always heard that foreign censors would not tolerate horror and terror publications into their countries. The highlights of this group were the Fox titles, most of which were sold before we could get them on our web site. That should not come as a surprise to anyone. As you might anticipate, we have elected to call this The Egyptian Collection.

We thought 2006 was our biggest year for acquisitions, but clearly 2007 has topped last year. We were surprised by the sheer volume of Golden Age books that were made available to us, and we did not turn down a single collection. Timely Comics normally trickle into our inventory, but in 2007 there was a constant flow of the top titles including: Captain America, Human Torch, Sub-Mariner, Marvel Mystery, Young Allies, All-Winners, and All-Select. Not many of the Timely issues were long term residents of our vault. They went out faster than they came in and at this instant we only have a couple dozen Timelys in stock.

Our biggest volume seller in Golden Age has been DC Comics followed by Fawcett titles. This should not be a shock to anyone. The average Fawcett super-hero issue is inexpensive compared to most other publishers. Most collectors can complete collections of most Fawcett titles without the threat of divorce or bankruptcy and the comics have a nostalgic quality about them that will transport you back to the Golden Age.

DC Golden Age issues are automatic sellers. So many people have enjoyed them over the decades that they will never lose their popularity. Early Batman, Superman, Action, Adventure, Detective, More Fun and All-American issues are always in demand. Some of these issues are so much fun to read that it breaks our hearts when we have to ship them out.

Sales: We have experienced more material selling above Guide estimates than any other year in recent memory. Titles from the Golden Age that have been bringing 10% - 25% above 2006 Guide listings include: Black Terror, Blonde Phantom, Phantom Lady, anything with a Matt Baker cover – and lots of issues with Matt Baker stories, Jumbo, Sensation, Wonder Woman, Red Ryder-Victory Patrol, Captain Video, Tim Holt – issues featuring The Ghost Rider, Rulah and the other Fox jungle girl titles, Gene Autry – Fawcett issues, Avon – one shot issues, Shadow, Doc Savage, photo cover westerns, any comic book with the American flag on the cover and most pre-code horror issues.

1950s Comics: Pre-code leads the way here. Horror and science fiction titles bring the most money followed closely by Good Girl Art and Esoteric issues. EC Comics continue to have an appeal to collectors. The originals always find homes and the Russ Cochran reprint sets in slipcases have become hot sellers. We recently received 22 sets and sold 18 of them in one week. Tales From The Crypt, horror titles, Mad, science-fiction titles, crime, westerns, and everything else is the pecking order of the original EC Comics. Western and crime comics have been steady sellers. As was the case last year, romance comics have been in high demand. The most popular issues have been those with art by Matt Baker, Wally Wood, L.B. Cole or issues with lingerie panels, lurid stories, and off beat themes.

Walt Disney and Humor Comics: The Disney titles that Carl Barks was involved with are very popular. Most of our sales on these are to collectors who live outside the US. This trend has been building for 3 years. Non-Barks issues end up in with the piles of Looney Tunes. Archie and Harvey titles have a consistent and constant demand. Although they are a couple of decades apart, the first 10 issues of each of the major series are not easy to locate and will sell quickly. Katy Keene continues to be the most widely sought after Archie series title, while Richie Rich gets the honor in the Harvey camp. If you are a comic book investor, you will not get hurt when you add any of these early issues to your selection. Pre-code humor comics from the off trail publishers have had an extreme increase in demand.

Silver Age Comics: They are never going to stop. They are never going away. Too many people love Spider-Man, the Fantastic Four, and the X-Men. People like to collect them and kids like to read them. Even with the appeal of video games and sports, kids like Spidey. When the kids grow up and have money to spend, they want to buy the old comics. Is it any surprise that the prices go higher and higher? The demand will never stop. Collecting is fun.

Pulp Magazines: The Pulp Magazines were forerunners of modern comic books and any of them with a comic book connection has had a constant if not increased demand during 2007. The most popular comic book related pulps were: Lone Ranger, Phantom Detective, Masked Rider, Shadow, Doc Savage, Nick Carter, Hopalong Cassidy, Thrilling Wonder Stories – published by Nedor who produced Thrilling Comics, Dan Dunn – which was based on the newspaper comic strip, Flash Gordon Strange Adventures, and any issues with Tarzan or John Carter of Mars stories. All-Story Oct 1912, which features the first appearance of Tarzan, is selling well into the five figure range – when a copy can be found. Also popular were: Don Winslow, Ka-Zar, Jungle Stories (the pulp version of Jungle Comics,) Planet Stories (Planet Comics pulp twin,) Out Of This World Adventures (which had full color Avon comic book inserts,) Black Book Detective featuring the Black Bat (who looks just like Batman,) The Angel Detective (whose original appearance was in Marvel Mystery Comics,) Black Hood Detective, Sheena – Queen Of The Jungle, Strange Tales and Wings.

Non-comic related pulps also had a banner year. Top movers were: Weird Tales (the first issue is pushing five figures,) Spicy Mystery, Spicy Detective, Spicy Adventure, Horror Stories, G-8 And His Battle Aces, Dusty Ayres, Ace G-Man, Medical Horrors, Popular Stories, Famous Fantastic Mysteries, Amazing Stories, Science and Invention (one of the first pulp format magazines to carry science fiction stories,) The Spider, and Unknown. Don't hesitate to add pulps to your collection. This is a wide open area and there are many rare items waiting for you.

Conventions and the Future of Collecting: Comic-Con International: San Diego has slowly pushed Golden & Silver Age dealers and collectors into the background. The original focus of the convention has been changed. Fewer dealers of vintage material arrive each year. Collectors complain about parking 15 blocks from the convention center. Now would be a good time for the convention promoters to rent a hotel ballroom several blocks away from the convention center and set up a Golden & Silver Age dealers room. Promote it along with the rest of the show, just make it easy for people to get to see what they came for. San Diego is way too crowded. We have been at the show since the first one in 1970 and have never made a sale to any one in a costume.

Conventions still provide an important aspect of collecting that is not found on the internet. Hanging out with other collectors for a day or two is a lot of fun, and aren't we all looking for fun when we collect comic books?

Lon Allen & Barry Sandoval
Heritage Auction Galleries

If you needed proof that the vintage comic market is very strong across the board, look no further than the fact that we were able to hit $4.7 million with a comic and comic art auction held the week after ComicCon International, the hobby's biggest annual spending spree!

Our observations on the past 12 months:

Personal collections: As we write this, we are just grading the last few comics from the Davis Crippen ("D" Copy) collection, having sold some 11,000 comics and sent Mr. Crippen's heirs checks totaling more than $1.5 million. Fortunately, this isn't the only superb personal collection that has come our way lately– a couple of other highlights are the Janowicz collection ($300,000 sold to date for a collection with some of the nicest Silver Age Marvels we've seen) and the Warren Hall

Collection ($200,000 sold to date, featuring exceptional DC Silver Age.)

Also, if you enjoy paging through Overstreet Guides of yore as much as we do you, may recall the ads for the Fantasy Mail Company – the collection of that firm's owner, "Fantastic Frank" Johnson, may well rank with Hall and Janowicz before all is said and done, stay tuned.

Atlas "superhero revival": The Hall collection we mentioned above featured the best copies we've seen of the Atlas revival books, and we wondered if this isn't a category with more room to grow.

The demand for Mr. Hall's books was very strong with results far above Guide (Captain America Comics #78 in unslabbed NM- for $4,182), but the Guide prices for these Cap/Human Torch/Sub-Mariner issues seem to be about right in the lower grades for now. Perhaps more collectors will start comparing Young Men #24 to Showcase #4 in terms of significance and begin snapping up available copies… and it would be so very tempting to try and put together the whole "Atlas revival" set, since there are only 23 comics total.

Vancouver pedigree: As of this writing, we have sold 205 of the Vancouver books for a total of $145,000. To put that $700 per book average in perspective, consider that many of the titles were fairly obscure books like Funny Book, It Really Happened, Kiddie Kapers, etc. Yet the whiteness of the pages and the absence of any dust shadows or the like makes these copies incredible to behold. It's tough to compare this collection with the Mile High hoard since the latter is 100 times as large and has all of the keys, but on a book for book basis the condition equals or tops that of the Mile Highs.

EXCITING COMICS

If you can find one, you'll pay a premium for Exciting Comics* #39 with its classic cover. (the Rockford copy shown)

Hot Covers: The Golden Age issues with the best covers are simply running away from the others in terms of value. Take the Lev Gleason books as an example: the first appearance of the Little Wise Guys in Daredevil Comics #13, a significant story moment, not only fails to command a special premium, it sells for less than Guide – nothing against Charles Biro's characters, but nobody born after 1950 has had any exposure to them. But while #13 languishes, there are countless takers for #11 of that same series (a bizarre bondage cover) which now stands as the second most-desirable cover of the series behind only the immortal Daredevil Battles Hitler (#1.) The brutal cover of #27 would probably give #11 a run for its money if it came up for sale a bit more often. Crime Does Not Pay is similar: even the collector who has no interest in this series will still bid on the bizarre #33.

More Top Covers: Superman #14 (Fred Ray patriotic cover) sells for at least double what #15 sells for, usually closer to triple, and was too low in last year's Guide in all grades except perhaps GD. Another issue you'll pay a premium for if you can find one is Exciting Comics #39 (the one with Nazis giving poisoned candy to kids on the cover, with art by Schomburg), here again the value from Guide #37 should be doubled.

Low-Grade Keys: Not that we are scouring the country for beaters, but a Batman #1 is always welcome in any grade -- we have offered two PR copies lately that sold for over $4,000 each. Meanwhile, a Human Torch #2 with three wraps missing brought $1,400! The lesson here is, the top 25 Golden Age books have gotten so expensive that any chance to get any copy is pounced on.

Disney Ducks: We all know the Uncle Scrooge keys are not rare… if condition isn't a factor. Strict NM copies, on the other hand, are among the most fought-over books out there, especially now that the CGC census has shown just how tough these are in grade. Case in point: in 2003 we auctioned Four Color #386 in CGC 9.4 for $8,000, a very pleasing six times 2003 Guide. Three years later (after the census made it apparent how tough the book is in NM) that same copy was consigned to us again and brought $26,290… then another consignor sent us the only other 9.4 copy, and it sold for $28,680! That's about 200 times what an average VG-type copy is worth, one of the bigger disparities we've seen for a vintage comic.

Scarcity in the Internet era: We don't doubt that Bob Overstreet and his able aides will be going through the books designated as "scarce" or "rare" in The Guide as more data is accumulated in the CGC census and our own online Permanent Auction Archives, both of which are free for all to use for research. One nominee: Eerie #1 (1947) should probably lose its "scarce" designation – though an intriguing book, it's one we come across quite often, and indeed, there are 37 copies on the CGC census as we write this. A candidate to be awarded the "scarce" rating: as tough as All-American #16 is, we dare say you'd have an easier time finding that than #18 or #25!

Ice-cold: Alas, those non-fiction series like Real Life Comics, True Comics et al. are easily the lowest-demand Golden Age books, and some of the few Golden Age comics whose Guide value is too high even in 9.2. Only the Mile High copies would have a chance to surpass (or even equal?) 9.2 Guide, and even the Schomburg covers boasted by the former title don't help much.

Peanuts: Since we tend to sell – and write about – the established megahit-type books, it gives us great pleasure to reveal a sleeper in the form of United Feature Syndicate's 1953 Peanuts #1. Not the first comic book appearance of the Peanuts, but their first solo/headlining comic book, published some five years before Four Color #878. We surprised even ourselves by auctioning the Crippen copy (a VF-) for $1,454! Speaking of surprises, the original art for the Charles Schulz Peanuts strips has always done very well for us, but we just topped ourselves by selling a 1959 Sunday for $77,675.

Spirit Sections: Demand for these has gone up considerably in a year's time, perhaps because of the whisperings about a Frank Miller-scripted movie or because of Darwyn Cooke's excellent new series. At any rate, the June 2, 1940 issue (which is #1) sold for $448, or 6 times Guide in CGC 3.0 condition. Others from as late as 1947 have fetched double or triple Guide, and the result above notwithstanding seem to sell better in unslabbed form.

DC Silver Age: Another area where the CGC census has been very helpful. In the case of many 1950s DCs, a VF+ or VF/NM is the finest known copy, and while multiples of Guide have been paid for the "sole highest-graded" certified copy of superhero mags for some years now, the past year has seen this trend spread to the likes of Brave and the Bold #31 (Cave Carson) and Rip Hunter #1. We are no longer shocked by the likes of Metamorpho #12 selling for $425 in 9.4 – sorry Metamorpho, but in VG nobody even wants you for the $10 Guide price!

DC 80-Pagers: When we offer a strictly graded NM- 9.2, it often creates the same excitement as a 9.6 might for a staple-bound issue. The likes of Batman #203 and 208 still Guide for under $100 in NM- as we write this, that shouldn’t last long.

DC War: Having auctioned off runs of DC's "Big Five" titles courtesy of collector Keith Marlow, we now have a better handle on the values of some of the keys in high grade, and just as we expected, they commanded top prices. Frustratingly enough, the best Big Five covers seem to grace non-key issues, but one major exception to that is G.I. Combat #87, with an absolutely awesome Russ Heath cover outside and the first appearance of the Haunted Tank inside; a CGC 8.0 copy sold for $2,868. Meanwhile issues #44 (the first DC issue) in VF/NM and #68 (featuring "the Rock" who may or may not be the Rock) in VF- both brought $2,600 and change.

Hawkman: Issue #4 (the first Zatanna) has “flown” under the radar – it should be second only to #1 in value, and already is, at least for our bidders.

VG Comics: Many Silver Age books still Guide too high in VG in our estimation, for example Showcase #9 (not worth $1,000) and Tales to Astonish #35 (not worth $310.) The true keys that people are passionate about will be fought over even in low-grade, but when it comes to second appearances and the like, it's different. To put it another way, Journey Into Mystery #83 in lower grades is great, but JIM 84… we don’t see people paying $155 for GD or $310 for VG.

9.2 Marvels: While The Guide seems to put the NM- price at about 130% of VF/NM, our experience is that – for certified copies of Silver Age Marvels – the range is 180% to 200%. This, despite the fact that for many issues in this category, the census numbers for 9.0 or 9.2 are about the same. It's evident that for many collectors "high grade" begins at 9.2 – a policy you'd have a hard time adhering to with DCs (see above) but can be done with Marvels (though not inexpensively!)

Marvel Silver Age Odds and Ends: The aforementioned Journey Into Mystery #83 is the key book that has heated up the most since our last market report! Also, we're pretty sure our $5,228 sale of Tales of Suspense #57 is a record for that book. Hawkeye's hot, who knew?

Bronze Age DC: We think it's safe to say Green Lantern #76 is hot – Heritage results from the last year (all CGC-certified): NM $8,365, NM- $2,031, VF/NM $717! Another very strong book (also with an Adams cover) is Detective Comics #400: CGC NM $1,195 and NM- $388.

Again, we are bullish on the vintage comic market. And while we are proud of the high prices that intense bidder competition has produced, it also gives us no small measure of satisfaction to talk to the collectors who have helped put their kids through college, made a down payment on a house, or accomplished other long-held goals with the proceeds from a consignment of old comic books. We look forward to helping more collectors maximize the value of their four-color treasures.

David J. Anderson, DDS
Collector

2007 was an outstanding year in the comic collecting community. Significant amounts of quality material became available to the market as a result of individual collectors deciding to part with portions of their collections. The money generated from these sales was in turn put back into the market buying different available items. This is a trend we can expect to see for years to come as fewer and fewer original collections turn up. There are currently more options for selling material of any value level than ever before. Auction options include Heritage, ComicLink, Hake’s, and of course eBay. Recognizing this, dealers are forced to offer higher prices for quality material in order to maintain a healthy inventory, and most will eagerly accept consignments to include in their catalogs and convention stock. Although many of us sometimes complain about the prices listed in The Guide as either being too high or too low, we should all stop to reflect and realize that the comic book market remains healthy in large part due to the fact that Bob Overstreet and his staff have consistently done an outstanding job in putting out a price guide that accurately reflects market conditions.

Dealer/Collector

When it comes to new comic sales for the past year, it has been a giant wrestling match between DC and Marvel for the top spot. Both companies have been doing extremely well.

DC's Sinestro War series exploded last summer catching quite a few shop owners by surprise. Green Lantern and Green Lantern Corps sales went up 200 percent. Sales of Superman, Action, Batman, Justice League of America, Justice Society of America and Superman/Batman were very strong. All-Star Batman sales are also up. DC's Countdown series is a consistently good seller following in the footsteps of 52.

Marvel's Civil War issues were very popular as well as the death of Captain America storyline. Demand for Civil War and the Marvel Zombies issues have been strong. Prices for a first print Captain America #25 spiked at around $20 but are about half that now. World War Hulk comics have sold very well with demand for the Planet Hulk comics also selling well. Pre-#25 Captain America comics are hard to keep in stock.

New Avengers leads the pack for Marvel with Amazing Spider-Man right behind. Uncanny X-Men and X-Men always do well but the other X-titles aren't nearly as strong. The relaunching of Thor was a big success. The Ultimate titles sell consistently at a good pace.

Back Issue Sales: Golden Age sales are very weak in the Alabama region unless they are Batman or Superman and even then they are slow to move. Silver Age sales are much better with Batman and Amazing Spider-Man leading the way. Early X-Men can be difficult to sell. However, the vast majority of main DC and Marvel titles from this period do not bring Guide prices; this area seems to show a lot of resistance to moderate to high prices. Lower grade Silver Age move somewhat at 50 percent off. CGC comics are virtually ignored here; no interest whatsoever.

Bronze Age sales are flat to weak. The abundance of copies from this period makes it hard to get even Guide prices. Dollar back issues and 25-cent comics do well for the bargain hunters. Back issues of newer comics do very well until they reach about a year old and then they fall off dramatically. If a title gets cancelled after running a few years, the back issues are doomed to reside in the cheap boxes.

More obscure titles from the 1940s and 1950s (crime, horror, and war) and Classics Illustrated occasionally sell to out-of-town collectors passing through but at well below Guide prices. Archie titles from the 1970s on up sell moderately, mostly to parents and grandparents.

Dell Comics are terrible sellers with maybe the exception of Little Lulu. Duck titles scarcely move; the same with Gold Key issues. Movie cowboy titles are not only dead in the water, they are at the bottom of the harbor.

Conan black and white magazines in average condition are impossible to keep in stock. We are constantly out of them. Cheap regular four-color Conan's sell well. Warren's Creepy and Eerie are requested frequently but are hard to come by.

On eBay, Duck books fetch maybe 20 percent of Guide. Silver Age Marvels do better but non-key issues, even CGC 8.0 or above don't bring great prices. The eBay market for comics is a crap-shoot with too many novices testing the field with outlandish prices on common comics (i.e. Superman #75, black bag edition, $500 "Buy-It-Now".) Many of the new sellers have no comic book marketing experience and with grading all over the map. Overall, the eBay market is very soft but with a little searching, big bargains can be found (i.e. Superman #20, very good+ $145.) It seems too many sellers want way too much for opening bids. Established dealers are the best to do business with.

The Official Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide sells well in the Spring but falls off after that. The real hard-core collectors have to have this book because of the tremendous data it contains. Since it is a guide, it is a great selling tool. The history of the different periods of comics plus the Big Little Book listings as well as Promotional Comics section makes The Guide the most comprehensive on the market.

Wizard World Chicago: It seems it was slim pickings at this convention for 2007. Some dealers said it was too soon after the San Diego Comic-Con (two weeks before) and they didn't have time to restock. Golden Age Superman comics were hard to find as were many Timely titles. Still, it was a well-attended show with many great attractions for those attending.

The convention was a buyers' paradise for many with discounts of up to 60 percent even on some Golden Age and a lot of non-key Silver Age from many smaller sellers. The bigger dealers had nice selections including Bedrock Comics, Graham Crackers, JHV Associates, Metropolis Comics, Motor City Comics, Terry's Comics and Harley Yee.

What Prices Should Go Up?: If I read my clientele correctly, no prices should go up. I tend to agree with them since my region is not very competitive when compared to the markets on the East coast, the West coast and Chicago area. There are only two comic shops in a metropolitan area of over 400,000 in south Alabama and one of them is only part-time.

What Prices Should Go Down?: Almost all prices on non-key mid-grade Silver Age comics seem over-priced. All 1950s Dells, including Duck titles, are too bloated. Silver Age DCs and Marvels have leveled off quite a bit and may need to come down in lower grades. The prices on lesser-known titles from the 1950s through the 70s seem too high. Humor comics from the 1940s and 50s do not come close to Guide prices and should have their prices reevaluated.

Marvel: Spider-Man 3, Ghost Rider and Fantastic Four 2 had virtually zero presence for in-store sales. Instead, Marvel's two main titles for this year were both non-Marvel properties (almost). Stephen King's Dark Tower was our most-ordered and best-selling series! People came in droves to get the first issue of this series and surprisingly came back every month for the next installment. And, as well as the series did in-store, it did better online, as prices for sets reached $5 to $8 per issue. Marvel's second best series was Army of Darkness Vs. Marvel Zombies, which starred a non-Marvel character (Ash) even though most bought it for the Marvel zombies. Although not as great a seller as Dark Tower, orders on this book exceeded many other titles and did quite well.

O.K., so a non-Marvel property dominated the Marvel line, at least by our standards. Because of this and because of the press that this title received, how long will it be until Marvel (and DC) begin their trek back into the licensing world? Marvel's got a pretty good head start, as there may be another Dark Tower series coming, as well as picking up the über-popular Halo line (which they published last year as a hardcover.) DC on the low end have the "horror" licenses (Freddy Krueger, Jason, Texas Chainsaw Massacre) but these properties have been more of a loss than a gain, as readers here are just kinda "ehh." Even the indies are getting more into licensed properties. IDW is one of the leaders with Angel, Transformers, and even Scarface. Dark Horse has one of the heavy hitters with Buffy the Vampire Slayer. Now of course the big buzz on this book was series creator Joss Whedon writing the book. It sold out the first issue in 3 printings with spiked up prices (#1 1st printing at $10, #2 1st printing at $7.) Will the book do just as well without Whedon's writing after issue #5? We'll just have to see. When will we see comics of Lost, Grey's Anatomy, Prison Break or even Heroes?... Wait, DC just got the license. Looks like someone's been paying attention.

© 20th Century Fox

Dark Horse had a heavy hitter in Buffy the Vampire Slayer, written by Joss Whedon. (#1 shown)

Even excluding the licensing phenomenon, Marvel sales have been steady, even climbing in certain titles. Most notably Captain America. The infamous issue #25, which no one really knew about (except for Wizard.) Prices soared... high! eBay had 1st printing sets (2 covers) from low $25 to $200+ within 24 hours of release. People showed up alright, mostly to buy multiples to sell on eBay themselves. Many stores dropped the ball on ordering this, but to be fair, no info was provided by Marvel (only hints on the retailer site saying "Retailers might want to consider ordering Civil War numbers"). Prices have steadied out at $15-$20 each.

DC: DC's biggest hit of the year, bar none was Green Lantern: Sinestro Corps. This one-shot sold 1-1/2 times Green Lantern numbers and has 3 printings. 1st prints sold for $15, and 2nd prints with the variant cover go for about the same. The story crossed into Green Lantern, Green Lantern Corps and even Blue Beetle (which should boost numbers). Unfortunately, unlike Marvel, DC's titles have been inconsistent in sales. For example, Superman/Batman was once a 100 copy seller for us, but has dropped 40%. When Flash was re-launched, sales dropped mainly due to horrible storylines, weak & trite characters, and mediocre art. It took Bart (The Flash) Allen's death and Mark Waid's return as writer to make people pick up this title.

By the way, when did DC become Image? They have the big talent (Frank Miller, Jim Lee, Richard Donner) but the titles they work on take sooooo long to come out. Example? As of this writing, All Star Batman came out twice this year, unlike last year with only one issue. It's been a year and a half... where's Wildcats #2? It's ironic... people asked this 10 years ago... same question. DC makes the late titles returnable, but I spend more money on return postage than I do on regular postage. To be fair though, Ultimate Hulk Vs. Wolverine is two years late. Why do Marvel & DC drop the publishing ball on the stuff people want, yet the dreck continues to come in on time?

Independents: One of the most anticipated titles coming from Dark Horse is Umbrella Academy. Written by Gerald Way from the band "My Chemical Romance," I guarantee people will be asking for this title. Way had produced a My Chemical Romance comic 3 years ago, and when it's offered, goes for $50-$100 and up. The Free Comic Book Day version of Umbrella Academy goes for $5-$10, and that's a preview book. Not to be outdone, the band Gorillaz has a graphic novel coming out in November 2007. Alternative band comics are picking up steam, but the same can't be said of old rock or rap. KISS 4K and Public Enemy are pretty bad and are passed over even by the most avid fan.

Overall, sales are steady, and rising slowly in certain genres. We are seeing newer collectors, and more importantly, newer readers everyday.

Just back from the Advisors' meeting. Many topics were discussed, but one vaulted to the top of the list: a need for The Guide's on-line presence. The hobby is demanding such access to The Guide's data, and various quality solutions are being considered. My market report primarily discusses the Golden Age (GA) and Bronze Age (BA) hobby segments.

Sales /Acquisitions: The last year or so has been very satisfying for me as a GA aficionado. Through eBay, I acquired a nice copy of Daredevil Battles Hitler #1 for 60% of Guide and a gorgeous copy of More Fun Comics #53 for 55% of Guide. And eBay was the stepping stone for my acquisition of a beautifully preserved original owner collection that spans 1936 – 1942. My eBay experience is far from unique, as many scarce books were auctioned via eBay this year (including Amazing-Man #22, Wow #1 and some ashcans). I also acquired the remaining books from Leonard Brown's collection. For those who didn't know Leonard, he was a true hobby pioneer and the herald for the successful comic book-based business. While he sold the bulk of his collection years ago, he held onto the cream until the end. I was glad to acquire these jewels.

Material Availability: Availability of top GA material could have been better. There were a lot of GA books for sale, but few, if any, were unrestored F/VF or better copies of Action Comics (through #40), pre-Robin Detective Comics (except for #15, 29, and 31), big logo More Fun Comics, or early issues of Captain America Comics and Marvel Mystery Comics. Similarly, Master Comics that feature Mac Raboy artwork were very difficult, if not impossible, to locate. Finally, many MLJ, Fiction House, Fox, and Centaur books (including Pep #20 – 34 and several issues of Jumbo and Science) rarely appeared, and when they did, they were typically beater copies. Books like All-Select #1, and Captain America Comics #1, however, were much more common, as were Human Torch #2 (#1), Green Lantern #1, Batman #1, Sub-Mariner #1, Wings #1, and most other issues from these titles. Thus, respective sale prices for this more common material were often well below Guide.

Market – Performance: I see a trend of growing interest in the hobby, evident by the number or auction bidders, the level of interest in the books I sold this year, and the growing number of newer collectors with whom I correspond. Sales of super high-grade copies of BA books like Silver Surfer #1 –18, Amazing Spider-Man #252 and Marvel Spotlight #5 were brisk, presumably because of this year's related Hollywood films. GA books with classic covers and WWII propaganda covers also did very well. And, competition over most other quality material confirms continuing hobby interest.

Market – Trends: Once again, the word that best describes the hobby is bifurcation. First, Guide values and respective sale prices for many key GA books continue to rise, as do sale prices for many so-called pedigree copies and pricier GA run books in top-grade. Economics, therefore, dictate a shrinking market for this material, as few have the disposable income to support such purchases. While this didn't affect respective sales (although some $50K+ books experienced resistance), it meant that two discrete markets continued to emerge – the market for museum-piece type books and the market for less lofty material, comprising 98% of the remaining books. And, while there is still a distinction between "non-museum" top-graded books (those that do not command thousands of dollars unless they are in top grade) and the rest, it is eroding. I see this as a market correction due to several factors: (a) people realizing that if there are multiple highest graded copies of a book, it isn't rare in the given grade; (b) a top-graded non-descript run book isn't necessarily worth 2X (or more) another copy that is slightly inferior, especially if the top-graded copy leaves sufficient room to be bested or its grade is its only distinguishing feature; and (c) the dispelled perception that virtually any GA book in VF or any BA book in NM+ is a rarity (obviously, there are exceptions).

Second, there is a continuing distinction between the unencapsulated book (raw) market and the market for books encapsulated by third-party grading services (slabs). Many people slab when they decide to sell either a book that is expensive irrespective of grade or an inexpensive book that commands real money because it is in super high-grade. In these instances, slabs often result in higher sale prices. Others, however, will not slab books as grading is not a science and an overly strict assigned grade could mean the loss of thousands of dollars upon resale. And others will not buy slabbed books for reasons that include: (a) a priority on owning a copy for its content rather than its grade; and (b) no immediate intention to resell. These differing positions illustrate the slab's strengths and limitations.

Another continuing trend is the shift in avenues through which to acquire quality material. Dealers used to be the portal to your collecting needs. Today, most quality material is available through eBay and the auction houses. In fact, the auction-style sale was so hot this year, people also increasingly opted to sell via auction, forcing dealers to compete with collectors for the material. These dynamics resulted in some dealers being light in quality material and being relegated to consignment services, allowing hobbyists to auction books on their websites in return for being paid a fraction of the hammer price as the consignment fee. I like the traditional sales model, but believe the auction-style sale represents evolution. It ensures the seller a wider audience and lower costs than other selling methods, and it ensures that the purchaser will pay only one increment over anyone else at that moment (versus an arbitrary fixed dealer price).

Yet another development (not yet enough data to call it a trend) is that very low-grade copies of some key GA and Silver Age (SA) books sold at, or over, respective Guide value. This defies the general rule that low and mid-grade books sell at under Guide and that high-grade books sell at, or over, Guide. Presumably, this development is a function of either: (a) collecting desires competing with prohibitive prices for higher grade copies; or (b) simple business acumen, as a low-grade copy doesn't necessarily offer less investment potential (on a percentage basis) than a mid-grade copy of a given book, yet the low-grade copy requires a much smaller monetary commitment and will likely appeal to a wider audience upon resale.

Market – Other Developments:

Intact Pressing – A year ago, some wanted pressing classified as restoration and claimed that it is harmful. Clearly, the market does not believe pressing to be restoration, as restored books do not sell at unrestored prices, yet books known to be pressed sell at unrestored market value for the attained grades. And harmful effects specific to pressing have yet to be reported. As such, improving a book's aesthetics via pressing seems perfectly acceptable.

Of all the Modern Age books submitted to CGC, Captain America #25 was one of the top.

Restored Books – While they categorically sell for prices well under Guide, hobbyists are realizing that a few dots of glue are not equivalent to more extensive treatments. The fall-out is a growing linear relationship (on a scaled basis) between degree of restoration and prices realized.

Based on the foregoing, 2007 can be summarized as a year of continued growth and appreciation. High-grade did well, as did some low-grade key GA and SA books. Market corrections continued for material that had previously achieved untenably high sale prices. Finally, many thanks to Karen and Ruben who introduced me to the Golden Age of comic books all those years ago, as collecting these treasures continues to be an enriching experience. Good luck hunting in 2008.

CGC

This is our second market report for The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide, and it will have the same tone and feel of the past one. This report is different from the others here because CGC does not buy or sell comic books. In fact, our full-time employees are prohibited from commercially trading comic books in order to ensure our impartiality. As a result, we really don't have a great sense of market values and pricing.

However, we do know something about the market from the books that are being submitted to us for certification. So, in our "market report," we can tell you what books are hot based on the past year's submissions. CGC submission numbers for a particular book are a great gauge of both collector and dealer interest because, to top our list, a book has to be submitted from both groups. That means collectors want to put copies away, and dealers are doing well selling high-grade certified copies. The other thing that our submission numbers can tell is what quality of books exists in the marketplace. These figures are regularly updated and available for free in our online census. Here, we'll take a close look at some of these numbers.

As of this writing, the top 2007 modern submissions are Captain America, World War Hulk titles, Wolverine: Origins, Aspen Splash: 2007 swimsuit spectacular, Ultimate Spider-Man, Justice League of America, Thor, and Batman. The top submissions of books from the 1980s and 1990s include: Amazing Spider-Man, Spider-Man, Wolverine Limited Series, Watchmen, Superman and Daredevil.

In 2006 we saw a surge of submission of comics from the 1970s, this continues in 2007 as well. The four that still stand out above the rest are Incredible Hulk #181, Amazing Spider-Man #129, X-Men #94 and Giant-Size X-Men #1. Submissions of books from the 1960s: Amazing Spider-Man is still king! Besides ASM, we receive healthy numbers of other mainstay Marvel titles, such as Fantastic Four, Journey Into Mystery/Thor, and Avengers. DCs are submitted quite often as well, but by looking at the CGC census, you can note that the ones from the early to mid 1960s are much harder to find in high grades than the Marvels from that time period.

For the 1950s, just like last year, EC comics are still submitted in the greatest numbers.

The top Golden Age titles by submission are still Batman, Superman, Detective, Action, and any Timely, though we are now seeing a "next generation" of Golden Age collectors focusing not only on those titles. Fawcetts are on the rise as well as many under rated titles from the 1940s such as Smash, Top-Notch, Archie, and other such titles. Duck books are back in fashion and we see more and more submitted every day.

The above lists show the most sought-after or actively traded comics. An analysis of CGC submissions of "hot titles" also reveals some alarming trends. It seems that the most popular books submitted for grading are also among the most frequently restored. People use CGC for our impartial grading, and also for our expert restoration check that is performed on each book during the certification process. When restoration is detected, we encapsulate the comic book with a purple restored CGC label, and clearly describe the restoration. From the many phone calls we get after comic books were given the purple restored CGC label, we can tell you that most submitters believed that their comic books were unrestored. The statistics are staggering and show how one must be careful buying any uncertified book. Regardless of how honest and well-intentioned they are, few sellers have the eyes for detection that we do.

One of the best examples that illustrates this phenomenon is the number of restored Amazing Fantasy #15s. As we write this, CGC has certified 584 unrestored Universal copies and 317 restored copies. (Universal is CGC's terminology for an unrestored, unqualified grade.) That means almost 1 out of every 3 copies submitted is restored, which is the same ratio as last year. The ratio of restored copies increases when you get to the top grades, where the book sells for "big money" (8.0 and higher) to some, this percentage will be scary! Out of 75 Amazing Fantasy #15s certified 8.0 and higher, there are 25 unrestored copies and 50 restored copies; 2 out of every 3 copies submitted have had some form of restoration. This is also the same ratio as last year.

Here are a few more statistics (not including the Qualified or Signature Series labels) that show how much restoration we are finding. We are using many of the same comic book examples as last year to show whether the ratio of restored comic books compared to unrestored is consistent or not. Just like last year, we think they may surprise many readers. Note that newer comics are on this list, as well as old:

Marvel Team-Up #1 (1972): Unrestored 292; Restored 36; more than 1 in 9 copies is restored. The ratio of restored copies has gone up from last year.

X-Men #94 (1975): Unrestored 2005; Restored 222; more than 1 in 10 copies is restored. Same ratio as last year.

Batman #9 (1942): Unrestored 46; Restored 18; more than 1 in 3 copies is restored. The ratio of restored copies has gone up from last year.

Amazing Spider-Man #13 (1964): Unrestored 400; Restored 72; more than 1 in 5 copies is restored. Same ratio as last year.

Amazing Spider-Man #300 (1988): Unrestored 4053; Restored 99; more than 1 in 40 copies is restored. The ratio of restored copies has gone up from last year.

Mystery in Space #53 (1959): Unrestored 41; Restored 9; about 1 in 4 copies is restored. Just a touch less than last year's ratio.

Fantastic Four #49 (1966): Unrestored 364; Restored 44; more than 1 in 9 copies restored. Same ratio as last year.

Superman #100 (1955): Unrestored 53; Restored 14; almost 1 in 5 copies restored. The ratio of restored copies has gone up from last year.

Some collectors don't expect to encounter restoration. The numbers above tell a different story. If you buy uncertified books, you're highly likely to come across a restored book. Will it be disclosed?

After all this scary news, just as we did last year, we should talk about the best part of this wonderful hobby: the friendships we make and the knowledge we gain from them. For many collectors this is centered around the CGC chat board. It has become, for many comic books enthusiasts, the hobby's "water cooler." This is where some of the most knowledgeable veteran collectors and sellers talk with each other, and where novice collectors go to learn more about the hobby. Many new friendships have been created on the chat boards, and the "CGC forum dinners" are the talk of conventions the day after they happen. We have had as many as 75 collectors, dealers, CGC employees, and special guests attend including: Bob Overstreet, Neal Adams, Jason Spyda Adams, Michelle Nolan, Rich Koslowski, Dave Sim, J.C. Vaughn, Paul Litch, Don Rosa, Maggie Thompson, Jim Starlin, Mark Haspel, Michael Bair, Lamont Larson, John Dolmayan, Frank Brunner, Stephen "Buzz" Sadowski, Tom Gordon, Richard Henn and Jim McLauchlin. We spend the evening eating a good meal, talking comics, then talking everything related to comics, and always, by the end of the evening, we just get to know each other.

From what we have heard, the market for comic books has been very strong. That is great for everyone! ComicLink even set a new record for our hobby, by breaking the $200,000 mark with a CGC'd 9.4 Amazing Fantasy #15 selling for $210,000! Geppi's Entertainment Museum has been gaining attendance and adulation every day and for those of you who have not been there, comic book fan or not, it is a must see. Steve Geppi has really gone out of his way building this museum to keep the future looking bright for our beloved hobby. Many blockbuster comic book movies are coming out more often and have been just great, such as, Fantastic Four: Rise of the Silver Surfer, Stardust (Gaiman/Vess llustrated novel), and 300. Every time one of these movies is announced, we get an abundance of submissions of those titles. Some of the writing and art in the newly published titles this year was outstanding! Some of the best this hobby has seen in years for kids and adults alike.

So, until our next year's Overstreet market report, HAPPY COLLECTING!

Kevin A. Boyd
Collector/Dealer & CGC Signature Series Director

This has been an interesting year, with plenty of personal and professional upheavals in my life. Shortly after I submitted by last report I had a life-threatening encounter with a shrimp! Aside from a bit of a wake-up call, it definitely helped put some things into perspective, including comics.

As I always point out at the start of each of my market reports, I am not a dealer, although I do dabble in eBay sales of original art and other items, and occasionally sell at local shows. I am an involved collector and fan, one who has been involved in different ways to promote comic books to new audiences. That promotion has included running and working on Toronto area conventions, working on the Joe Shuster Canadian Comic Book Creator Awards and going to a lot of different conventions across North America working for CGC as their Signature Series Director.

Toronto Conventions: The Toronto market is still a vibrant one for convention sales and attendance. This past year, 2007, saw four major comic book weekend events between April and August: Toronto ComiCon Fan Appreciation Show, The Paradise Toronto Comicon, the Toronto Comic Arts Festival and Fan Expo Canada.

I started out the year working for Paradise Conventions on their Fan Supershows and the big Toronto ComiCon event in June. After the completion of the June event it became evident that I could no longer continue working on the Paradise shows. Running a show of that size had became too much of a strain of time, health and effort to continue as is.

In July 2007, I was invited by HobbyStar Marketing to work on some of their comic book event programming at Fan Expo Canada (late August) and accepted. As I write this, it appears that this relationship is continuing as I am now working on some of their one-day events for October 2007, February 2008 and April 2008 – all of which will have happened by the time you read this report.

The only event I got to enjoy as a fan was the Toronto Comic Arts Festival, which was an exceptional time and one of the most exciting comic events I've attended in many years.

The Joe Shuster Awards: The awards were handed out at a special ceremony held on the same weekend as the Paradise Toronto Comicon. This was the third year of the awards and it has been amazing to watch as they have grown in importance and how the awards show itself has progressed. It is a long process, and we start working on the next year's awards almost right after we hand out our previous year's awards.

You would be amazed and surprised at the number of talented individuals working in comics who are Canadian. The purpose of the Joe Shuster Awards, named in honor of the Canadian born co-creator of Superman, is to raise the visibility of, and honor the accomplishments of Canadian creators, retailers and publishers. The winners this year included: Outstanding Canadian Comic Book Cartoonist (Writer/Artist) - Darwyn Cooke, The Spirit; Outstanding Canadian Comic Book Writer - Darwyn Cooke, Superman Confidential; Outstanding Canadian Comic Book Artist - Darwyn Cooke & J. Bone, Batman/The Spirit #1; and Outstanding International Comic Book - Brian K. Vaughan, Y the Last Man, Ex Machina, Pride of Baghdad, Runaways & Doctor Strange: The Oath. The four inductees into the Canadian Comic Book Creator Hall of Fame were: Albert Chartier, Gene Day, Jacques Hurtubise aka Zyx, and Gerald Lazarre

Congratulations to all the nominees and winners, and thanks to everyone who participated this year – from the nomination committees, to the administrative committee, to our sponsors (CGC, Lionshead, Paradise Conventions, Visions of Utopia, Diamond Comic Distributors, Sips Publishing and Quebecor World), to the amazing Canadian artists that contributed to our jam poster and Hall of Fame print, to lastly, show producer & writer Liana K.

CGC Signature Series: This was another record year for submissions to CGC's prestigious Signature Series service. We were proud to offer this service to fans and collectors and almost every major convention or comics related event in 2007 and hope to continue to do so in 2008.

The prestigious CGC Signature Series label (yellow) is applied to comic books that have been signed by someone of significance to the comic, under the direct observation of a CGC employee or select CGC authorized Witness. The signatures are then authenticated by CGC with the labels indicating who signed the book, the date it was signed, and in some cases, the location of where it was signed. The Signature Series service is the hobby's only 100% Authenticated Signature service.

In 2007 we added a new option, Restored Signature Series (a yellow label with a purple stripe) so that restored books can also be submitted for the Signature Series service. The degree of restoration and details of the work performed are noted on the label.

In 2007, I attended the following events for CGC: New York Comic-Con, WonderCon, Wizard World Los Angeles, the Pittsburgh Comicon, the Motor City Comic-Con, Wizard World Philadelphia, San Diego Comic-Con, Wizard World Chicago, the Baltimore Comic-Con, FallCon, the National and the Mid-Ohio Con. The remaining cons: MegaCon, Emerald City ComiCon and Wizard World Dallas were covered by other CGC employees.

I can say, without a doubt, that the most popular creator for Signature Series remains the previous year's champ: Michael Turner. Other creators in high demand for Signature Series in 2007 were: Steve McNiven, Mark Millar, Greg Pak, Ed Brubaker, Joe Quesada, Todd McFarlane, Jim Lee, John Cassaday, Stan Lee, the Romitas (Sr. and Jr.), the Kuberts (Joe, Adam, Andy) and David Finch. Grant Morrison, Neil Gaiman and Joss Whedon would be in there as well if they did more public appearances! Civil War remains the Signature Series title of 2007. Other titles that were popular submissions in 2007 were World War Hulk, Thor, and Buffy the Vampire Slayer: Season Eight. If you have any questions about Signature Series, you can e-mail us directly at signature@cgccomics.com.

General Observations: There are way too many comic book conventions! Seriously, as much as I love comic book conventions, there are simply way too many of these in a given year, and the 2008 schedule is downright scary. Between April and June there's almost a con every weekend. I fear for the survival of some of these smaller cons in a season where the monster conventions dominate. While I'm certain there is a sustainable minimum amount of attendance required to maintain them, are there enough consumer dollars out there to continue supporting all of these dealers and creators? We are not a large market, and I fear we won't, though I may be proven wrong.

Shows seem to gravitate in different directions – art collectors have their favorites, back issue collectors have theirs, and everyone else falls somewhere in between.

Marvel Comics: Civil War fed right into the Initiative and the Death of Captain America, which led into World War Hulk and the discovery that certain heroes had been replaced by Skrulls. Another intriguing year for the House of Ideas. Certainly my personal favourites were Brubaker's Captain

America and Daredevil. There are way too many "throw them at the wall and see if they will stick" theme books – magic, monsters, etc.

Marvel continues to do an excellent job with keeping their older material out there in many different formats such as Masterworks, Omnibuses and Essentials.

DC Comics: 52 and Countdown proved that the weekly comic can exist and thrive. I fear that DC's momentum post-Infinite Crisis and One Year Later is still in decline. Final Crisis is not igniting a lot of interest among the people that I talk to, however we are still months away from getting a sense of it. The Sinestro Corps War, however, was very well received and has done well for many stores. Justice League and Justice Society continue to do very well, and despite some artistic setbacks, the Batman and Superman titles still do well. Bringing Eric Powell onto Action Comics was an inspired choice and will lead right into Gary Frank's debut on the title. My personal favorite DC titles include: Darwyn Cooke's amazing interpretation of Will Eisner's The Spirit, All Star Superman, Y: the Last Man, Fables and Ex Machina.

As with Marvel, there seems to be a lot of "throw them at the wall and see if they will stick" comics being published by DC, and they take attention and dollars away from other titles.

Image Comics: The home of my three favorite series: Invincible, The Walking Dead and the Astounding Wolf-Man. I love Kirkman! As well, titles like After the Cape, Mice Templar and Casanova continue to push the boundaries.

Dark Horse Comics: Buffy was a huge hit in 2007, bigger than I would have thought. Dark Horse continues to do well with their other properties such as Star Wars and Conan. Fear Agent, The Umbrella Academy and Hellboy are all great comics and deserve looking into.

Other: As with my retailer friends, the other part of the catalogue is a rather scary place to look from time to time. There is a lot of product out there and it is not easy to discern good from okay. David Petersen's Mouse Guard is a great book, in any format. As was Strangers in Paradise, although it finished up in the spring of 2007. Dynamite, Drawn & Quarterly, Fantagraphics… I've sampled many different titles and graphic novels from these companies, and I highly recommend Joe Matt's Spent (D+Q) and the Popeye: I Yam What I Yam collection (Fantagraphics).

General: With the quick reprinting of most modern comics, recent back issues are becoming less saleable. The only items that seem to hold longer interest are variants, and my concerns about the plethora of variant editions have been addressed in previous reports.

Overall, I see a lot of interest in comic books and comic book properties, and we need to make sure that we are able to address the needs of new collectors and fans that these properties are bringing to comics and graphic novels. The audience is shifting and we need to be prepared to cater to their needs as well as maintain our existing collector/reader base. Not an easy task.

Big events have meant big bucks for comic companies and comic sellers in my area of West Virginia, Kentucky, southeastern Virginia and east Tennessee.

Tie-ins have sold for premiums this year, including She-Hulk #8, which tied into Marvel's Civil War event. What If? #51 from 1993, which was an imaginary story where the Punisher became Captain America, mirrored what was really happening with the Punisher after Cap died. She-Hulk #8 stayed strong at $20 for most of the year. What If? #51 went as high as $50 at some shops and settled around $20 after all the hype wore off.

I traveled around to several comics shops in West Virginia, Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee and South Carolina and saw last issues in high demand. One shop had many Marvel last issues, such as X-Factor #149 and Excalibur #125 for $20 each. One shop even had the last issue of the Flash, issue #230, from the Wally West series, selling for $10! Jonah Hex #92 was selling in two stores for $20 each, while Flash #350 was going for $20 in one. Flash #323 in NM has to be one of the most elusive comics I've ever searched for and I still haven't found a copy. There have only been four copies graded by CGC and those are a single 9.4, a lone 9.2 and two 9.0s. That black cover, which deserves the classic designation in my opinion, is easily smudged and fingerprints can be seen on every copy I've found. Of course, the whole "Trial of the Flash" storyline, which began an issue earlier in Flash #322, with the return of the Reverse Flash, is tough to find in really high grade. Trust me, I know, because I've been trying to put together a high grade set for years.

I think 1980s comics are to current collectors what 1970s and 1960s comics were to me many years ago: hot, hot, hot. I see fewer and fewer stores with 1980s issues in their back issue bins. Byrne Fantastic Four, Paul Smith X-Men, Gene Day Master of Kung Fu are all in high demand here. Those last few issues of Ghost Rider, with the Bob Budiansky art, are seldom, if ever, found in high grade in any of the shops I visit each year. One shop in Pikeville, KY always has an amazing backstock and there are numerous 1980s comics that I can't find even there!

There were a lot of big events in the 1980s, including Dark Knight, Watchmen and Batman: The Killing Joke, not forgetting Man of Steel and the revitalization of Superman. Ronin #6 has been elusive all year. Those later *What If*s are tough to find, too. Sets of the Shan-Lon comics that came with cassette tapes were selling for high dollars. A set of the Captain America Shan-Lons sold for $78, while a set of the *Spider-Man*s sold for more than $100. Others that Shan-Lon produced were the Untold Legend of the Batman mini-series and three Archie Comics with cassettes. These are almost as hot as the SoMuchFun! variants that I discovered and wrote about a few years back.

A set of the Marvel Comics movie comic, Labyrinth, sold for $102! A last issue, Transformers #80 sold for $50 and G.I. Joe, A Real American Hero #155 from Marvel (also the last issue) sold for $150. These books all had low print runs and are highly collectible today, especially with the Transformers movie being so hot and a G.I. Joe movie in the works.

But, it's the 1990s that have surprised me. What's the deal with Cosmic Powers being a hot comic? The last issue of Silver Surfer I know was underordered, but I never expected it to be a $20 book. It is, though. On eBay, sets of Indiana Jones and the Spear of Destiny were selling for $70 each.

The last few issues of Conan the Barbarian and the miniseries that Marvel produced into 2000 are all hot and some of those are really tough to find. Most Marvels from 1999 to 2001 are tough to locate because of Marvel's no over-print policy. That meant many comics were made to order and only those who were actually reading and collecting the series were buying them. Nowadays, when someone wants to fill a hole in his Deadpool collection, finding some of those, like #54 & #55 (the Punisher crossover,) you've got to pay a premium.

In South Carolina, I saw Grant Morrison's New X-Men and Michael Allred's X-Force getting double cover for issues I thought were fairly common. The newstand edition of X-Force #116 sells for $10. What If #44 with the Venom Punisher has been selling for upwards of $10.

Tie-ins to Civil War were hot and sold out immediately. (New Avengers: Illuminati #1 shown)

What's going on with these 1990s titles being so hot? A Superman #75 Platinum in 9.8 sold for more than $1,000 this year. One dealer was asking $1,200 for a Killing Joke in 10.0. Are these comics worth that? The Superman #75 was worth it to the collector who bought that copy.

Last issues of Guy Gardner, Teen Titans, New Gods, Justice League America and Mister Miracle were all selling for around $10 each. Justice League America #113 is especially hard to find here in the West Virginia-Kentucky-Virginia-Tennessee region. I've yet to find a single copy at any of the stores I checked.

The last issue of Savage Sword of Conan was impossible to find in the stores here and on many online shops. This one must have had a very low print run, just like Conan the Barbarian #275. Another last issue, Ghost Rider #93, is a $25 comic.

Many hard-to-find trade paperbacks and hardcovers have been reaching record prices. It almost reminds me of when the Miracleman trades and hardcovers were so hot. Deadpool: Mission Improbable is impossible to find for cheap. The Conan Essential is tough to find and expensive when you do locate one. The Wonder Woman: The Challenge of Artemis trade paperback sold for $36 on eBay. And a Fatale: Inherit the Earth trade sold for $50. Buffy the Vampire Slayer: Tales of the Slayer sells anywhere from $20-$40 a copy. Trade paperbacks used to be throwaway comics and now collectors are starting to realize that, hey, these are comics, too.

Some of the hardcovers Marvel released early in this decade are tough to find, such as the Bruce Jones' Incredible Hulk Vol. 2 and Grant Morrison's New X-Men Vol. 2-3. I very rarely see the Ultimate Spider-Man Collection hardcover released by Barnes and Noble. It was as big as those really great omnibuses Marvel's putting out now.

The Cable and Deadpool trade paperbacks were hitting some high prices until Marvel released a load of first prints onto the market which brought the prices down considerably. The Punisher: Army of One trade paperback sold for more than $20 every time I saw it up for sale. The House of M Prelude Excalibur trade paperback is tough to find and sells for $26.

People were looking for the Man of Steel raffle edition, which is one of the rarest Superman collectibles ever published. This edition was given away to raffle winners and select retailers and is extremely hard to find. To my knowledge, only about 20 copies have surfaced and very few of those have the congratulatory letters that came with them when they were mailed out. The Blind Justice Diamond Comic Distributors Seminar trade paperback from the early 1990s has been very elusive this year, too. One copy sold for $100 and it was only in Fine condition.

As far as current comics go, Mouse Guard has been hot all year, with NM copies of issue 1 selling for nearly $100. The Comics XPress copy of No. 1 has sold for $250 and one seller with a slabbed copy was asking $1,300.

Any Civil War, Planet Hulk and World War Hulk tie-in was hot and shops sold out immediately of the Green Lantern: Sinestro Corps Special. That one went to a second printing a day or two after the first printing was released and sold out and many retailers in my area weren't even able to get second printings, because they, too, were sold out at Diamond. One shop had the Sinestro Corps Special on its "hot" wall for $20 with appearances in Green Lantern selling for $10 each.

The variant editions for Steven King's The Dark Tower: A Gunslinger Born were hot here with copies of the Jae Lee sketch edition selling for $95. A week after the first issue was released, one shop here was selling first prints of the first issue for $9 each.

Valiants sales are getting healthier and healthier as time goes on. People who read these great comics in the early- to mid-1990s are rediscovering them all over again and prices on the pre-Unity Valiants are rising once again. The last issues have stayed hot for the past few years and continue to be in high demand. A last issue of Shadowman V3 and the last issue of Armorines V2 sells for upwards of $30 each. At one time, I was finding these in quarter boxes and now they're nowhere to be found! The Harbinger Blue Bird trade paperback still sells for $25 and the Magnus Robot Fighter Steel Nation trade paperback is all but impossible to find. A Magnus Robot Fighter #0 with the card sold on eBay for $49. A Shadowman V3 No. 1 Special Edition sold on eBay for $153 and a Shadowman #0 Gold sold for $26. A Harbinger #0 pink edition sold for $71 and another copy sold for $65.

Miracleman still has a solid following. The Olympus trade paperback still sells for $150 in nice shape. A complete set of Miraclemans sold for $630, while an Olympus hardcover sold for $338. I still haven't seen a Miracleman 3D 2D edition sold anywhere online or in shops. Miracleman stuff very rarely comes into the shops I frequent, but, when it does, they almost always blow off the shelves and out of boxes within a couple of days.

Nice variant covers on Justice League of America #1 made extra dough for comic shops.

In Huntington, W.Va., older back issues were hot. The shop there, which has been in business since the 1970s and is one of the best shops in the eastern United States in my opinion, had a showcase full of really nice Silver Age comics for sale and thousands of back issues that were all priced to move. The shop stays busy year round and there's regularly back issue collectors flipping through the long boxes looking for those issues they need to fill in their collections.

The shop in Pikeville, KY sells a lot of hot comics and a good number of back issues. The wall was always filled with the hot comics of the week and many people were paying premiums for the issues they'd missed. The shop there also sold a lot of comic-related toys.

Variants sold well in Charleston, W.Va. New Avengers, Dark Tower, Justice League of America, Red Sonja and the Lone Ranger were some of the comics that had nice variants that made a lot of extra dough for the shop there.

In Myrtle Beach, Civil War and last issues reigned supreme.

In east Tennessee, Bronze and Copper Age keys were big sellers.

In Wise, VA, Silver Age keys and the occasional Golden Age comic that came into the shop sold well, as did variants and hot books like Civil War and Planet Hulk.

DC Comics' weekly series 52 sold well in every shop I visited, but back issues of 52 in many of the stores were found in the dollar boxes only a few weeks after their release.

Many comics collectors are branching off into original art. I've only been collecting original covers and pages for a decade now and I've seen pieces sell for hundreds of dollars, then, a year later, sell for thousands, so I know firsthand that the original art community is growing. Original art is one of a kind, so it becomes very personal when a collector puts a piece into his collection. Many of us original art collectors have “grails” that we are searching for and the chase can be as fun as acquiring those pieces we believe we just can't live without.

Now is definitely the time to get in on the original art market because prices are still at an affordable level and there is so much great art out there for sale.

Paradise Comics

2007 was an amazing year for Paradise Comics because our sales were through the roof; our in-store business grew by 8% while our internet sales were up close to 15%. I predict that sales will continue to grow in 2008 and the release of Iron Man can only increase interest in the hobby.

The greatest area of growth in-store came from our sales of graphic novels; this format is definitely the direction the hobby is going and I hope the major companies take notice. I had more regular customers change their collecting habits from picking up the regular monthly issues to graphic novels that I had to do a major renovation in order to make room for more stock.

Key issues from the Silver and Bronze Age are still selling incredibly well and don’t seem to be slowing down at all. I simply can’t keep up with the demand for high-grade Silver and Bronze Age books – from Action to X-Men, people want them in the highest grades and as fast as possible. I would need a full-time employee just to keep up with the want lists. The usual suspects are always involved: Amazing Fantasy #15, Fantastic Four #1, Daredevil #1, Giant-Size X-Men #1, Incredible Hulk #181, and X-Men #94, but I’m also seeing some new ones, Fantastic Four #48, Tales of Suspense #39, Batman #232 & 234 and Marvel Premiere #2 are just a few examples.

Golden Age sales are still very sluggish and, with so many collectors only pursuing Timely issues and high-grade Silver Age, sales have been exceptionally slow. There is always a market for Golden Age Hero comics, but never at Guide, and usually well below. I really can’t see this trend changing in the near future.

Silver Age sales are definitely continuing to grow, and high-grade copies are continuing to sell as fast as I can get them in. For DC Silver Age, Hero and Horror comics have seen the greatest growth in sales, especially the horror tandem of House of Mystery and House of Secrets, while Romance has slowed right down. It could just be the affordability but DC bin stock sells way more in volume than its Marvel counterpart.

Marvel Silver Age is selling very well, with Amazing Spider-Man and X-Men leading the way, and demand for Captain America and Iron Man increasing. The Marvel Silver Age market is always strong and doesn't look to be slowing down anytime soon.

Bronze Age comic sales are through the roof in high grade, and demand for mid-grade copies have increased as well. Marvel leads the way in this category because of Byrne X-Men (#108-143) and all Amazing Spider-Man issues between #100 and #200. These issues are on almost everyone's list and, if I had an entire box of each, they would be gone within a week. I have also noticed an increase in demand for Marvel Horror comics; Tomb of Dracula and Werewolf by Night lead the pack followed by Ghost Rider and Monster of Frankenstein.

Modern books still have a following and a new market of younger readers is coming into the shop looking for titles that they can pick up and enjoy without knowing any of the history of the characters. New Avengers, JLA, and the entire Ultimate line fill this niche. Astonishing X-Men is consistently our best selling X-book, selling double what the original title sells. Ultimate Spider-Man now sells equal numbers to Amazing Spider-Man in our shop.

Mid-2007 seemed to spell the end of the variant craze. Whether it was 10 to 1 or 75 to 1, the demand was down and we started selling them at a discounted rate.

CGC continues to be the standard in grading and we are continually submitting more and more books to their great service every year. I would like to mention that CGC is the exclusive grading company for Paradise Comics and Paradise Conventions.

Some recent CGC sales include:
All Star Comics #22 CGC 6.5 Classic Flag Cover $600
Amazing Spider-Man #129 CGC 9.4 1st Punisher $914
Batman #234 CGC 9.6 1st Silver Age Two-Face $1,199.99
Tales Of Suspense #39 CGC 4.5 Origin & 1st Iron Man $1,224.99
Fantastic Comics #1 CGC 1.5 $479.99
CGC Signature Series Captain America #25 9.8 Ww La 2007 $218.50
CGC Signature Series Cerebus #1 3.0 $396.77
CGC Signature Series Cerebus #5 9.8 Dave Sim File Copy $228.50
CGC Signature Series Cerebus #55 9.8 Dave Sim File Copy $224.50

As mentioned above, our on-line sales were dynamite and continued to grow all year, our eBay store has been a wonderful addition to business and simply put, you must get one. Customers really like the buy-it-now option of the store, and I like the simplicity of the set-up and listing services. As a result, our sales continued to grow all throughout 2007. Our new website will hopefully continue our on-line sales growth in 2008.

I can't fail to mention our 5th annual Paradise Toronto Comicon, held June 8 – June 10 2007. We would like to thank our guests, dealers, volunteers and the over 5,800 attendees at the 2007 Paradise Toronto Comicon at the National Trade Centre in Toronto. Highlights of the event included the return of Golden Age great Jerry Robinson to Toronto, and the appearance of Terry Moore as a guest of honour with his Strangers in Paradise Farewell Tour.

Come join us for our 6th year and let's make it more successful then ever. For more information visit www.torontocomicon.com

2007… 'The Beat Goes On'!... First of all, I'm happy to say that I've been attending more conventions than I have in past years… and the crowds do look like they're getting younger (as well as the 're-tread' folks, 'natch'); and I say, "Welcome aboard!"

I've bought some interesting & varied collections and dealers' stocks since my last Price Guide write-up… and I have done well-enough with all of them essentially. One collection from Wisconsin (I paid about $50,000) had over 10,000 comics from the 1940s thru the 1970s – very little Marvels unfortunately, but a lot of DCs, plus some interesting miscellaneous oldies (Charlton, Fiction House, Fawcett, A.C.G., etc.), which I like (as well as the 'mainline' 1940s DCs and Timelys, of course.) One other comic dealer who knew of this collection said to me, "Why do you even want these? Who cares about these books?" Well, I cared, and still care; so I bought the collection, and let him buy from me (at a fair markup for G.D.C.); essentially, they bought from me 'the best'- and I put into inventory, 'the rest'!

I've done well with that collection, as I get want lists from fellow dealers as well as collectors (although I have over 800,000 comic books and magazines: over 50,000 '50s/'60s; over 200,000 '70s; plus a few thousand '40s, only about 1/3 of them are in order, so new inventory, always helps to 'fill-in the gaps.)

Another collection I did quite well with was a $95,000 collection out of Tennessee. It contained runs of DCs from the mid '50s thru about 1972, and Marvels from #1-up for Avengers, Daredevil, Fantastic Four, X-Men, etc. I sold them as sets to happy buyers (who are quite familiar and happy with my grading).

March of 2007, I spent tens of thousands on a nice collection of Golden Age Superman, Batman and early Human Torch – plus a stack of ECs, Hulk #1, #181 and others. I kept the early *Torch*es for me. [Note: I always will pay more for oldies that will end up being my "keepsies."] Then, a couple of weeks later, (after a sunny vacation in Florida with my beloved) I flew home and picked up a large value of bank teller's checks… and then the very next morning flew back down to (another part of) Florida to buy the books!

This poor lady had given some valuable comics (Amazing Spider-Man #1, '60s, etc) to some auctioneer who had no real comic-selling experience and knowledge. After 4 months, she couldn't seem to get them back from him! She had also sold some other books to some "primitive dealer" who had only paid her $250 for an Incredible Hulk #1 and so forth (he "cherry-picked" her of some prime-oldies and then "paid her dirt" in so many words, according to the seller.) Well, I looked over the collection for several hours and then offered and paid her a very fair price of $55,000 for the collection. The conclusion here: When selling your collection, make sure that the seller is a comic book specialist and will offer you an honest price for your goods and not try to take advantage of you, the seller. (I – G.D. – must immodestly say that I offer a fair price… whether you know your stuff on comic books or not – and whether you're a millionaire, middle-class… or a pauper!)

In other books, I got a kick out of buying a big batch of pulps (mostly '40s, early '50s, with some '30s) that contained sometimes 5 to 20 of a single pulp. This eclectic batch also included a 1954 Playboy #2 (quite rare!,) some 1940s "Strength & Health" magazines, etc… a real warehouse find, I'd say (although I hunger to buy the more expensive, more exotic Pulp collections as well: Operator 5, The Spider, The Shadow, Terror Tales, Wu Fang, Thrill Book, etc.) "Pulps are boss!"

I was also quite happy to obtain Action Comics #7 (2nd Superman cover) and I happily paid 90% of Guide for that one, plus a near complete run of Wonder Woman #2-200. I also bought a collection of Western titles (with another "dealer-fellow" that I get along with)- which included the 1938-1939 Lone Ranger Ice Cream Giveaway comic!

The following is a brief summary, of how I find various categories of comics to be selling:

Golden Age (1930s – early '50s): They're still, basically… "the best!" For most Timely (Captain America, Human Torch, Marvel Mystery, Sub-Mariner, etc.) I can safely pay 75% to 100% of Guide in all grades knowing that I can get at least Guide, often more!

DC Golden Age is quite solid, with the very early (pre - 1940) appearances of Superman and Batman, often going for over Guide. I find the market is very strong for low-grade DCs, as well as Fair/Poor to Good. And, of course, higher-grade (Fine to Mint) "Goldies" are always welcome!

MLJ, Fox, Centaur, Fiction House, etc. – all move well, although some miscellaneous mid to late '40s must now be sold a bit under Guide.

CGC'd Golden Age, unless it's a particularly "hot" book, don't seem to be nearly as well received at full Guide and often must be slightly discounted. By comparison, 1960s Marvels are generally the best-selling CGC books, especially early '60s Spider-Man, Fantastic Four, X-Men, Hulk #1-6, etc., in almost any grade. Also popular are any Silver Age Marvel Superhero in 9.4 or better. In these grades, they of course go well over Guide.

Non-Superhero Golden Age from the late '30s and early '40s sells well. I get strictly-graded Guide prices for them, every time. I love getting large collections of these, and ogling the covers, before keeping a few.

Funny Animal Dells have always been the bleakest of sellers, but just recently, sales on these (much to my surprise) have been picking up. I recently sold a 're-saler' 100 of 1950s-'61 10¢-cover Disneys for $3 each.

Sci-Fi, Crime, and Misc. sell well enough, and I'm surprised that they don't sell better, as of now. Those crime covers are often "real gripping and cool."

Silver Age (1960s-1971, later 10¢ cover thru 15¢-cover, plus 25¢-cover Giants):

Marvel Comics: Early Marvels are the "Gold Standard" here, in all grades (especially early *Fantastic Four*s and Amazing Spider-Mans). I can get Guide for most of 'em, (pretty much) with a snap of my fingers. Mid/late '60s Marvels also sell solidly. In general, I love buying Marvel collections (1960s in general as well but especially Marvel stuff.) Over the last year, I have sold at "Guide by my grading" runs (sold as sets) of Amazing Spider-Man #1-100, Daredevil #1-200, Fantastic Four #1-100, X-Men #1-66… even Strange Tales #101-168! *Sgt. Fury*s, unfortunately, still move very slowly, except for the elusive #1. I enjoy the title, but "whaddaya gonna do!" like they'd say in N.Y.C.

DC Comics: With the exception of Batman, 1960s DCs generally don't sell as well as their Marvel counterparts, though they're "O.K enough" that I like to buy 'em.

Bronze Age (1970's; 20¢ to 40¢ 'cover price'): I find that sales are picking up on these from time-to-time, and the variety of them that we have at our humble warehouse, is definitely appreciated. One fellow dealer asked for 3 each of a large variety of '70s comics (he had a "list of wants"). The guy ended up getting over 10,000 comics! That's more than 3,000 different '70s, folks. Some of my favorite '70s sellers are Batman, Tomb of Dracula, Amazing Spider-Man #150 & earlier, X-Men #142 and earlier, plus mainline titles of 20¢-cover price. Folks also like my "batches of bargain '70s" at 75¢-$1.00 each.

Magazines '60s-'70s (Comic book related): Yes, folks are "diggin' them, for sure!" I have over 600 boxes of this cool stuff (Marvel, Warren, Misc., Horror, etc.) and I'm here to say that, "I'm starting to release 'em at last!" Magazines, which have been pretty much ignored, are now being snatched-up by dealers and collectors alike. They are selling almost as fast as I can "price n' process" them. Basically, I divide them up by wholesale prices - $1, $2, $3, $5, & over $5. In Chicago, I sold approximately 38% of the wholesale magazine boxes that I brought there. If I have books at San Diego Comic Convention this summer, I might ship a few dozen out there. Folks also love seeing early *Creepy*s and *Eerie*s, Foom magazines, Mads, Horror Tales, *Epic*s, *Savage Sword*s, Dracula Lives, etc.

Modern Age (1980s-Present): These, generally are my least compelling sellers, though McFarlane's *Amazing Spider-Man*s and early *Wolverine*s (the Miller '82 mini-series) have recently gotten more popular. I don't know if it's a fluke, but I recently sold a CGC 9.4 Wolverine '82 #1 for $127! Most of the time, I wholesale them to everybody for 50¢ each or less in bigger batches, and I'm happy to get 25% to 1/3 of NM Guide for the most popular Marvel and DC titles. Sometimes, sellers with a lot of "1980s and up" comics are quite disappointed when they're offered 25¢ or less for those books from the last 25 years or so… but I always say, "Age is Absolute!" Give me a bunch of "rag-tag" '50s & '60s anyday over a collection of shiny '90s books!

The 6-Point Price Spread in the Guide: I think it inadvertently creates confusion for sellers "not in the know." I am one of the biggest fans of the Guide (I'll say that Bob O. genuinely cares about the comic book market greatly, and we in comicdom are very lucky to have him in our industry. He's very fair and competent, I'd say.) However, his "6-price spread" of recent years (GD, VG, FN, VF, VF/NM, NM-) seriously needs a large disclaimer that says something like: "Please note, sellers and buyers, that the top 3 grades (VF, VF/NM, NM-) are very close in appearance. Unless a book looks "practically new" to the untrained eye, it's most likely GD or VG (the lowest two prices, on the far left of each price column) as are about 80-90% of 1930s to 1960s comics." Bob Overstreet, to my mind, should make the above blurb a full-page one, perhaps on the page before the main prices begin. It would greatly enhance the knowledge of "rookie" buyers and sellers, making it easier and more equitable for everyone.

So, that's all for now. Have a happy and healthy "Comic book year!"

Gold Coast Comics

G'Day from the Gold Coast, Australia.

My wife and I moved to Australia in September 2005 and I instantly started looking for comic books. Comic books in Australia are very hard to find, the main problem being the condition. Most Australian comics are printed on non-gloss paper unlike most American comic books. This makes them deteriorate faster.

I found that by putting ads nationwide that I am starting to receive some offers on comic books. Most of the comics that I have found here are of the Humour variety with a smattering of Captain Atom and The Phantom. I have been able to find some American comics with the occasional Marvel or DC from the '60s and a few Classics Illustrated. All in all, sales were good in the Science Fiction and Horror genres with Atlas Horror and Sci-Fi and EC comics being at the top. I was surprised to find people calling me for CGC graded American Silver Age comics in 9.2 or better. If anyone has some, please send them to me.

Silver Surfer issues are popular in Australia too. (#5 shown)

Seriously though, life in Australia is just like America in many respects. You get the same TV programs, sports and conveniences. It's not all outback, you know. It is hard to drive on the left side of the road and go through roundabouts, but I love surfing and living in the Orlando of Australia on the Gold Coast.

Here is a short history of Australian comic books: The first Australian comic book published was The Kookaburra in 1931. Australian comics were not a significant industry until after the government put a ban on American publications in 1940. Despite paper shortages, the industry flourished until 1950. In 1950 the Australian publications were affected by censorship and the introduction of television, and then the return of American comics to Australia in 1959. The most popular Australian comic books are The Phantom and Captain Atom. One of the top comic book publishers, Frank Johnson Publications, started in July 1941 and was releasing four titles a month. Unlike American comic books, the Australian comics were not numbered consecutively. They were one shot titles because of war restrictions. The first of the Frank Johnson comics, Amazing Comics came out in 1941 and consisted of adventure stories. My favourite comic book from this period and probably the best drawn is Silver Starr. It was drawn by Stanley Pitt, who also drew a version of Tarzan called Yarmak.

Australian comic books covered all genres and walks of life from Western to Romance. Some artwork and stories from Australian comics made it to America. Felix by Pat Sullivan and Kazanda were reprinted in 1940s issues of Rangers Comics.

Other than The Phantom, the best selling Australian comic was Captain Atom, which was published between 1948 and 1954 by Atlas Publications. This title sold 180,000 copies every month and was the only Australian superhero apart from the Phantom that sold well. Humour and Westerns sold better than any other comic in that era.

In conclusion, most Australian comic books were successful because they mixed local humour and the Australian way of life into their stories, thus making them quite a different read from their American counterparts. The most popular back issues in Australia are Phantom, Spider-Man, Silver Surfer, Superman and Batman. I would like to thank Mick Stone of Camberwell Books & Collectables for all his help and advice on this information.

Sales this year included Phantom #10 for $800(AU), Silver Surfer #1 in Fine condition for $200(AU) and Popeye Thimble Theatre #1 for $700(AU).

I am looking forward to a great year in 2007/2008.

Pendragon Comics

What a MARVELous year! If "Civil War" didn't bring old heroes and villains to life, as well as a refreshing apocalyptic storyline, "World War Hulk" did. Who does not like the Hulk? WWH is 4+ decades in the making. Way back in the 1960s, General Ross warned everyone about the Hulk. Ross did everything in his power to bring Hulk down, dirty and fair, using the US military machine at his disposal. Most readers thought, "what a bad dude" and "how dare someone with such authority abuse it for his own end(hatred)"? Well so far it appears Ross was right all along, though for the wrong reasons. I think only Betty can stop Hulk now(but she's dead!). By the time you read this, we should know the ending, and this rant has no bearing. But it does represent the excitement Marvel has caused in comic stores everywhere. My only beef about Civil War and WWH is The Sentry. Does anyone like this character? I certainly do not, nor do my customers. I will dislike any conclusion with him involved. I had hoped Thor would show up in Civil War's conclusion, but alas, it was not to be. Instead, Cap gives up for everyone's sake. Marvel then supposedly kills Cap off in an unexpected issue of Captain America #25. That had a lot of real press. So much that it reminded me of Superman's death in early 1990s(nowhere near that news, but still noticed). I do not think he died. Perhaps Cap was impersonated to deceive The Red Skull or others? A clone created by Reed(remember the cloned Thor in Civil War #3.) Perhaps Nick did a switcheroo(though he said nothing to Winter Soldier). I hope it is something smart and twisted to keep readers puzzled for some time. As a note, expect Nick Fury to save the day at some point. That soldier is as old as Cap, but very wily with plenty of connections and allies to pull anything off! I hazard to guess that you will see Steve show up near WWH's end, or at least within 1-2 years.

Other nice surprises? The crossover Annihilation, anything with Winter Soldier(Bucky?), the company Zenescope (Grimm's Fairy Tales.) What to watch for in 2008? The "Green Lantern - Sinestro Corps" duel may have ended, but even if it did by this review's printing, I'm sure we will see repercussions. Superboy Prime being loose and Ion-Parallax with him is scary for the DC universe. Expect the last Crisis to occur from this (it already is if Superboy-Prime is loose!) I love seeing DC bringing old great villains from yesteryear. Sinestro is the all-time great baddie for GL/Hal. It should be exciting. Here's hoping Barry finally makes it back to save the day, once and for all (though I expect DC would maintain his death in saving the universe once again like in 1986.) Hope Pérez does it all as that fantastic pencilling is awesome! Last note.... JSA #10. The beginning of "Thy Kingdom Come" by Alex Ross(covers) and Geoff Johns (main writer.) Sequel to Kingdom Come, this should be awesome. Kudos to DC. You all should realize DC could have made a prestige $6-$9 formatted maxi-series, even without Ross, and it would have sold huge. Instead, a reasonable $3 per issue. To non-DC buyers, buy the trade and the 2 prequel trades as well. This being said before JSA #10's release, the original Kingdom Come is always in print, great art and story. So buy it! You will not be disappointed.

Trades, Graphic Novels and Hardcovers: I am seeing more independent trades, and for that I'm glad. Indies are a tougher sell on the classic Marvel/DC older collector. But when they put their wares into a tidy package, with no issues missing, no delays in publishing, and at a fair price, they will grab it. The best indie seller for me would be Grimm's Fairy Tales Vol 1, and soon to be Vol 2. Boom! Studios is doing better as well. Marvel still, and always will, lag behind DC (king of trades!). Every year, week to week, DC rules in trades! Manga appears to be slowing for me, but I'm sure it's just my area. I cannot imagine Manga ever slowing down with the younger collectors. Naruto and Fruits Baskets leads titles with Tokyopop the best selling publisher.

Current Comics This Year: Best in sales would be as follows: all Civil War and crossovers, all World War Hulk and crossovers, Annihilation, Captain America #25, Grimm's Fairy Tales, Dark Tower, Omega Flight mini, Sinestro Corps and its crossovers (excellent story). Continous titles that sell excellent year after year would be: Astonishing X-Men, JLA, Batman, X-Men, all Marvel Zombies, Uncanny X-Men, Wolverine (and Origins), and any Avengers. Surprises in sales would be: the continued sales of Daredevil(after Bendis left in #81, no one expected same sales, and they actually increased with Brubaker's great writing!), crossover event Annihilation (underrated, get the 3 volume hardcovers, but realize the volumes are out of chronological order), both Shazam minis(definitely a surprise), Silver Surfer: Requiem, many mainstream and independent horrors (especially from IDW and Marvel Zombies), Countdown and 52 (I expected readers to give up after 1-2 months, but they held on for a great Black Adam and Isis story), Black Adam maxiseries. For my list of disappointments, there are plenty, but I'll minimize it perferring not to be reminded of these follies of the past year. Worst things to happen in 2006/07: Anything Black Panther, especially the wedding; the main Image titles (like Spawn); and the ending of Comic Book Marketplace (great mag for the experienced collector.) Finally, my list of undersold that deserves mentioning: The Programme(Wildstorm/DC), Fallen Angel (IDW), Flash (death of Impulse as the new Flash), Savage Tales (and other Dynamite Entertainment books like Red Sonja and The Boys), Sgt.Rock mini, Elephantmen (Image), Walking Dead (Image, get the trades!), Lone Ranger(DE), Zombies (IDW). Movies were a disappointment, with the Fantastic Four sequel and Spiderman 3. Higher sales were definitely noticed for Venom and Surfer issues. Especially for AMS #300(1st full Venom). Hard to believe what it was going for pre-movie. I expect an increase, but nowhere near early 2007 levels.

Modern Back Issue Sales (1986-2004): Sales slipped in this area due to increased trade awareness. For example, why spend money on back issues of Hellblazer? That's 200+ issues!!! Get the trades. You miss nothing. Cost is far less and it's easier. This trend will continue, and you will see more dumping of recent period books at conventions for this reason. But it is a good reason. Trades are a good way to go. Maintain your existing long runs, and look to the trades section of your local store.

Copper-Late Bronze Age Back Issues (1976-1985): Low print mainstream titles are picking up steam! Wonder Woman, Flash, GL, JLA, and Daredevil are my best sellers for this age. Around 5-10 years ago, Bronze Age books were so affordable. Now we find what were $5-$20 books are all $50-$200 such as Marvel Spotlight #5, Tomb of Dracula #1 and so on. Well, not so many early Bronze are that cheap and key anymore. You have to look in this era. The problem is less obvious keys to go for. Certain JLA issues after #160 come to mind, and other items like Fury of Firestorm #1, Ms. Marvel #1,16-18, various Defender issues just to name some with potential. Go ahead, try and find a Fury of Firestorm #1 that is a true 9.6 or better. Or a Teen Titans #1 or #2 (1st Deathstroke). You may get lucky, but most people will fail. It's those useful Overstreet notations that are placed in your Guide that will help you discover the future big books. All those minor key issue notes. Refer to JLA for example. Issue #'s 161,192,193,244,245,137(wow! really low to me),144, and 145. All somewhat important. The Teen Titans #2 I mentioned earlier (1st Deathstroke) has always been important. Deathstroke has always been a fan-fave. He slowed down a bit in the 90s, but now is in the midst of this big DC event. This book definetely is going up.

Early Bronze Age Back Issues (1970-1975): A very volatile area. Any high grade keys, even minor, sell at full Guide or better. Most books are still reasonable compared to the Silver Age, easier to find in a higher grade, and prove to give a greater return by percentage. Percentage? How does that factor? Well if you take a $1000 comic from the Silver or Golden Age, compare it to 10 reasonably popular Bronze Age books(such as Marvel Spotlight #2,28,29, Tomb of Dracula #1, Ms. Marvel #16-18 and so many more choices) that also add up to $1000, you would notice from last year or even 5 years ago, your gain is greater with the Bronze Age selection. There are exceptions. Not everything goes up year to year in any age. But overall, it is the better bet. My best selling titles of this age would be Batman, Amazing Spider-Man, Our Army At War, various DC/Marvel original horrors (not reprints, Marvel has too many), Incredible Hulk (especially #141,162). My poorest selling titles, and least favored for investment, would be Sgt. Fury, MAD magazines, Romance, Charltons, Marvel reprint horrors (not Werewolf By Night or Tomb of Dracula as these are original and excellent!) .

1960s Marvel: This year I noticed a huge surge for anything Silver Surfer and Hulk. Fantastic Four #48,49,50 and Silver Surfer #1-4 actually sold well. Of course, this is due to the (again) disappointing Fantastic Four movie sequel. I do not think these books should increase in value this year, as they are already too high, but the rest of Surfer's appearances should (such as later FF issues). Surfer is a great "appearance" character, and he generates excitement even in the modern age. I would go after the more affordable appearances he made for investment and reading. Hulk is and always will be a fan favorite. The current WWHulk story is fueling all levels of sales for the green behemoth, and deservedly so. Aside from Hulk #1-6,102,181 issues, everything else to me is undervalued and in high demand. Not to mention the numerous appearances all over the Marvel universe where he bounces in, and bounces out with the title's hero thrashed. Tops in demand is always FF#12. This book is very pricey, but if you look hard, you will find battles against the Thing, Thor, Spidey (just try to find AMS #119,120 at Guide!) Hulk is great and popular in all ages from Silver-Bronze-Modern-Current. You cannot go wrong collecting his issues. This section of my sales report always has the most activity by dollar and volume. Needless to say practically everything sells(even early Sgt. Fury). Remember that DC and Timely (1938-1945) created the first Super Heroes(still kicking to this day, such as Superman, Batman, Cap.) Marvel did it for the Silver Age. DC did as well, but much less so (they already were well established 25 years earlier). Marvel mostly did new creations and ideas. Most heroes had some problems, politically, economically, or just at school (Peter Parker). DC maintained the old guard (WW, Sup, Bat) and reinvented old heroes (Flash, GL and many more), but the ideas were stale and campy. You have to get into the late Silver Age and into Bronze for cool and unique writing/art (for example Swamp Thing). So in a nutshell, if you can afford it, buying anything Marvel in this key area is worth every penny. For the art, stories, investment and Americana value, you can't go wrong!

1960s DC: Nothing can compare to Marvel in the 1960s, though DC tries. The only titles that come close to Marvel in importance and value would be Showcase (many heroes like GL, Flash, Atom, Aquaman start in this expensive title), Batman, Detective, Adventure, Brave and the Bold, Action and Superman. Maybe DC can field these and maybe 5-10 more top titles for the 1960s. Marvel would have multiples more! Even said, sales is always #1 for me with Batman(anything with him!). Especially beginning in mid 1960s with Neal Adams issues in Detective. Nothing outsells Neal Adams' Batman. For you younger generation collectors, Alex Ross, Jim Lee and McFarlane are great artists, but who do you think they got some of their inspriations from? Neal Adams, Wrightson, Kirby, Ditko, Romita(s), Kubert(sorry if I missed someone) and Crumb (he is most unique!). And those greats had inspiration from the likes of Evans, Schomburg, Williams, Frazetta and plenty more. But for every name I mentioned, Neal Adams is the quintessential artist for the human body (especially in tights!). This is why whenever Adams pencilled any Batman, it is an instant seller! What do you think would sell faster? A high grade Detective #400 or an Amazing Spider-Man #100? Both have similar value, age and relative keyness. I would bet on the Detective. Fewer high grade copies available and far more important with Adams. Sales were outstanding this year for my DCs, even though the current titles lagged after Crisis. No surprise, as I had large influxes of vintage collections come my way. Typical top sellers were Batman, Detective, Showcase, Action, Superman, Adventure, WW, and anything Sgt. Rock. Slow sellers would be Lois Lane, Jimmy Olsen, Hawkman, Atom, Aquaman.

1960s Other: Gold Key is my best in sales with Solar, Magnus and Star Trek tops. Charlton is slower this year. Romance for me is dead except DC. Horror moves best after TV/movie related books, especially Warren mags like Vampirella, Creepy and Eerie. Archie is OK this year, and Harvey is hot, especially Hot Stuff and Casper.

Golden-Atomic-Early DC Silver (1939-1962): As mentioned earlier, DC and Timely rule this era. With all the innovation that has carried into the current age, it hardly is a surprise. The main stickler to this early period is availability, grades and cost. Timelys are near impossible in quantity, and sell quite fast even if over Guide (especially Cap and Marvel Mystery). Sub-Mariner is slower, but being a Timely alone sells it. As per DC, Batman and Superman titles are always out in front. These books are more available in quantity, and prices can be quite high as well. I find early Detective and Action go over Guide, and Batman and Superman sell at Guide. I have sold some of all above, most noteworthy would be some *Detective*s falling in from #45-65, Superman #6 and four high grade Timelys. Unfortunately, not much in the way of collections came my way (except Silver and Bronze, which was abundant), so my report is less than normal in the era. The non super-hero titles (Disneys by Dell for example) I found slower than normal across the board.

Conventions: Hobbystar yet again provided an exciting convention in Toronto last August. This convention showcased many venues and guests, providing 46,000+ attendees with many signings, merchandise and social events. It was a great mixture of all the genres of our hobby. The comic industry was well represented with advisors such as Harley Yee and Graham Crackers. I noticed a greater increase on the floor for vintage books. Nothing big appeared to have sold, but plenty of mid-range Silver and Golden Age books valued under $1,000 were sold. As usual the bulk dealers did their share, and I noticed a much greater interest in early Copper Age. I have mentioned in a few articles previously that this age will become very hot soon, approaching 30+ years of age. The low print runs of DC such as Wonder Woman, Flash, Green Lantern, Brave and the Bold, JLA and so on certainly help. The 2008 show Aug. 22-24 should increase to over 50,000 attendees. I hope to see you there.

Conclusion: New comic sales this year were fantastic thanks to Marvel. Civil War and World War Hulk made for great reading. Most of my customers are beginning to ignore movie hype, leaving increased demand and cost to non-regular collectors. Too much recent disappointment. We hope the Batman: The Dark Knight movie does well (it should from what I read). I don't expect better sales, but perhaps younger collectors may spend on DC more than Marvel. A bit too much Spidey I think. The new Iron Man movie and Hulk may bring new people in though, especially Hulk. For you investors of vintage pricey books, be wary of online purchases. I am getting more and more customer feedback on eBay and CGC sales. Pictures are being doctored, and CGC serial #'s are being used on books not owned. Anyone can cut and paste a picture on the net. So when an expensive 9.8 is posted, you can cut and paste the item's picture, list this item later on with the pic (maybe cropped, resized and doctored a bit). Other tricks can be making the pic a bit blurry so the serial # cannot be seen. Whatever the way, someone always discovers how to take your money. So be wary, buy in person when possible, or at least from someone well known, a store, an Overstreet advisor, a convention. If on the net, look at feedback, their recent history, return policy, if any, and clear pictures. What we do for example for bigger purchase buyers, is either send a DVD with closeups of whatever is wanted, or offer to have them fly in to Toronto. Never a guarantee, but usually we subsidize the trip with the comics purchased (they get a deal on the trip and make a holiday of it). Seems excessive, but I truly believe in buying in person at all costs if possible.

Dan Fogel
Hippy Comix, Inc.

2008 marks my 30th year in comics and collectibles retailing, and I honestly feel that I'm learning more with every passing year and my enthusiasm keeps growing! Most of my friends are people in every facet of our industry and art form, and the level of positive networking and spirit of cooperation has never been higher.

It's been no secret that most of my sales have been mainly focusing on Underground, Adult, and Alternative Comix, an area showing rapid growth following the 2006 release of (insert shameless plug) my book Fogel's Underground Comix Price Guide. Although Overstreet's Guide has thus far not included the vast majority of these titles, perhaps Uncle Bob and Mr. Geppi may soon change that policy, starting with buying me out? (end shameless plug.)

Bulk sales were most of my mainstream comics transactions, including: complete sets of the "pro-zines" Amazing World of DC Comics and FOOM (along with a membership kit), and DC digests and treasuries, and a near-complete set of Marvel treasuries. Also sold were miscellaneous Marvel, Archie, and Disney digests, DC and Marvel reprint and prose paperbacks, and hard-and-softcover graphic novels. In addition, I moved dozens of short boxes of Mad and Cracked magazine, Marvel black and white mags, the color series Epic Illustrated and Hulk, and the Warren titles Creepy, Eerie, Famous Monsters and Vampirella.

A growing trend has been vast single-owner collections of later Silver Age, Bronze Age, and Modern Age books hitting the market. Most of these have been the remaindered stock of stores that closed for a variety of reasons, although some have been the accumulations of dedicated or over-eager collectors. Far from breaking sales records, the late Silver and Bronze transactions are mostly bought at steep Guide price discounts, and resold for higher but still wholesale value.

Post-1980 collections are literally bought either by the pound or longbox, at pennies or dimes per book. Sellers especially need to be aware of these facts, because it's definitely a buyer's market for what I like to call "macro-sales."

As always, collectors should only buy what they like, and please take the time to read at least some of them for pleasure and not with only dollar signs in their eyes!

Bronze Age: For us, 1970s comics are now outselling all other eras by volume. Over half of the collectible comics that we sold during the year were published during the Bronze Age. Collectors are all looking for the best available copies, therefore very good and lower must be discounted or packaged together to make them attractive. Bronze Age graded above Very Good needs no special marketing. Collectors are looking to complete their runs and are aggressively searching for missing issues. To our surprise, our records show that for the first time, Marvel horror comics like Tomb of Dracula, Creatures on the Loose, and Werewolf by Night are selling just as well as Super-Hero titles. As for DC, please send us all your high grade House of Secrets and House of Mystery issues with Neal Adams, Jeff Jones or Bernie Wrightson artwork in them – we are scrambling to keep our regular customers satisfied. Got Super-Hero books? Good, 'cause collectors want them too. We have sold through multiple runs of Iron Fist, Marvel Team-Up, Black Lightning, Ghost Rider, Flash, and most requested of all: Wonder Woman. Square bound books are selling well above Guide and are heavily requested, including: Marvel's Giant-Size series, Atlas' Vicki series, and DC's 100 pagers.

ONLY A STRONG AMERICA CAN PREVENT ATOMIC WAR!

©ACE

That most interesting era, the Atom Age, gave us popular gems like Atomic War! #1.

Silver Age: 2007 continued trends established over the past several years. Collectors want high grade copies of Super-Hero titles at mid-grade prices, and you have to be creative to get mid/low grade issues to move – no surprises here. We have been actively accumulating movie/TV comics in all grades for a long time now and the collectors that we know are loving it – drawn covers do just as well as photo covers. Gold Key and Charlton continue to keep up their end of the bargain with Turok, Star Trek, The Phantom, Many Ghosts of Dr. Graves, and the like selling quite briskly.

Atom Age: By far the most interesting era – newly re-discovered gems are being snapped up as fast as collectors can be shown them, especially in higher grades. Like what? Well, pay attention now 'cause we're gonna do this fast: Atomic Comics #4, Atomic War #1, Thing #12 and #15, all Timely/Atlas good girl titles (Millie, Patsy, Cindy, etc.), Thrilling airbrush covers, Teenage Diary Secrets, Giant Comics Edition #12, Reform School Girl, Wings #90, #91, #94, and #112, Planet #66, #71, and #72, Cannonball #1 and #2, My Desire #4, Intimate Confessions #1, Captain America Comics #76 - #78, It's Game Time, Little Dot, Four Color (that's right, I said Four Color), My Confession #7, Dollman #42, Plastic Man #33, Ken Shannon, and on and on – if you can find it, someone will probably be looking for it.

Golden Age: Since the advent of The Gerber Photo Journal, and the ascendancy of eBay, all Golden Age titles are selling well. The combination of visibility and availability have inspired collectors to go for it. Unlike other eras, Golden Age collectors search all grades and all titles with equal gusto. Over the year we were happy to have found collectors looking for previously slow titles like Daredevil, Air Boy, Popular, King, Tip Top, and Crime Does Not Pay. What sells the most? For us, it's Dell far and away. Makes sense since Dell out-produced all the other publishers during the '40s anyway. We have several collectors looking for Four Color, Looney Tunes, Walt Disney's Comics and Stories, Raggedy Ann and Andy, etc. What sells fastest? First and foremost all Timely Super-Hero issues, classic Fiction House Good Girl issues, DC's Flash, More Fun, Wonder Woman, and Sensation. Bottom line though – we'll tell you what we tell our regulars: ignore what the other guy is doing, buy what you like best and you'll never be unhappy with your collection.

Conventions: We enjoy seeing old friends and meeting new collectors over the course of the convention season. Conventions continue to be the best venues for collectors since they can physically handle and inspect more comics in a single day at a quality convention than they can just look at in a week on eBay. Know what we're asked for the most at cons? Sit down, 'cause you'll be surprised to hear that it is for Sonic the Hedgehog. Who knew?

Restoration: We sell restored and unrestored comics with equal ease due to the fact that we are willing to buy vintage restored comics without giving the seller a big song and dance. Our customer base is comfortable with the fact that they will always be able to sell their restored books to us at the end of the day since we do not hesitate to buy them back. During the course of the year, we have again overheard professional dealers publicly trashing restoration in front of collectors and then privately complaining to other dealers that they cannot sell restored books – you don't need to wonder why. All vintage, collectible comics will find a home with a collector if they are accurately graded, reasonably priced, and any known restoration/conservation has been disclosed.

John Hauser
JMHComics

Comics shows have been slowing down for mid-grade Silver Age. This material is plentiful and cheap on eBay. So many comic collectors are just saving the gas money and shopping on-line. 50-cent comics still sell very well at the local shows. The collectors of these comics find it's better to buy in person. Buying on eBay just adds too much cost for postage. Sets and runs of comics continue to sell well at all the local shows. The readers are alive and well.

Golden Age and high grade comics sell steady wherever I am. Sales at shows, on eBay and to friends maintain steady sales for the business. Recently, I have been doing a lot more consignment sales. This works well for sellers that aren't in a hurry and want to receive the maximum amount for their collections. I've had great success deciding the best ways to sell their valuable comics.

Golden Age: These are all steady sellers at current Guide prices. This year I bought a large collection of pre-code horror, ECs, Fawcett Super-hero comics, strip reprint comics, DC Golden Age, plus a lot more. Everything has been selling at a very steady pace regardless of the grade. Esoteric and horror comics lead the pack, followed closely by Golden Age Captain Marvel comics. The rest have been selling, but at a much slower pace.

Silver Age: Nice clean Silver Age sells very well. Marvel always sell the best. At the moment, my supply of Marvels is getting thin. The supply of Marvel Silver Age collections seems to be drying up. DCs sell well in nice shape. Average very good copies of Silver Age are becoming increasingly tougher to sell. The collectors are not turning out and trying to fill in their runs like they did in the good old days.

Bronze Age: Continues to be one of the best selling time periods of comics. Prices are still relatively low on this kind of material. There seems to be plenty of collectors trying to fill in their runs.

Modern Age: 1980s comics are finally picking up some steam. Many buyers have been turning up at the shows trying to fill in their runs from my 50 cent boxes. Many of these comics sell for multiples of Guide if certified by CGC in 9.8.

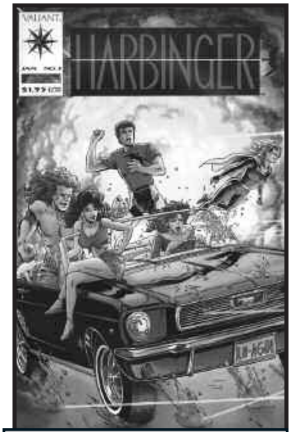
Valiant RETURNS! As predicted in last year's market report, Valiant Entertainment, Inc., (VEI) has brought the Valiant universe back to life. The first product, Harbinger: The Beginning hardcover was released in August 2007. In addition to reprinting the first eight issues of Harbinger (1992) in digital color for 200 pages at $24.95 retail, a short "Origin of Harada" story was newly written by Jim Shooter and illustrated by Bob Hall.

VEI now owns the copyrights to all of Valiant universe from the 1990s. That's everything from over 1,000 comics produced by Valiant and Acclaim, excluding the Gold Key properties (Magnus, Solar, and Turok). Some of the Valiant trademarks are in the process of finalizing, and the copyrights now completely belong to VEI. As a fan of the Valiant line since 1992, I can say that I'm definitely excited to have Valiant back. I wish VEI the best of luck in their endeavors with this comic universe.

Not surprisingly, the return to publishing for Harbinger had an effect on the back issue market for the original books. CGC 9.6 graded copies of Harbinger #1 trade regularly in the $85 range, which is fairly significant for a regular issue from 1992. Most collectors who follow CGC prices on modern issues recognize that there is rarely much value in regular issues graded 9.6 or below. Harbinger #1 has production flaws that have given 9.8s a very low population. With 300 copies submitted to CGC, only 12 have received 9.8 grading. The most recent public sale (as of this writing) of a 9.8 Harbinger #1 was $1,000 on ComicLink in May 2007.

Though lower printed, the Harbinger #0 Pink (send-away) edition is often found in top condition, and prices for CGC graded copies seem fairly stable around $125 for 9.8, and $60 for 9.6. Fewer copies have been graded for Harbinger #2 through #7, so prices tend to fluctuate between $50 and $150 when 9.8 examples are sold.

Besides the Harbinger title, Valiant books in general seem a little more popular than in recent years, however, it is a small (but loyal) fanbase which is responsible for much of the market activity. Current demand for a few Valiant books should not be interpreted as demand for all Valiant books. Though a complete Valiant collection (1991-1996) consists of just over 800 issues, half of the eighty-million total Valiant books in print were printed in 1993. As a result, Valiant regular issues from 1993 are nearly impossible to sell for more than a few cents each, which is true of most 1993 Marvel, DC, and Image comic books as well.



© VAL

A NM/MT 9.8 Harbinger #1 sold for $1,000 in 2007.

Less than 10% of the 1990s Valiant books in print sell consistently for even cover price, while fewer than 5% of the books are consistent sellers for $5 or more. Many Valiant longboxes sit idly in comic shops around the country because the contents are simply too common. At these low price levels, the cost of shipping is a major factor in the final auction prices realized. Sellers who attempt to increase profit through higher shipping charges generally see lower auction prices as bidders compensate. Some bidders now avoid shipping-profiteers altogether.

Though Valiant's time in the market spotlight of the 1990s was brief, the impact appears to have been significant enough that many 25-to-40-year-olds consider Valiant as the comic universe for their generation. The results of nostalgia are well-documented in this industry, with both Marvel and DC's "first years" considered the most prized. It remains to be seen how much the combination of nostalgia and Valiant's return by VEI will contribute to the back issue market. At this point it's anyone's guess, but it is already clear from the significant internet presence of Valiant fans that the Valiant universe will be closely watched in whatever forms it might take in the future.

Demolition Comics

2007 was another busy and successful year for the comic book industry. Comic book related movies dominated and continue to dominate the box office: Fantastic Four, 300, Transformers, 30 Days Of Night and The Simpsons all played to sold out screenings. Comics fans packed the theaters and so did future comic fans. Many were curious about what all the fuss is about in our neck of the woods. Some of these new comic fans are people you know, or you may even be one of them, now wondering why they didn't pick up a comic or graphic novel sooner. We just have to smile and say: "Welcome, come on in and enjoy the ride!" – and it should be a ride, a wonderful kaleidoscope of twists and turns. Discovering wild and intricate new worlds where incredible heroes clash against sinister villains in the ultimate on-going battles of good vs. evil, man vs. machine, Romance, Adventure, Science Fiction, Adult themes, Animation, Horror, and Crime. But there's more, because there always is. Our industry is one that has evolved for the better through the ages, through good times and bad. As our country went through some trying times this past year with the dreaded collapse of the booming house market, to the reality check of the bridge collapse in Minnesota, to the panic when Mattel recalled millions of children's toys, to some scary stock market days – everyone was touched in some way or had someone close to them affected either emotionally or financially or both, by these pitfalls and tragedies.

After each event we are forced to pick up the pieces, comfort our loved ones and look ahead to a new day. At least we know that in the thick of it all, in between emails, meetings, the drive thru and all the hustle and bustle, a plethora of fantastic tales awaits us between two glossy color covers, or two cardboard covers. Even though we never seem to have time, and we grow older, the characters we read about never get old, and never tire. They wait for us whenever we can make time for them. They wait to captivate and entertain us because ultimately that's what the comic medium is all about: Intelligent Entertainment.

Demolition Comics was in Heaven in 2007! We did some promising promotions, including a brand new commercial featuring yours truly fantasizing about Wonder Woman, as she appears next to me in all her Amazonian glory much to my absolute bewilderment. We snagged quite a few new customers with that advertisement. We gave out free comics and prizes at a dozen different movie events. Chances are that if you went to see a movie in Tampa, Clearwater, St. Pete, or Largo in Florida in 2007 you saw us at least once, and you always walked away with a gift. It's awesome to be at the opening or special screening of comic book movies and see the expressions of awe on everyone's faces.

While our local business was very good, our sales abroad were also positive. That's another great thing about comic book movies; they are also making new comic fans abroad, and those new international readers need to find a reliable connection in the states to supply them with fresh product. Our website, www.demolitioncomics.com, continues to upgrade with constantly evolving technology so that we may better serve local and international customers.

We sold thousands of regularly priced comics, toys, posters, apparel, trading cards, gaming, and even thousands of moderately priced back issues. When Transformers customers came in looking for merchandise, we fixed them up with a T-shirt, poster, new comics and back issues. 30 Days of Night vampire fans? No problem. We have tons of back issues. "How about the first trade paperback?" Borders forgot to stock it, because they were busy putting in orders for the O. J. book, but we have it. Sold. Again, and again. No sales of Detective Comics #37, so sorry to disappoint. They were working on a Trump Towers in downtown Tampa, but unfortunately the Donald never happened to drop by one of our stores asking for Superman #1. If he had we would have suggested maybe Donald Duck, whatever the latest issue was from Gemstone Publishing, as it is a great read and he probably could use a good laugh. If that had happened, we would probably have had a return customer.

As local business was very good and sales abroad were increasing, we decided to expand our store fronts. We made a daring leap into another town, over an hour away and opened our fourth location in Largo. Our latest store is over 2,200 square ft. and almost twice the size of our other locations. We worked tirelessly day and night to open the best store we possibly could and the end result was spectacular. It is a one stop shop for all comic book and related pop culture merchandise. We carry full lines of many different publishers and stock almost 40,000 back issues, hundreds of action figures, dozens of nice looking posters, a large assortment of apparel and whatever else we can fit in (still no Action Comics #1). You know, I make humorous reference to the stocking of key Golden Age books not because I think they are not note worthy, but because I wanted to make a point that it's not all about just the buying and selling of "those" books. In fact, we learned from the housing market downfall and stock market uneasiness that those types of investments can be very risky, yet consistently key Silver Age and Golden Age books continue to rise in value, as you may have witnessed in years past and present. As with any investment it's important not to go beyond your means. We want to keep you as a customer and enthusiast and not another negative statistic of someone who got burned in this industry because they bought into something they could not afford and it hurt them financially later. Entertainment first.

Investment second. Why save for a possibly fruitful future by giving up an otherwise enjoyable today?

Collector

I have just returned from the 2007 Chicago and Baltimore shows and am happy to report that the vintage comic book market is strong and healthy. Reports from dealers I spoke to reported incredibly strong sales at the San Diego Comic-Con. While Chicago started slow for many dealers, it slowly picked up steam over the weekend. Baltimore, a well-run show but with lesser expectations in terms of sales for most dealers, was also a decent show for most. While I do sell books from time to time on eBay, other internet outlets and to comic book dealers, I do not view the market from a sales perspective but rather from a collector's standpoint. Even though the market was strong in many areas, there were still some down trends on certain books during the course of this year.

As has been the case for many, many years, prices on books VF and below continue to fall in the market in relationship to their high grade counterparts. Most dealers are aware and have known this for many years, yet some collectors are still paying high prices (meaning at or near Guide prices) for low and mid-grade common run non-keys. Even top line titles like Amazing Spider-Man, Avengers, X-Men and Batman have scores of copies available of almost every book in mid/low grade. So many copies exist that there is far more supply than demand for these books. For now, high grade copies continue to have demand outpacing supply and so prices have remained strong. It is clear right now that collectors need to take their time to explore many other buying options such as eBay, where common run books in mid/low grade are often available for purchase at 50% off Guide or far less. While many people will try to scare you off of eBay and the grading problems, the truth is that when you are talking about books in that grade, they are often available for extremely reasonable prices and you can still have confidence in the stated product.

This widening gulf has produced a continuing disparity in prices where a VF copy can obtain 10% of what a copy of the book in CGC graded 9.6 does. While this is not new news, I state it again to remind collectors who are reading this to exercise patience when buying lower/mid grade copies. Also, do not be deceived by those dealers who promise "50% off discounts" but have raised the prices to almost double the Guide price. Thus there is no real discount. There are often several dealers at shows who are offering deals at 50% off and it is a legitimate deal. Be patient when buying. If you see a book offered to you, check all of the available outlets to determine whether or not the price you are buying is the most reasonable deal. It is important for collectors both new and experienced to be patient and not jump at the first available deal unless it is a rare or key piece. Since quantities of most mainstream titles are readily available, it is unnecessary to overpay given the current market conditions.

Once again, let me make a push for every collector to support their local comic book stores. While I hear more than my fair share of horror stories from people going to a comic book shop and seeing wildly over-priced back issues and grousing employees, many local comic book shops still carry a wonderful supply of back issues. I encourage supporting them because eventually, they won't be around without our support. While I think eBay is wonderful, I still love showing up at the store and checking out the books myself. Additionally, there are many wonderful deals out there to be found in the stores. Many have high grade, low grade, mid grade and wide runs of material. Just because you have a bad experience at one store, don't let that stop you from exploring other stores. Once you find a good solid local shop, support it! Zapp Comics in Wayne, NJ, JC Comics in Plainfield, NJ and Comic Universe in Folsom, PA are just a few of the incredible standout stores that exist in my general area. If you cultivate a relationship with these individuals you will find a wonderful resource for discovering vintage books at fair prices and you will be helping to support your local business.

Silver & Bronze Age Marvels are still "King of the Mountain" in sales. (Amazing Spider-Man #185 shown)

I think anyone reading or writing in The Guide knows that Silver/Bronze Age Marvels are still the king of the mountain. Amazing Spider-Man is unquestionably the blue chip of all Marvels and high grade copies remain the most liquid Silver Age book. Even low/mid grade copies of ASM sell briskly at a discount. Other hot titles are the Avengers, Fantastic Four (especially #1-50, 72), Incredible Hulk #181 (surprise, surprise), X-Men #1-10, 94-101, Giant-Size X-Men #1, Iron Man #1 (movie hype reaching huge proportions given that this book is not rare in high grade) and Marvel Spotlight #5. While these books are the same that have been appearing for many years, some "sleepers" are Conan #24 (1st Red Sonja), Iron Man #128 (Classic Alcoholism cover), ASM #229, 230 (tough in high grade, great story), Incredible Hulk #180 (the actual first appearance of Wolverine), Captain America #117 (1st Falcon) and Thor #225 (1st Firelord). All are books that sell well above the Guide price and if you track down high grade copies, snap them up when you see them at bargains!

DCs are wonderful books and while they have far less demand, they also appear to be available in lesser quantity. Neal Adams' covers and interiors are white hot right now. Green Lantern #76 in all grades is selling briskly, but in high grade it continues to sell for record highs. While Green Lantern #76 often gets a lot of the attention, Green Lantern #79 is actually more difficult to find in high grade. Green Lantern #87, the first appearance of John Stewart, is also very hot in high grade. Of course, Adams' legendary run on Batman is what brought him the most notoriety and books like Detective Comics #400, 402 and 405 are all highly sought after Neal Adams covers. In addition, Batman #227, 232, 234, 244, 245 and 251 remain extremely sought after books. Neal Adams' Tomahawk books and his Superman covers are also very desirable. We haven't even mentioned his horror work, Spectre and Phantom Stranger work – it's all in demand! Adams is clearly the driving force behind many Bronze Age DCs, with his incredible covers and revolutionary artwork. Beyond Neal Adams' work, ten cent DCs from 1956-1962 are unbelievably tough to find in high grade with many books including Batman #121, Adventure Comics #210 and Action Comics #242 nearly impossible to find even in grades of 6.0 and better. Just astonishing! Those are just a few of the very tough to find ten cent DCs that are out there. Many DCs would be considered "high grade" in 8.0 from that time period because they simply cannot be found in better shape. There's only one 8.5 copy of Action Comics #242 on the CGC census and that's the top grade! As more people continue to discover the wonder of DC, expect these books to climb in value.

This year, while there have been many variant and sketch covers, I have not seen a lot of sustained high prices for moderns. Most have had quick runs like the Civil War #1 sketch cover that quickly lose their value in 60 or fewer days. Again, I caution my fellow collectors NOT to invest in such quick dollars. If you are patient and wait a few months, you will pay far less in most cases for these new, hot sketch covers that will have no staying power. Consider that in the last 7 or 8 years, very few moderns have had the kind of sustained value that a book like Ultimate Spider Man #1 has had. Marvel Zombies #1, Batman #608 (2nd print) and a few other books have been able to have moderate growth that is sustained. Sketch covers are simply gimmicks and when a store or an online dealer attempts to pump up the hype for a "rare" copy of something, be very careful about rushing out and spending money right away. Wait and see if there is going to be sustained value behind the collectible. The way most new comics are published today, the sketch cover is reprinted and the original loses its value quickly (for example, Civil War #1 sketch cover is not worth $75 anymore). One of the prime examples from this past year is Captain America #25 (his "death"), which for the first two days on eBay was white hot with people paying $25 to get a copy and individual retailers charging high, high prices. Two weeks later, copies were struggling to sell for $10 a copy. Modern hot books are the most volatile market with very little upside for speculation and collectors who get burned when they pay top of the market prices.

I'd like to mention that one of the other things that has contributed to recently strong sales is that the foreign market, including Great Britain and Europe, and the weak dollar has led to many collectors abroad to feel that "aggressive pricing" in the U.S. is really moderate to them. In the future, it's important to monitor and listen to the voice of this segment of the market as I feel it will have increasing influence moving forward.

Overall, the vintage market continues to be strong for high grade and the volume of sales for other grades is still strong. I look forward to the rest of 2007 and 2008 where I anticipate continued strong sales in a variety of areas.

Fantasy-comics.com

2007 was a tremendous year for us. It marked our second full year of operation since we started our website and sales really took off this past year. We are an internet-based buy and bid site and also maintain an eBay store and run weekly auctions. We mainly try to present new material to the market so we focus on acquiring original owner collections rather than buying from other dealers or at conventions. The following are some specific observations over the past year:

Silver Age: Marvel keys are the story here. With constant exposure from film and mainstream media, it seems everybody wants to own an Amazing Fantasy #15, Amazing Spider-Man #1 and Fantastic Four #1. Every copy we were able to acquire sold immediately at prices above Guide. Good to Very Good grade copies of these keys were particularly quick to sell. From the Silver Age, there seems to be an endless demand for Amazing Spider-Man comics followed by X-Men. DC titles such as Batman, Superman, Justice League, and Green Lantern were also strong sellers.

Bronze Age: This area of the market is where the largest part of sales volume has been this past year. Bronze Age books are easy to find and easy to sell. More and more collectors are coming into this market and rediscovering comics from their youth. If I were looking to buy comics as an investor, I would put my money on high grade '70s Marvel comics. Even though there are many high grade copies available in the market and in collections, this is being offset by constantly increasing demand for these issues driving prices higher. While every mainstream Marvel title was in strong demand, it was especially difficult to keep X-Men #94 -143 in stock due to strong demand from collectors in both the U.S. and Europe. DC titles such as Weird War Tales, The Unexpected, and The Witching Hour sold very well. Also all Charlton horror titles in high grade were in strong demand throughout the year.

Golden Age: We were able to find one original owner collection this past year of around 500 early 1940s books. These books were mainly in the Good to Very Good range with a mix of superhero and non-superhero books. Timely books from this collection sold at 1.5 times Guide within a week of being listed on our eBay store. The mainstream DC titles such as Superman and Batman were surprisingly slower to sell at Guide prices.

Copper/Modern Age: The big news for us in this area of the market was the acquisition of a collection of 100,000 books. We selected 1,700 of the best books and sent these to CGC for certification. Of the 1,700 books, nearly 1,200 were certified as 9.8s with 14 being graded a 9.9, and the rest graded as 9.6. As of this writing we have just started selling these issues and are seeing tremendous demand for high grade CGC graded modern comics with astounding multiples being paid. This can be attributed to market confidence in CGC graded comics and increased demand for early '80s books. With more and more collectors that read and collected comics from their childhood re-entering this hobby, we should see increasing prices for high grade books in this area of the market.

Conventions: We set up a few times a year at the Big Apple Convention to sell discounted low grade Silver/Bronze Age and Modern books and have to say this show is a lot of fun. It is especially great to see young collectors buying stacks of low grade reading copies of '60s and '70s books.

All Star Auctions

2006 was the banner year for museum openings and showings, and the trend continued into 2007 with more thematic exhibits highlighting the best of comic art and newspaper strip art. As we write this recap of 2007, we are looking forward to the opening September 15, at the Montclair Art Museum (www.montclairartmuseum.org). There are 4 exhibitions, Reflecting Culture: The Evolution of American Comic Book Superheroes; Comic Book Legends: Joe, Adam and Andy Kubert; Dulce Pinzon: The Real Story of The Superheroes and Greg Hildebrandt: Golden and Silver Age Superheroes.

It is extremely important that this type of exposure continue as it elevates the medium to a new level. For the past several years, attention has been paid to our industry as Hollywood adapted comic books and their heroes for movies. Now with all this increased attention in the form of museum opening and showings, we are even further poised for take-off!

As a result of this heightened awareness, prices have risen sharply, and we have been approached for interviews by various publications to explain the continued rise in popularity as well as the steady growth and increase in prices seen in the Comic Character Collectibles arena. It is easy enough to cite Hollywood's influence but there are other factors contributing as well.

Historically, in uncertain times, collectibles do enjoy resurgence. There is a need for a comfort zone which these items provide, bringing us back to our childhood and simpler times; many of these items are "feel good" purchases. We have seen the resurrection of the toy market, the animation market and the premium market. The other areas of Comic Character Collectibles are still extremely solid, with the original comic book and newspaper strip art market leading the way.

With record prices being established, a need arises for more information about caring for, storing and insuring collectibles. Appraisals are becoming a necessity rather than a luxury as most insurance companies will not insure items valued at $5,000 or above without proof of authenticity and proof of ownership. Mark your calendars, review your collection and remember it is our responsibility to be caretakers of these precious items! Let your motto be: Collect and Protect, what you like!

San Diego Comic Con 2007 was yet another incredible event! With the final attendance numbers coming in at over 125,000 attendees, plus 9,000 exhibitors and their staff, this has become the "must exhibit" and "must attend" show of the year. The Con has become a launching pad for TV and movie projects, and with so many stars in attendance, the media once again covered the Con throughout the country.

Auctions and auction concerns are popping up all over. The lure of auctions does bring out collections and items which have been in hiding, as the auction route is the best way to maximize results. And of course, eBay remains a very strong presence in the field.

We ran thousands of eBay and Internet sales as well as catalogue sales throughout 2007 and we noticed the increased demand for CGC graded comic books from the Silver and Bronze Age. We also noticed that in the arena of comic and newspaper strip art, European buyers are certainly impacting prices once again, with their currency enjoying a healthy run against the dollar.

2008 promises to be another banner year as far as comic character themed movies are concerned, with many movies scheduled for release.

Following are some highlights and results from 2007:

Golden Age: CGC graded Golden Age comic books in the 8.0 to 9.0 range continue their upward climb, with copies graded higher obviously realizing higher prices. It seems selling Golden Age comic books is not the problem, but securing these individual books and collections is certainly the issue. Another area within Golden Age comics is the Bound volume, these are copies bound by the publisher (publisher file copies), and in some instances by collectors. These bound volumes are such a great resource because the books can be read and enjoyed and still maintain their condition. Dell Bound volumes, Harvey Bound volumes, Timely Bound volumes etc., exist and we are seeing an increased interest.

Silver Age: CGC graded Silver Age comics in the 9.4 to 9.8 ranges continue to exceed expectations. The frenzy for high grade Silver Age books seems to have subsided a bit, but for the high grade (9.6 to 9.8) key Silver Age issues, demand is still strong.

Newspaper strip art: This uniquely American art form continues to gain in popularity. Europeans appreciate this art form and continue their unabashed enthusiasm. The seminal artists: Raymond, Herriman, McCay, Foster, Frazetta, Caniff, Gould, Sickles, Capp, Schulz, Kelly etc. remain sought after and prices certainly reflect that. We are also seeing a rising trend in the "newer" comic strip artists: Jim Davis (Garfield), Russell Myers (Broom Hilda), Scott Adams (Dilbert) etc. While these artists have been toiling and producing their dailies and Sundays for years, we are now seeing more demand for their art.

During 2007, we sold many examples of Winsor McCay's art, including Little Nemo In Slumberland, Sammy Sneeze, as well as editorial cartoons and the very popular feature, Dreams of the Rarebit Fiend. We also sold examples of Herriman, Schulz, Raymond, Capp, Caniff and Frazetta newspaper strip art.

Original Comic art: Covers and splash pages, whether DC or Marvel, still continue to be the items of interest to most collectors. Throughout 2007 we offered and sold many DC splash pages by the masters: Carmine Infantino and Murphy Anderson. At the 2007 San Diego Comic Convention, we sold the masterpiece cover to Mystery in Space #90, the classic image of Adam Strange. During 2007, we also sold the cover art to Hawkman #1. Other examples of DC art covers and splashes, included Justice League of America, Brave and the Bold, The Flash and Mystery in Space. As always, the mainstay artists: Kirby, Ditko, Steranko, Wood, Infantino, etc. continue in popularity, with prices reflecting this.

Animation Art: This market is enjoying resurgence and with proper guidance and nurturing should once again become a dominant market. With the majority of studios going to computer generated animation, these hand drawn examples by the masters should once again gain strength. Look to this market to continue to rebound in 2008 due to increased attention.

Collector

Greetings, comic collectors! This year I wanted to comment on three key themes. First, the success of comic related movies (particularly of second tier characters); second, the continued popularity of conventions and third, the relative scarcity of high grade DC Golden Age material relative to the most recent past.

Dare I say that 2007 confirmed the acceptance of comic books and comic characters throughout pop culture? It was a very positive development that some arguably lesser tier (or certainly, lesser promoted) characters were able to have movies that were wildly successful both through the story telling and financially. Without question, the comic book movie success story of 2007 was Transformers. At the time of this writing, as per Boxofficemojo.com, Transformers grossed $310.5 million domestically. Also worth mentioning, Frank Miller's 300 grossed $210.6 million in 2007. By comparison, Spider-Man 3 grossed $336.5 million! Clearly, comic characters are hot in our mainstream, and not just the "A" list heroes like Spider-Man.

I would also like to take a minute and congratulate the organizers of the New York Comic Con, which was held at the Jacob Javits Center this past February. I think that the second show was even better than the first with tons of dealers, exhibits, and guest appearances (including Stan Lee himself!) Shows like the New York Comic Con, and of course the San Diego Comic-Con, have transcended the medium and have become pop culture events in and of themselves.

The key challenge is how the comic community can continue to build upon the successes of the movies and events to attract the next generation of readers. There are no easy answers. I truly worry about the future of this hobby when it appears to me, and I say this purely anecdotally, that the average age of people frequenting comic conventions is north of 30, and that there exists a very clear gap amongst the under 21 collector, both male and female.

From a collector side, I am constantly amazed at some of the deals to be had on eBay. From my experiences this year purchasing some SA Marvels and DCs, there seems to be no distinction between a solid reader in the G/VG through the FN+ to even the FN/VF category. The comic reader can find some great deals on eBay in these grades – but of course buyer beware!

On the Golden Age Batman front, it seems that the availability of high grade (here 8.0 or better) Batman books from #2-20 has dried up materially. In years past, it always seemed that you could get a nice copy and perhaps even a pedigree if you were willing to pay for it. This year the quality material seems to be off the market as perhaps these books have found more permanent homes.

Looking ahead to next year, I am very excited for The Dark Knight movie and the New York Comic-Con of 2008. In terms of new offerings, I hope that DC and Marvel continue to bulk up their Archives and Masterworks series, which are the best value in the hobby IMHO.

Happy Collecting!

2007 continues the trend of increasing demand for Bronze Age books. Horror remains popular in all grades, selling over Guide, but not double Guide like last year. Bronze keys continue to set records with no end in sight. Even minor keys from the 1970s are heavily sought after. High grade Copper is still in demand for long term investors, as most in the hobby recognize the relative scarcity of true 9.4 or better copies. High grade Silver Age DC is heating up, with some CGC books in 9.2 and 9.4 bringing unbelievable percentages of Guide, or 10-20 times the 9.2 value, as collectors realize how rare these gems truly are. Even 8.0 graded DCs are now moving well, as hobbyists realize the impossibility of acquiring 9.0 or higher, and can buy them at a fraction of the price of those only slightly higher in grade. Bronze Age price variants, especially the 35¢ issues, continue to be requested, with demand far outstripping the supply. The Holy Grail of 35 cent variants, Iron Fist #14, has sold in three notable transactions this summer: a CGC 8.5 for $1700 on ComicLink; a Fine Minus for $885 on eBay; and a G/VG for $185 also on eBay. As I stated last year, I believe this Bronze Age key should hold the top spot in Bronze Age books, listing at 9.2 for $2,000.

New Dimension Comics

I have the exciting extra insight this year of having just come off of my first Overstreet advisors meeting. It's kept me thinking a lot of about the marketplace for this crazy hobby and where it will go from here. Where can it go from here? So much has passed that has shaped where we are now. With that in mind, I always make a promise to myself and to readers that I won't go on and on about typical stuff. I end up being pretty random, but I think it's better than telling you for the 47th time how hot Hulk #181 is…

I'm lucky to have the chance to contribute to the Guide. Here's a little history on me and my business that helps to shed light on my specific perspective of the market. I started New Dimension Comics in 1986 while still in high school. I have grown to 5 stores surrounding the Pittsburgh area. I have been blessed with many adventures, some of which I have chronicled in my own comic, which I will be happy to send to any curious reader. I have always been fascinated by the difference in market conditions between my area and when I travel. Things that collect dust here, fly for me on the road. And vice versa. I often find treasures at other stores/conventions that get gobbled up by my local clientele. Part of the fun…

Golden Age: The good stuff sells fast. Period. I get asked what my Golden Age selection is like all the time and I have to say it's next to nothing. I just don't get them fast enough. But I think most guys will tell you that of course… I get stuck with the oddballs. My new resolve is not let them collect dust in my stores, but instead put them on eBay and let the world see them. We recently had a guy from Australia crazy for our Tom Mix comics. Happy to oblige…

Silver Age: High grade rules again. This is the year for Iron Man. Iron Man #1 has always been an affordable key book. I think I'd compare it to the spike we all saw for Amazing Spider-Man #300 with Venom in the 3rd movie. Unlike other key movie tie-ins, it's actually possible for the average collector to afford one. Speaking of the effect of movies on the price of comics, it seems the time to sell them is when they are first announced. The hype and speculation are high and there's a scramble to "get it before it goes up." I haven't seen this work. They are in high demand during this window, but right now (as I write this it's months after Fantastc Four 2 with the Silver Surfer), it's harder sell a FF #48 than it was a year ago. Varying reviews might have done that, but that just means that the pre-release hype phase is even more important to move books like this. Iron Man is almost a year away and I'm selling his comics well now. Another one to watch is Iron Man & Sub-Mariner #1. Still very affordable.

Modern Age: The bar of the quality of new comics is raised higher every year. Better stories, better art, better formats. And the fans love it. I'm sure if you went back 20 years and told a comic retailer that the standard price for comics would one day be $2.99, they would predict the end of the hobby. Who would ever pay $2.99 for a comic book? Well, apparently lots of people. And even after that, some still become MORE valuable as collectibles. No matter what, there is always a surprise that catches the market off guard. It's the classic if popularity (demand) exceeds the print run (supply), then the price of the existing copies goes up. Titles like Incredible Hulk (Planet Hulk storyline,) Marvel Zombies and Fallen Son: Death of Captain America. Speaking of…one odd book that seems to be catching on is Captain America #360. It's the first appearance of Crossbones, who is the bad guy who shot Cap!

What's Next?: Kudos and credits to ace collector Josh Hvizdos for a lengthy, insightful conversation on this topic. Many ideas here sprang from there. It starts with…. Who will be collecting comics in the future? I don't think Spider-Man is going to go anywhere, but who's going to be chasing down Rex the Wonder Dog in 40 years? There won't be folks around anymore who remember Rex since there won't really be a mechanism in place for him to have any exposure at all. And the thing that store owners fear the most right now is that there aren't a lot of new people entering this hobby. Kids now-a-days (I've been waiting to be old enough to use that expression) have enough other distractions. Reading funny books isn't high on their list. And even if it is, they won't really have a desire for old, obscure characters. What will drive the demand for these old comics when all the people who remember them fondly are gone? Assuming no new memories are being generated of course. I guess a good parallel would be Platinum Age books. Sure they have some value, but I've never run across a guy looking to collect them. Anyone who's ever bought them—and I admit it's not my focus—has also collected a lot of other things. No one is beating down my door for the Mutt and Jeff I have from 1911. So what are the *Mutt and Jeff*s of the future? Sorry to bring you down, but it's kinda scary to think about who will still want certain titles in the next generation.

Colossus Comics and Micurio

The graded modern market remains strong, especially in the signature series market. Collectors love to have their comics signed by creators and having CGC certification service guarantees that the signatures have been witnessed by someone approved by CGC. Popular signature series books usually contain key appearances, special cover artists, new storylines and other memorable events. The collectors of common issues still prefer non-signed books to complete their runs and save the signature series for comics that are extra special.

Making money with CGC moderns is hard. 2006/2007 saw the demise of a few of my competitors due to the fact they were selling books at or below their cost. Unfortunately eBay buyers became used to these prices and it has since made it difficult to sell common issues for more than $20. For a dealer, the minimum cost of grading a modern comic is $18 when you factor in shipping back and forth to CGC, grading fees and the cost of the comic. If a seller sells their books through their eBay store, eBay takes 10% of the sale so at $20 dealers are just breaking even. Many of my competitors last year were selling their books for under $20 and they eventually went out of business.

CGC Modern collectors need to be in it for the long haul. Many of their common issue books won't show appreciation for perhaps years but a complete graded collection of a title may be worth more as a whole than as individual issues. Many times, the titles I submit are the only issues being graded. Each year that passes makes these titles rarer, as more copies fall into the hands of people that aren't careful in the handling of comics and the chances of getting a CGC 9.8 grade diminish.

Colossus Comics' most popular CGC 9.8 subscriptions this year have been: Ultimate Spider-Man, Amazing Spider-Man, Dark Tower, Civil War, Batman, All Star Batman, Astonishing X-Men, Green Lantern, Justice, Justice League of America, New Avengers, Superman/Batman, Moon Knight, Wolverine Origins, X-23: Target X and Y: The Last Man. Our subscription service continues strong for those who want the convenience and assurance of receiving a 9.8 book of their favorite series each month.

Early in 2007, we did a big marketing push pre-selling copies of Amazing Spider-Man #539. I think we ended up selling about 125 preorders for the books which was a pretty good number for us. Turned out that the first reappearance of the black costume was in Friendly Neighborhood Spider-Man #17 not ASM #539. Many dealers/collectors were surprised when that book came out first and quickly FNS #17 sold out and went to a 2nd printing.

Transformers comics began heating up about this time in anticipation of the movie. CGC-certified 9.8 issues of the first Marvel series sold very well at many multiple times guide. Tomb of Dracula, Werewolf by Night, Frankenstein and other Bronze Age Marvel horror books also sold well and continue to sell well. Early issues of G.I. Joe in 9.8 are also hot and command multiple Guide prices.

Stephen King's Dark Tower was a very popular series in 2007. Most issues sold out and all covers were popular. The sketch variants in particular fetch high prices. The 9.9/10.0 market remains very strong with most books selling for 5 or 10 times the price of 9.8s. I've found that about 1-2 of every 500 Modern CGC books I graded gets a 9.9/10 grade. It's very difficult and impossible to preorder. Some books will never reach beyond a 9.8 because of some inherent printing flaw.

Back issues of Amazing Spider-Man from the 80s sell great and are in hot demand. 1980s books are somewhat difficult to grade in 9.8 due to the newsprint paper and overall production quality in comparison to modern day comics.

The Heroes TV show became very popular among comic fans. Wizard created a special edition comic that became a hot commodity in the Spring of '07. Captain America #25 was Marvel's big book of the year with the surprise death of Steve Rogers. Most retailers were taken by surprise and vastly under ordered the book. Even after Marvel announced that more copies were available for reorder many retailers only ordered a small quantity the second time around and were again left without enough copies to fill demand. Marvel received many complaints from retailers who lost out on the profits of the book because they lacked inventory to fill orders. Since then Marvel has promised to inform retailers ahead of time of significant storylines.

In April, we shipped out over 450 copies of Captain America #25 in 9.8. Out of 500 copies graded we received 3 9.9s and no 10.0s. It was our biggest pre-order ever. In order to meet demand we drove the raw copies to LA and had them graded on site by CGC at Wizard World LA.

Every few months we encounter a couple troublesome books to grade. We were unable to grade Ultimate Spider-Man #93 and Incredible Hulk #95 in 9.8. In fact as of this writing only one copy of USM #93 has been graded in 9.8 and no copies exist of Incredible Hulk #95 in 9.8. We have been selling Incredible Hulk #95s in 9.6s for $70. If I owned either one in 9.8, I would price it at $300+. This shows that 9.8s are not a given with modern comics and the books with poor production quality command a premium when you can find them in high grade.

We found a stash of late Bronze Age super-hero books including Spider-Woman #1, a book that has sold well for the past couple years since Marvel has brought back the character in a mainstream role in New Avengers.

In May, Web of Spider-Man #18 was heating up due to the movie. It's the first appearance of Venom in the shadows. It pre-dates Amazing Spider-Man #300 by almost 2 years. Only one CGC-certified 9.8 exists and it last sold in April 2007 for $575; 9.6 copies sell for around $50-75. As a whole I think Web of Spider-Man is an undervalued title. It has great stories/covers/art and many early appearances of the black costume – besides it's a personal favorite of mine since I remember buying each issue off the newsstand beginning with issue #1.

There's been much talk about who will be the new Captain America. At the end of Civil War, it was the Punisher who picked up Cap's mask and later in Punisher War Journal #7 he created a new costume which was sort of a blend between the Punisher logo and Captain America's costume. This idea first appeared in What If vol. 2 #51: "What if Punisher Became Captain America." This issue went from the quarter bins to $25 in less than a month. The price has held at $25 for raw copies and CGC-certified 9.8s sell for around $125 (so far only one has been graded in 9.8.)

We've had several subscribers request back issues of Captain America (new series) and have had trouble locating quality copies. It's very difficult to find 9.8 worthy comics once they've hit the back issue bins. This is one of the reasons why we started our 9.8 subscription service where a collector can choose a title and receive each month's issue certified in CGC 9.8 with a reader copy. Our books come directly from the distributor and we carefully prescreen them before sending them to CGC for grading. It's one way to insure that you'll be able to keep your ongoing series in 9.8.

The new Jonah Hex series has been a sleeper hit. Collectors are now seeking out the early issues in 9.8. It's been a personal favorite of mine and I'm glad to see it do well. Walking Dead continues to be a strong title also. Robert Kirkman has the Midas touch and this series has been gold for him. We were lucky to score a couple 9.9s on the title this month. Marvel Two-In-One and Marvel Team-Up have been great back issue sellers in 9.6+. The new series Conan from Dark Horse has been a smash hit and the Linsner cover of #1 sells very well. Each sale we inch the price higher and the book still sells. Note also Red Sonja #1 Linsner cover is a great cover and is also a good seller.

I'm trying to get my hands on back issues of Iron Man because the movie is approaching and I expect the title to heat up – especially #128 the alcohol issue which I hear is a theme in the upcoming film. So far only one copy has been graded in CGC 9.8 but I would expect many collectors will begin pulling that one out of the closet before the film and getting it graded. The cast of the movie sounds great and Robert Downey Jr. should make for a terrific Tony Stark. Iron Man was my favorite character as a child. I had issues #1-200 but the value always paled in comparison to my Cockrum/Byrne run on X-Men. Bob Layton's covers still remain some of my favorites.

There's lots to look forward to in 2008. The movie business has brought new life to the comics market – especially the back issues. Comics as an investment may be one of the best places to place your money if you know the right books to buy. In general, buy the best quality books you can afford; this generally means staying in the 9.4+ category for Silver Age, 9.6+ category for Bronze Age and 9.8+ for Moderns.

The community of collectors who buy, sell, meet and swap information online is increasing all the time. Auction houses and other comic-selling sites are offering online actions to compete with eBay, who is turning off some collectors with increasing fees and little-to-no access to customer service for the individual collector.

About a year ago, I began building a site that I thought would fill another online need/want for collectors — a central place where collectors of any category could easily display, buy, sell, trade and talk about all their collections in one place. There are already sites to display your graded comic collection, and some great message boards about comics. But I wanted to meet the need/want for an online community where you can show off graded and ungraded comics, plus your statues, toys, cards, Pez, antiques, costumes, Grandma's china, Grandpa's guns, or whatever other collectibles a person might have – all under one ID.

This new site, Micurio (www.micurio.com), is being built out with new collections every day, along with features like a collection gallery, personal comments, message boards, personal/vendor pages, classifieds and a buy/sell function. Current users are having fun posting and talking about the widest range of collectibles, like Star Wars statues, Asian antiquities, Transformers, Louis Vuitton dice, classic cars, medieval manuscripts, elongated coins, taxidermy and, of course, plenty of comics. Hope you'll sign up to join the fun (it's free,) and drop me an email at steve@micurio.com to let me know what you think.

ComicLink.com

ComicLink had a banner year in 2007, with sellers achieving record prices for items from many different areas within the comic book market. Of course, Silver and Bronze Age Marvels were the usual standouts (our record auction sales of Amazing Fantasy #15 in 9.4 for $210,000 and 8.5 for $62,000 are cases in point.) Silver and Bronze Age DC comics in high-grade have also come into their own, with collectors recognizing the true scarcity of these issues. Showcase #4 in 8.0 sold for $17,000 within mere hours of being listed on ComicLink! Golden Age also surged, led by the Superman and Batman titles, but fanning out into many different titles and esoteric genres. The Action Comics #1 sale on ComicLink in 2.0 for $85,000 and the All Star Comics #8 sale of a 8.5 for $62,000 are examples of record Golden Age sales realized on ComicLink.

Collection owners are still coming out of the woodwork, and it is always exciting to inform them of how much their comic books and comic art are really worth in today's market. The excitement in a collector's voice when he finds out his 10 cent investment is worth $10,000, and when he realizes top dollar on the Exchange or at Auction will always be priceless. On the other side of the equation, collector-investors continue to appear out of nowhere, nostalgic for their childhood and seeking out new ways to spend their money. Thanks largely to CGC, Baby Boomers continue to see comic books and comic art as undervalued investments, with little risk relative to their stock market alternatives. Now in their mid-30s and spending, Generation Xers are now also a force to be reckoned with. It is simply mind-blowing what Amazing Spider-Man #252's and #300's are going for, not to mention Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles #1, but people buy what they are nostalgic for and then the price goes up.

Those of us that have been around for awhile find the current price levels somewhat hard to believe. But when compared to other scarce and highly demanded pieces of history and art, the comic books and comic art still look inexpensive, with legs to run. A dealer friend of mine likes to say, "sell high, buy higher," which on the surface is counterintuitive. However, the reality is, whether you are a dealer or a collector, that is the only way to get good stuff nowadays. You just need to add "then sell higher still" to the end of it, and that is how to make money in a rising market. We are constantly advising buyers and sellers using our Auction and Exchange services how to do this.

The diversity of the Crippen Pedigree offered something for everyone. (Untamed Love #1 shown)

So what does the future hold? Well, the Silver Surfer looked great! Venom was semi-believable! The upcoming Batman, Iron Man and Hulk movies showcase strong acting and directing talent, and I can't wait to see them. The blockbusters keep on coming and coming! The ever-increasing Hollywood interest, constant advancement of special effects, and insertion of comic book characters into the minds, consciousness and living rooms all over the world bodes very well for comic book prices. So does exposure and support given to this market through such venues as Geppi's Entertainment Museum -- a wonderful project that should be emulated throughout the country.

Matt Nelson and Stephen Ritter Focused on Pedigree comics

As you read this, we hope you're also reading a copy of our long-awaited book on the greatest Golden Age pedigreed collections ever discovered. This full-color book covers nearly 50 famous pedigree collections ranging from the über-famous (Mile High, Larson, San Francisco) to the little known (Toledo, Van Buren, Cookeville.) In addition to the stories behind the discovery and disbursement of these collections, the book includes the existing original lists, loads of pictures and CGC grade averages for each. We even broke down their content by genre, company, and year, displaying the data in color charts and graphs. Ultimately, all of this information was combined to rank the collections in order of greatness, with #1 of course being the incomparable Edgar Church/Mile High pedigree.

If you are a fan of the Golden Age, even if not necessarily of pedigreed comics, you'll absolutely enjoy reading how these collections came about. More than just a book about the greatest existing specimens of our hobby, it's also an examination of 45 different collecting mentalities among a culture of millions who made comic books a part of their everyday lives. It provides a glimpse into the life of a comic book fan from the '30s, '40s, and '50s, long before comics were ever considered collectible or valuable.

Our idea originally encompassed both Silver and Golden Age pedigrees in one volume, but after a point we realized that such an endeavor would take several more years to complete, and produce quite an unwieldy book. So the decision was made to break it up into two volumes, starting with the Golden Age. The Silver Age volume is already in the works, and will follow soon.

A debt of gratitude is owed to the dealers and collectors who were gracious enough to share their knowledge and experience with us to make this book whole. A lot of them have spent the past decades buying and selling pedigrees, and their intimate, and sometimes exclusive knowledge will certainly benefit anyone who reads the book. We plan on continuing this ongoing stream of knowledge, both past and future, through market reports and our website, comicpedigrees.com, which covers current events in the pedigree comic world. And now, on to our first Overstreet report!

Pedigrees of Note This Year: Pedigreed comic books are circulating through the market more today than ever before. We've come a long way since the '80s, a time when pedigrees were nowhere to be found, and knowledge could only be gained through word-of-mouth. As they represent the best this hobby has to offer, this shouldn't come as a surprise to anyone who has spent their time searching out high grade gems for their own collection.

The influx of pedigrees during the '90s filled collections until the seams were about to burst. Then along came the internet and CGC, which opened the floodgates for buying and selling, and coaxed scores of pedigrees back into the market. The past two years have seen some amazing activity in an already amazing decade for these special comics.

Crippen/"D" Pedigree: Heritage made a splash when it landed the giant 11,000 comic collection of David Crippen in late 2005, the biggest pedigree to surface in over a decade. It's taken over a year to sell all of them, but the market has held up well. The immense size and scope of the collection, which covered the most diverse period in comic history, was spread over practically every genre of the Golden Age. This diversity meant something for everyone, and the avoidance of a glut in the market. Crippen grades varied greatly, but most copies present well with unblemished spines and sharp corners. Foxing and average page quality seemed to be the only detractors. Many became the highest graded copy on CGC's census, brought record prices when sold, and will not see the light of day again for several years. Even though 11,000 Crippens entered the market in only 13 months, many will vanish into collections.

Vancouver Pedigree: When the Vancouvers first surfaced for sale in 1996, Steve Geppi bought them all, only releasing a few into the wild starting in 2003. The polar opposite of the Crippen pedigree, Vancouvers number just less than 350, and are best known for their blinding white pages (ranked #1 over all the Golden Age pedigrees). The collection is mainly humor, with only snapshots of more collectible titles and genres mixed among its small numbers. Despite the lack of strong titles and demand issues, this collection received a warm welcome at auction in 2007, most selling for over two to three times top Guide. Eclectic yes, but few in number and high in grade – factors which will ultimately lead to a shortage of supply as demand for pedigrees continue to rise each year.

Central Valley Pedigree: Like the Vancouvers, the Central Valley pedigree is known for its snow white pages and small size. They're a bit earlier than Vancouvers though, focusing more on the early to mid '40s, and representing the strip reprint genre first and foremost. Out of it came some of the prettiest early Batmans and Supermans we've seen in a long time, and a smoking copy of Fantastic Comics #3. Brian Peets, the lucky dog who bought the collection, put the second half up for sale at this year's San Diego Comic-Con. Sales were strong.

MacLaughlin Mile High Collection: As thousands of Crippen books rained from the sky in late 2006, John MacLaughlin's huge collection of Mile Highs hit like a thunderbolt, and some wondered if the market could weather the storm. It did, as a handful of heavy hitters duked it out during auction, pushing many prices to nosebleed level. Astonishingly, few of these books were CGC graded, a testament to the potency of the Mile High pedigree and the appeal of "fresh" material that has been off the market for decades.

Geppi Pedigrees for Auction: To stir up the mix, Steve Geppi dipped deep into his vaults in 2007and auctioned many other pedigrees in sizeable numbers, including Carson City, Cape Cod, Cookeville and New Hampshire. The last three are not currently recognized by CGC, but all have clear identifying marks and share a number of pedigree attributes. The New Hampshires came from the Western portion of Bob Overstreet's collection, which Geppi had purchased lock stock and barrel over a decade ago. Many of Bob's non-pedigree books were auctioned this past year as well, particularly Western, Horror and War.

Lloyd Jacquet File Copies: Even though not usually considered a pedigree, an industry professional's collection always demands respect, especially from someone as illustrious and influential as Lloyd Jacquet. His studio had a hand in many of the best comics to see print in the '30s and '40s, including Marvel Comics #1. Ironically, the Marvel #1 he saved is one of the best in existence.

It was no surprise when Jacquet's personal file copies sold well in auction this past year. David Anderson in Virginia sold many of Geppi's bound volumes from Jacquet's estate, which Geppi had been holding for over a decade. Jerry Weist also sold many Jacquet file copies and personal items in a one-day eBay auction. Prices were strong across the board as collectors snapped up these pieces of history.

Even before the occurrence of these recent events, there's no denying that Mile Highs (and pedigrees in general) are more available now than at any given time in the past. Years ago, the average collector's best hope was to pick from the crumbs. Now he can feast on whatever catches his fancy.

THE PEDIGREE MARKET

Golden Age: Starting at the top, Mile Highs are harder to price than ever before. Back in the day, you could price a Mile High for 3x-5x top Overstreet Guide and get that. But since CGC has sharpened focus on individual grades, prices can run as high as 20x Guide, or as low as whatever Guide value is in that particular grade. With so many Mile Highs on the market, buyers can afford to be choosy. Ultra-cool covers and in-demand titles and characters still demand crazy money, and typically vanish as soon as they appear for sale. This trend never changes.

There doesn't ever seem to be many San Francisco/Tom Reilly books for sale. The true size of this collection seems to be in question, but there's no denying the seductiveness of this pedigree. Its powerful combination of ultra-high grade, white pages, and high demand titles has always placed San Franciscos at the front of the class. Which leaves pedigree collectors wondering…where are the rest of them?

Crowleys are abundant thanks to heavy auction activity of late. Sales are a bit flat, probably since most of the books are from one publisher, and the page quality is average. But many of these are the highest grade on CGC's census, and eventually the market will fully absorb them all, leaving the slower Fawcett collectors scratching their heads.

Golden Age pedigrees that seldom come up for sale: Allentown, Chicago, Denver, Hawkeye, Kansas City, New Hampshire, Nova Scotia, Recil Macon, Toledo, Twilight and Windy City.

Golden Age pedigrees that often have large number of issues available in the market: Bethlehem, Big Apple, Cookeville, Crowley, Gaines, Mile High, Northford, Rockford and White Mountain.

Golden Age pedigrees that frequently surface, but generally not in large numbers: Aurora, Cape Cod, Carson City, Circle 8, Cosmic Aeroplane, Lamont Larson, Lost Valley, Ohio, Okajima, Palo Alto, Pennsylvania, River City, Spokane, and Tom Reilly/San Fran.

Silver Age: Silver Age pedigrees play by a different rulebook. For one, most interest is focused on only a handful of companies, Marvel and DC, with superhero titles dominating the period. This is a dramatic departure from the vast landscape of the Golden Age. The best Silver Age collections usually contain the same books, such as classic Marvel titles like Amazing Spider-Man #1-up or Fantastic Four #1-up. They may also represent the ultra-rare 10 cent DCs of the late '50s, or possibly Dell and Richie Rich.

Because of this more narrow (and currently red hot) period in collecting, it is grade that rules the world of Silver Age pedigrees. With so much attention focused on a considerably smaller sampling of books, the ranking of collections comes down to only grade comparisons. How does the Curator copy of Amazing Fantasy #15 compare to the White Mountain or Ohio copies? This approach also affects the prices Silver Age pedigrees bring. Because demand is so closely tied to grade, pedigreed Silver Age can sometimes sell for the same as non-pedigrees in the same grade, a phenomenon that rarely occurs in the Golden Age pedigree market. Otherwise, pedigreed Silver Age can bring 20% more than non-pedigreed copies in the same grade.

This year has seen a varied range of Silver Age pedigrees come to market, including White Mountain, Northland, Massachusetts, and Pacific Coast. Besides the strong following these collections already have, the fact that Silver Age super-hero comics are hotter than ever have led to incredible sales across the board.

Though a few collections that were auctioned by Heritage and found in California came close, no new Silver Age pedigrees surfaced in 2007. The requirements for Silver Age pedigree status have become more stringent of late due to their prevalence. In fact, many accepted pedigrees containing large numbers of Silver Age issues would not rate a pedigree status if not for their Golden Age content (examples include Bethlehem, Big Apple, Circle 8 and Ohio). Others were grandfathered in (Mohawk Valley), or passed based on more lenient standards from several years ago. It doesn't mean these collections do not have exceptional copies, but as a whole they may lack in average quality or overall quantity.

Silver Age Pedigrees that seldom come up for sale: Circle 8, Cleveland, Don & Maggie, Edenwald, Mohawk Valley, Newsboy, Ohio-Fairborn, Salida and Slabodian.

Silver Age pedigrees that often have large number of issues available in the market: Boston, Don Rosa, Northland, Oakland, Pacific Coast, Western Penn and Winnipeg.

Silver Age pedigrees that frequently surface, but generally not in large numbers: Bethlehem, Big Apple, Bowling Green, Curator, Green River, Massachusetts, Ohio and White Mountain.

The Future of Pedigree Comic Books: Collectors have a better understanding of their comic books now more than ever. As CGC continues to grade and track every vintage comic book passing through their doors, they are slowly pulling back the veil to reveal the true quality of pedigreed collections, and how they compare to each other in grade. Online trading has opened the door to a hoard of new collectors and collections, as Overstreet and GPAnalysis do real-time tracking of sales for more sound investment decision making.

Comicpedigrees.com adds to this information flow, allowing anyone to post pictures of their pedigree comics to the permanent archive. Ultimately, visitors to the site can view the story and scans of any pedigree collection, check original lists, and follow real-time market trends and grade averages for each. As pedigreed comics surface each year, their addition to the website's database will gradually bring each collection back to its whole, allowing us to envision how they looked upon discovery all those years ago. It will be interesting to see how rankings may change as data flows in, especially when newly discovered collections are added.

Sales from 2006 to 2007 have been great; they are up from previous years. Most conventions had higher attendance, with corresponding higher sales. Catalog orders have increased, and sales per order have increased. Despite the competition from auction houses and consignment web-sites, we have been able to purchase many collections with quality material. It seems that many people still prefer the one-on-one attention that they get when selling their collection. We use the Overstreet Comic Book Grading Guide to explain how comics are graded. We also show equivalent books graded by CGC. We explain the market as to what is going to be a good seller so we can pay more for them and explain what will need to be discounted so we have to pay less in order to sell them at a discount.

Golden Age: Golden Age sales have been great for all the major super hero titles. We purchased comics by all the major publishing houses and many esoteric publishers. Most scarce and high grade super heroes sell well at and above Guide. Early DC and Timely were our best sellers with Captain America Comics and Superman being most requested. Even restored books sold well when priced reasonably. Fiction House titles like Planet, Fight and Rangers as well as early Disney titles like Walt Disney's Comics and Stories and Four Color titles are in demand.

Atom Age: We acquired a run of Fox good girl titles like Phantom Lady, Rulah, Zoot and Women Outlaws. We had to pay rather high for them but we were able to sell them above Guide. Crime titles are starting to move a little better with Fox titles doing best. Some obscure titles like Saddle Justice, Moon Girl and Murder Inc. are being collected. Western titles are selling well from most publishers. Early Tarzan still sells if the selection is good. Romance comics are picking up with ACG titles like Confessions of the Lovelorn and My Romantic Adventure selling quickly. War comics are a little mixed with Atlas and DC titles selling well, but small publishers are a little cool. Horror and Sci-Fi titles are moving with ECs still leading the pack with titles like Tales From The Crypt and Weird Science selling at around Guide, despite being reprinted many times.

Silver Age: Super-hero titles still lead in this group with Marvel out-selling DC titles about two to one. Amazing Spider-Man has had a great year, probably because of the huge success of the Spider-Man 3 movie. Early Silver Age keys in mid to high grade are getting a little harder to come by, causing us to pay a higher percentage for these than in previous years. We don't make as much money when we sell them but it is important to have them on the board when we do shows. Humor titles of this era sell well with Harvey titles like Sad Sack and Richie Rich selling best, (probably because they are all still quite affordable for those just wanting to read them) and Archie titles have picked up again. Movie titles are still selling well with many non-comic collectors crossing over to buy actor-specific titles.

Bronze Age: Keys from this era are not as plentiful as they used to be, so we are always looking to buy them. The exceptions are Kirby DC titles like New Gods, Kamandi and Mister Miracle that are in great supply due to speculation. Most other comics from this era are in great supply, but are being collected by many people due to their affordability. Super hero, Monster and Mystery titles with Bernie Wrightson, Mike Kaluta and Neal Adams are always in demand. Most superhero titles from this era sell well, with Adventure, Green Lantern, Justice League, Avengers, Incredible Hulk and Iron Man in high demand.

Magazines: We are one of only a few exhibitors to have a large selection of Comic Magazines in stock and as a result, we had many collectors thank us for providing them a source for this type of material. Most titles sell well at around Guide, with Warren titles always in demand. Savage Sword of Conan is our best selling Marvel magazine. Mad Magazine has been selling better this year than in the past.

Modern Age & Independents: We only stock the titles that collectors of vintage books seem to ask about. High grade X-Men and Amazing Spider-Man sell well but most other titles go to the dollar box. Some better selling independent titles are Xenozoic Tales and Cadillacs and Dinosaurs.

Graded Books: Graded books are selling well and they often get a premium price in high grade. They seem to be the best way to sell comics on auction sites.

Internet Sales: As time goes on, more and more of our business is coming from our web-site. Many people want scans of listed items but with over 40,000 items in our inventory it is not possible to scan all of them. We put some items on eBay for auction but had disappointing results with most of them. We opened up an eBay store to highlight some of our CGC books and were much happier with the results.

In summary, despite the many factors against selling vintage comics at conventions and by catalog, we are on course to have one of our best years ever. Buying has been good and sales are steady. As long as people keep collecting, we should be able provide them with those missing pieces for their collections.

Is it time already for another market report?!? In my 23rd year as an Overstreet contributor/Advisor, the date always seems to creep up quickly. This year saw the expansion of many show promoters, and more comic movie tie-ins than in past years. This brought in new fans, but in some cases not a lot of dollars. The end of 2006, and most of 2007, have been a year of "ups and downs." Let's take a peek at the action I saw.

Golden Age: Always a great seller for me, in nearly any condition, as long as the books aren't restored. Restored books have slowed for me in the past year. Later printing Classics did well and I sold every EC that I could get, and sell, in the $20 to $50 range. While I didn't have any Golden Age "Keys" this year, some sales of note were: The Spirit #3 (Crippen) VG- $150, Batman #5 Fr/GD $400, Walt Disney's Comics & Stories #5 GD/VG $225, Captain Marvel Jr. #4 GD- $125, Four Color #38 GD+ $250, Four Color #178 VG/FN $300, Captain Marvel Adventures #10 GD+ $200, #16 VG $200 and Whiz Comics #5 GD+ $375.

Silver Age: Always a strong seller, in almost every grade. Mid-grade Marvel titles from this period remain slow as they are too pricey for the "readers", and not nice enough for the "graders". Though demand for DC has been stronger than Marvel for me in the past year, Marvel "keys" remain in high demand. Sales worth noting in this area were: Adventure Comics #247 GD $400, Atom #1 GD $90, Avengers #1 FR/GD $200, Captain America #100 FN $80, #109 VF/NM $100, Captain Marvel #1 VF+ $100, Strange Tales #102 VG/FN $100, #107 FN $100, #115 FN $150, Superman's Girlfriend Lois Lane #70 FN/VF $125 and Tales of Suspense #40 VG $300.

Bronze Age: An area that has just been blazing these last few years. Conan remains the big seller for me, with '70s Jack Kirby books close behind. Whether Marvel or DC the "King's" books just keep on selling. DC War books from the 1970s have really picked up in the past year or so as well. Spider-Man books from this time period have seemed to slow up some. Even though the new Fantastic Four movie was only a moderate success, all Silver Surfer books from the Bronze Age don't stick around for long.

Modern Age: What's hot in the Modern Age seems to change on a whim, depending on grade, artist, sketch cover, etc. One thing that seems to stay as reliable as IBM stock........X-Men and Wolverine. You can be at the biggest show in the country, or a small local show, and the muties will always be in demand.

Undergrounds: An area that has really exploded in the last 18 months. A great deal of interest has been generated thanks to Dan Fogel's new and long overdue price guide. Titles that seem to be in perpetual demand include Bogeyman, Tales of Toad, Death Rattle, Yellow Dog, Freak Brothers (almost any printing), Zap Comics (almost any printing). Many people are collecting different printings due to differences in the books from printing to printing (some changed stories.) These days, nearly any older Underground that has art by Robert Crumb, Rick Griffin, Vaughn Bode, Victor Moscoso, Joel Beck, Greg Irons, Gilbert Shelton or Rory Hayes seems to be desirable.

Rock Posters: Another area that has "blown up" in the last year. As many collectors of Underground Comix seem to expand into wanting posters by Irons, Crumb, Shelton, and others. With super-limited printings on many of these posters, this is an area that will continue to grow!

Thanks to everyone I saw, sold to, bought from, or traded with this year!

Matt Schiffman
Collector

Big Little Books: Most of the key and high value BLB titles are centered around Disney titles, and therefore this genre has a difficult time bringing the Superhero collector into the fold. Rarity drives the hobby, and therefore the difficulty of bringing open auction and sale results to the comic collector stifles new interest. Perhaps a few more years of exposure from The Guide will convert comic collectors into the BLB market.

Pulps: With scarce availability and increasing interest, the high grade and key pulps did not surface much in 2007. The previous shift in interest from Shadow and Weird Tales into Horror and other gothic covers still continues, but not many books make it to the open marketplace. The Pulp market still remains one of the most closed and insular niches in our hobby, with new collections and high-grade books, more often than not, privately trading hands.

Platinum Comics: Historically interesting. Visually groundbreaking. And quite expensive if you are in the market for a high-grade copy. But finding their place in the comic medium has been a struggle. A loyal and often vocal pool of collectors are huge fans, but getting the message out has been difficult. Low auction results for the mid to low grade books do not always represent the true difficulty in finding high-grade material, and therefore a PR problem exists. Again, as with the BLB books, continued exposure can only help bring the importance of the hobby to the forefront.

Prices on Silver Age Brave and the Bold show much movement. (#59 shown)

Golden Age Comics: A shift in the perception of Golden Age has been underway over the past two years. Incredible collections have been brought to the marketplace, and not many of these have been from noted collectors or collections. Rewriting of the available supply of these books has kept the discussion boards, comic dinners, and blogs very busy. Never has such a supply of high grade and spectacular Timely books been brought to the market in the past twenty years. Heritage has unearthed some of the most amazing runs of mainline DC and Timely for collectors to see, and interest in the Golden Age has ignited. No longer does a collector have to wonder if a run of All Select could be completed in their lifetime. That was the case for so long, that new doors have opened and that quandary has been shifted to the Silver Age for now. The advent of change is upon the Golden Age and more collections of high quality and interesting books are going to come to the market with increasing frequency. What this does for prices and the overall growth of relevance of these books will be interesting to track.

Atomic Age: Comic Book Marketplace did more for the exposure and growth of this market; its demise seems to have a direct correlation to the pullback of the Atomic Age. Matt Baker, Horror, Sci-Fi and late Timely and DC issues drive the hobby, with Fiction House, Fox, and Standard-Nedor holding its own. Quality material always brings high prices, while mid-grade and slower titles continue to slow down. Spikes in the Western market are purely driven by forces outside the comic hobby, while the Peanuts collector has discovered the comic and original art market for Schulz and driven it into the stratosphere.

Silver Age: Should we be surprised? Should we be shocked? I guess we are supposed to be, but when looking at the past four years of this market, there really is no reason. High grade Marvel and DC continue to dominate, but there are the introductions to the record books from other publishers, although no trend could be called this year. The only real new introduction to the market was the increased interest in the 8.0 to 9.2 Marvels. For years, it had been predicted that these books would begin to come alive, but only this year did they really begin to show upward momentum and carrying strong at the time of this report. Prohibitive prices of the 9.4 and up books and those looking for a very, very high grade 9.2 have collectors searching for these books. Brave and the Bold showed some of the highest DC movement on a percentage basis, and Detective and Batman lead the way with price increases.

Bronze: The health of the Bronze Age market was called into question last year when the volume of high-grade new material continued to find its way onto the market. The predicted pull back on prices did not materialize in the way predicted by some and even the continued growth rate and absorption of these keys ran unabated. While the understood keys held strong, the depth of the Bronze Age showed that in 9.4 or better, quality books will find a home. Neal Adams remains the icon of the era and coupled with Batman, prices still set records. As rarity vs. popularity continues to be defined, the shifting of prices makes this the least understood and most exciting segment of the market over the past five years. Close cross-over toy and paper ephemera in the Bronze Age has allowed collectors to participate in the Mego/Aurora/Fireside/Ideal/Third-Eye marketplace and has only served to enhance the overall interest in the Bronze Age.

Copper Age: As more and more key issues are discovered and more collectors begin to covet these issues, prices are climbing for the established books and new discoveries. The Graphic Novel and collected Hardcover market has its genesis here, and prices for these books often outpace the growth rate of the true first printings. Low print runs, quality packaging from Graphitti, among others, and icon titles make for a potent combination and record prices. Getting a handle on the true print runs for these books has collectors scrambling to unearth the still lingering hidden gems out there. An interesting facet to this genre is the price escalation of the last issue in the print run and also the sheer volume of collectors interested in these last issues. Slight interest has always been the case for these last issues, but the Modern Age has ten-fold the demand on these books. G.I. Joe, Star Wars, Transformers, and the small press books all share this demand. As we only begin to discover the last issue on some of these small press books, it is a fun route for collectors to actually find a piece of evolving comic history in their local shop. Try that with Golden Age.

Pedigree Comics, Inc.

Greetings to everyone reading this report from Pedigree Comics, Inc. 2007 is now two-thirds over (this report was made at the end of August) and we have already eclipsed our record sales totals from 2006 (over $2,000,000 in internet sales!) We only sell CGC certified comics and magazines online (www.PedigreeComics.com) and the CGC Marvel back issue market continues to exceed all of our wildest expectations. High grade Marvels sell like hot cakes off of our website and it would take a significant portion of this price guide to list all of our sales this past year. Instead, I will comment on a few significant trends/collections/segments of the market, focusing solely on CGC certified Marvel (and DC) Silver and Bronze Age comic books (our area of expertise).

As new collectors and consignors find and register onto my website, I notice that a large percentage are baby boomers in their late 30s and, more so, 40s and 50s who have re-entered the comic book market. Almost all of these new registrants are men who collected Marvels in their adolescent years, broke away from comics in their high school and college days (due to girls, sports, lack of funds, etc.) and came back to comics because they now realize how cool they really are and how much they loved collecting them in the first place. The coup de grace is CGC, which has created a trusted and unbiased grading service, as well as a forum for new collectors to meet and exchange comic-related ideas and interests. Comic books are now in the limelight once again (all the recent motion pictures are to thank) and the days of buying over-graded and/or undisclosed restored raw comic books are almost over. Only a fool would make an expensive purchase of a key or significant comic without it being CGC'd, as the experts there check each comic for page content, restoration etc. Collector (and seller) confidence is a wonderful thing in a collectibles market and certification is here to stay (as in sports card, coins and now stamps).

All it takes is a few or even one new collector to re-fuel interest in a genre, title or issue. A perfect example of this has occurred in 2007. In the beginning of the year, a passionate Spidey lover, who wanted only ultra-high grade *Amazing Spider-Man*s from the '60s, began buying as many 9.4 or better ASM's as he could find, many from pedigreed collections. He purchased a significant number of *Spidey*s off of my web site, as well as a few other ones, and in doing so, set new sales records and created a buzz that is still reverberating in our industry. Outrageous multiples of Guide were paid to secure these early Silver Age treasures. I'll just give you a few examples of Pedigree Comics' sales so you will see what I mean: Amazing Spider-Man #10 (9.6) (Curator) for $12,500; #12 (9.6)(Pacific Coast) for $16,500; #14 (9.6)(Pacific Coast) for $37,500; #21 (9.6)(Pacific Coast) for $6,600; #23 (9.6)(Pacific Coast) for $7,000; #27 (9.6)(Pacific Coast) for $6,000; #28 (9.6) (Pacific Coast) for $15,000; #29 (9.6)(Pacific Coast) for $3,250; #30 (9.6)(Boston) for $3,400; #32 (9.6) (Massachusetts) for $3,250; #38 (9.6)(Golden State) for $2,800; #40 (9.6)(Pacific Coast) for $6,400; #52 (9.6) for $7,000 and #55 (9.6)(Hollywood Hills) for $1,800. This same collector also purchased from us the Curator copy of Amazing Fantasy #15 for $60,000 in June.

I have noticed the after-effects of all of these record purchases as sales of Amazing Spider-Man issues have been incredibly brisk throughout 2007. Sure, Amazing Spider-Man has always been a consistent top seller, but the multiples we have been seeing in 2007 has been ridiculous, a direct result of the almost crazed spending of our new customer. This same scenario occurred in the latter part of the year when a new Fantastic Four lover entered the market. His entrance mirrored the release of the second FF motion picture ("Rise of the Silver Surfer") and he only wanted the highest or second highest CGC-rated copies. Sales of ultra high grade early *Fantastic Four*s have not, historically, been as brisk as other mainstream titles (high Guide values are to blame) but that all changed when this frenzied collector/ investor hit my site. The evidence is as follows: Fantastic Four #11 (9.4) for $11,200; #17 (9.4) for $4,850; #27 (9.6) for $5650; #29 (9.4) for $2,800; #34 (9.4) for $900; #53 (9.6) for $1050; #66 (9.6)(Hollywood Hills) for $1400; #70 (9.6) for $500; #84 (9.6) for $375; #87 (9.6) for $350 and #95 (9.6) for $300. Other strong Fantastic Four sales were a function of this new customer's record purchases: #1 (8.0) for $22,500; #14 (9.6) for $6,000; #15 (9.6) for $5,250; #20 (9.4) for $5,000; #22 (9.4) for $1,700; #30 (9.4) for $1,250; #32 (9.4)(Massachusetts) for $1,325; #44 (9.6) for $900; #48 (9.6) for $3,800; #48 (9.6) for $3,600; #55 (9.6) for $2,250; #67 (9.4)(White Mountain) for $650; #73 (9.6) (Massachusetts) for $700 and many more.

It doesn't necessarily take a new collector to push sales into the stratosphere. One of our best customers, an across the board CGC Silver Age collector, turned his attention in 2007 toward the early Tales to Astonish issues and the results have been, well, astonishing. He only likes certified 9.4s (good luck finding 9.6s on these early Ant-Man/Giant-Man books!) but will settle for a 9.2 if a Near-Mint isn't available. Pedigrees are favored too as these recent sales exhibit: Tales to Astonish #37 (9.4) for $2,700; #38 (9.4) for $2,300; #39 (9.4) for $1,900; #41 (9.2) for $580; #41 (9.4) for $1,600; #42 (9.4)(Western Penn) for $1,900; #43 (9.4)(Massachusetts) for $2,750; #44 (9.4) for $2,900; #45 (9.4) for $1,300; #47 (9.4)(Northland) for $1,250; #48 (9.4) for $1,200; #50 (9.4) for $750; #54 (9.4) for $500; #55 (9.4)(Northland) for $500; #56 (9.4) for $650; #58 (9.4)(Northland) for $900.

Other early Tales to Astonish issues achieved remarkable prices as well, spurred by the aforementioned customer. Some of these include: #27 (9.2) for $17,000; #38 (9.4) for $2,175; #39 (9.6)(White Mountain) for $4,500; #47 (9.4) for $750; #51 (9.4) for $650; #53 (9.4) for $500; #57 (9.6)(White Mountain) for $2,650 and another #57 (9.6) for $2,750.

Some flagship Marvel Silver Age titles needed no new collectors or customers to spark interest. Tales of Suspense continued to sell incredibly well in high grade. A few choice sales include Tales of Suspense #39 (9.2) for $25,000; #41 (9.4) for $7,000; #42 (9.4) for $2,800; #43 (9.4) for $4,200; #44 (9.4) for $4,200; #45 (9.4) for $4,200; #46 (9.4) for $2,600; #47 (9.4)(Northland) for $2,700; #49 (9.4) for $3,300; #52 (9.4) for $4,000; #61 (9.4) for $700; #63 (9.6) for $1,900; #65 (9.4) for $900 and #66 (9.4) for $1,000. Journey Into Mystery is another automatic sell. Although not as hot as in its groundbreaking years of 2003 and 2004, the Thunder God still commands a ton of respect here in South Florida, especially the issues in 9.2 and above: Journey Into Mystery #85 (9.2) for $6,000; #86 (9.6) (Massachusetts) for $9,500; #88 (9.4) for $5,100; #91 (9.2) for $1,300; #93 (9.4)(Pacific Coast) for $3,200; #96 (9.6) for $2,600; #96 (9.4)(Massachusetts) for $2,000; #99 (9.6) for $3,000; #100 (9.4)(Massachusetts) for $2,000; #100 (9.4) for $1,900; #101 (9.4) for $1,400; #102 (9.4) for $1,550; #104 (9.6)(Massachusetts) for $4,250; #104 (9.4)(Northland) for $2,400; #104 (9.2) for $1,050; #105 (9.4) for $1,100; #106 (9.4) for $1,800; #111 (9.4) for $1,600; #112 (9.6)(Massachusetts) for $14,500 and #112 (9.6)(Circle 8) for $12,500.

Strange Tales, X-Men, Daredevil, Thor, Silver Surfer, Avengers, Incredible Hulk, Captain America and Iron Man lead the rest of the pack in Silver Age sales. Nick Fury, Agent of S.H.I.E.L.D., Sub-Mariner, Sgt. Fury and His Howling Commandos and Captain Marvel also sell at multiples of Guide off of our website. A few key issues from these titles created record sales for us in 2007: Sgt. Fury #1 (9.4) for $21,500; Strange Tales #101 (9.4) for $10,000; Strange Tales Annual #2 (9.8)(Pacific Coast) for $25,000; Nick Fury #1 (9.8) for $1,500; Incredible Hulk #1 (6.5) for $5,850; Incredible Hulk #102 (9.6) for $1,425; Avengers #3 (9.6) for $4,900 and Avengers #11 (9.6) (Curator) for $3,300.

Overall, the CGC Silver Age Marvel market is stronger than ever. The demand increases almost daily as new collectors learn about CGC, witness the high prices these old funny books are fetching and are more enthusiastic than ever about the hobby due to the influx of new major motion pictures starring household names depicting these characters (i.e. Robert Downey, Jr. as Iron Man). With more and more information at their fingertips (CGC, CGC Registry, CGC chat boards, GPA, Scoop, Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide, etc.), these born again comic lovers with disposable income are getting back into comic collecting fully armed and ready to spend. The supply will never go up so it does not take a genius to figure out that this vibrant section of the hobby should stay vibrant for a long time.

As for the CGC Marvel Bronze Age, I will keep it short as my past few market reports have centered on this section of the market. I can pretty much sum up how hot Bronze Marvels are with one word: Winnipeg. I purchased almost all of the Bronze (and Copper) Age Marvels from the Winnipeg pedigree, founded in late 1996 and early 1997, and I have been getting them graded by the CGC and selling them on my website for the past 3 years. The results have been beyond description.

Whereas some non-pedigreed titles do not sell at high multiples, Winnipeg books smash all GPA sales figures and consistently sell as soon as we list them in the new arrivals section of the Pedigree Comics Website. This is not an exaggeration. The predominance of titles listed sell at the ask price, issue by issue, within moments of their listing. When these Winnipeg collectors read the "Latest News" portion of the site and find out when new Winnipegs are going to be uploaded, they are ready! What makes Winnipegs so enticing and attractive are the bone white pages (over 95% of Winnipegs have strict white pages) incredible cover gloss, perfect structure and an amazing, just-printed look and feel from having been meticulously stored by the original owners in the cool and dry climate of Western Canada.

We started listing the Bronze Age Winnipegs in 2004 and have never stopped. Almost all the major titles from the '70s and '80s have already been listed with amazing results. In 2007, the following titles were met with the same unbridled enthusiasm: Fantastic Four, Captain Marvel, Creatures on the Loose, Iron Man, Master of Kung Fu, Marvel Team-Up, Marvel Two-In-One, Incredible Hulk, Doctor Strange, Spectacular Spider-Man, Web of Spider-Man, Defenders, Ghost Rider, Thor, Dazzler, Daredevil, Official Index to the Marvel Universe, Doc Savage, Amazing Spider-Man, Spider-Woman, Skull the Slayer, Nova, Ka-zar the Savage and more. Unbelievably, almost every Winnipeg sale constituted a record one according to the sales figures maintained by the GPA. We anticipate this trend to continue as we have hundreds more Winnipeg Bronze and Copper Marvels to list in 2008.

A CGC Registry Flash set sold at a rapid pace. (#106 shown)

The final area of the market I will comment on is, surprisingly, the DC one (1960s, '70s and '80s The Flash in particular). Although we are associated most frequently with high grade Marvels (most likely by design as I have always collected Marvels as opposed to DCs), the biggest spark from our site (and from the entire hobby for that matter) in 2007 came from the incredible, near-complete Flash run (issues #105-350) of noted collector Steve Rubin that he consigned to us in August. In fact, the listing of this #1 CGC Registry set constituted the most significant sale of any run in many, many years. An amazing 231 out of the possible 247 issues of the title were present in the collection (a whopping 93%), and almost all of the books were 9.4 or higher with most being the top certified copy. The reaction to the listing was unbelievable, as over two-thirds of the run has sold as of late August 2007 (with many other anticipated sales not finalized as of this writing). There were dozens of interested collectors bidding and buying these books at a rapid pace. Many of the top certified issues were gobbled up within seconds of their respective listings even though none were pre-sold or listed as pending before being uploaded. I found myself scratching my head thinking "Make Mine DC!".

What made the sales even more amazing was the fact that two other significant (but not as voluminous or as high of grade) Flash collections were sold by the same auction house within 9 months of our listing, the second one only a few days prior to ours. With that many 9.4 or better Flash issues on the market within months, I was not sure if the Flash collectors out there had had their fill. Obviously, and to Steve's and my delight, they had not. It goes to show that quality comic books in superior certified condition will always attract attention and find new homes. Another factor in our favor was that a bunch of the issues in the #100s were from Pedigreed collections (mostly Pacific Coast and Western Penn.) The Flash has always been one of DC's best and biggest Silver Age sellers, but there were just as many Bronze Age collectors looking to buy these books. A special thanks is due to Mr. Rubin for bringing his amazing Flash run to market. In Marvel terms, it is almost the equivalent of the highest graded Journey Into Mystery/Thor run (issues #83-300) being offered for sale. Just mind-boggling stuff when you consider how many 9.6s were present in the first 100 issues!

As follows are some highlighted sales from the #1 CGC Registry Flash set: #106 (8.5) $4,000; #109 (9.0) $2,500; #111 (8.5) $1,300; #113 (9.0) $2,850; #114 (8.5) $1,025; #121 (9.2) $4,500; #124 (9.2)(Western Penn) $1,700; #131 (9.4)(Dallas Stephens) $1,250; #133 (9.4) $1,175; #136 (9.4)(Western Penn) $1,750; #138 (9.4) $800; #140 (9.4)(Pacific Coast) $1,200; #141 (9.4)(Pacific Coast) $1,100; #142 (9.6)(Pacific Coast) $1,500; #143 (9.6)(Pacific Coast) $2,200; #144 (9.4)(Western Penn) $800; #146 (9.6)(Pacific Coast) $1,650; #147 (9.6)(Pacific Coast) $1,350; #151 (9.6) $1,550; #153 (9.8)(Pacific Coast) $1,995; #158 (9.6) $975; #160 (9.6) $1,575; #163 (9.6) $900; #164 (9.6) $900; #166 (9.6)(Boston) $900; #169 (9.6) $1,000; #171 (9.8)(Pacific Coast) $1,500; #173 (9.6)(Pacific Coast) $1,500; #175 (9.6) $2,300; #179 (9.6) $850; #180 (9.8) $1,100; #181 (9.6)(Massachusetts) $650; #187 (9.6)(Pacific Coast) $650; #196 (9.6) $600; #200 (9.6) $500; #205 (9.6) $450; #214 (9.6) $600; #229 (9.8) $750; #232 (9.6) $375; #241 (9.8) $200; #275 (9.8) $200 and #300 (9.6) $55. Thanks in part to this run, a few other Flash consignors asked us to list their top-graded early issues and these too were met with very little resistance: Flash #109 (9.2) for $6,000 and Flash #131 (9.6)(Pacific Coast) for $3,000.

In retrospect, 2007 has been a record-breaking year for our hobby and for my company in particular. More and more collectors and consignors are utilizing our non time-based auction services to buy and sell their prized high grade CGC certified comics and magazines. Collecting comic books can be such an amazing thing. We hope we have made it more informative, interesting and enjoyable for everyone.

See you next year!

ComicConnect.com

2007 marked the beginning of an experiment called ComicConnect.com. More and more, we've recognized a growing disenfranchisement among comic collectors with the skyrocketing fees of eBay and auction houses. These rising costs don't make sense to us, especially now in our Internet Age when these businesses have less leverage, and provide less added-value than ever before. This provided the inspiration to build a site that gives comic collectors an alternative and safe place to buy and sell comics. For sellers, we sought to provide a place for them to showcase their comics to other collectors with no financial impediments such as listing fees or time limits. In short, we wanted to provide members with complete control over selling their comics. For buyers, we sought to provide a more secure method of transactoin by ensuring the comics they buy are from legitimate sellers, and guaranteeing that they receive the merchandise. The site was launched in June and here are the results:

At the time of writing this report (September 2007), members of ComicConnect have listed a cumulative total of just over $3 million dollars worth of material on the website. The system of making offers, and counter-offers, on "Fixed Price" listings has attracted a lot of activity, especially on high-grade Golden, Silver & Bronze Age material. The site also maintains a steady stream of "Daily Auctions," which to date, have seen a lot of Bronze and Modern CGC graded material, as well as reader copies of older comics. In the coming months, ComicConnect plans to host an "Event Auction" coordinating and heavily promoting high-grade material. The development of this Event Auction comes largely at the request of users of the site as a suggestion to further elevate the profile of some of their best material. To date, the feedback we've received from both buyers and sellers has been very positive, and also very helpful in suggesting future initiatives as ways to improve the site.

Listed below are some sales on ComicConnect from its first 3 months. We believe the prices realized compare very favorably to previous online sites and auction houses that sellers have used in the past. The "net amount" received by sellers has also played an important role, as not levying "buyer premiums" was a founding principle, and the consignment rate is only 10%, charged only when an item sells. The site is very easy to use and extremely safe – two major components collectors expressed as a must for an online comics community. (The site was initially free for the first 5 months as a courtesy to all those involved who helped get ComicConnect started.)

Sales included the following CGC-certified comics: Action Comics #40 (6.5) $1000, Action Comics #432 (9.8 Oakland Copy) $300, All-Star Western #4 (9.6) $160, Amazing Fantasy #15 (2.5) $2700, Amazing Spider-Man #2 (4.5) $640, #8 (8.5) $900, #9 (9.4) $7500, #39 (9.6) $4350, #52 (9.4) $1100, #106 (9.6) $750, #122 (9.6) $1200, #129 (9.2) $645, #144 (9.6) $300, #149 (9.6) $500, #157 (9.4) $125, #252 (9.8) $350, Giant-Size Amazing Spider-Man #1 (9.6) $290, Avengers #4 (8.0) $1200, #6 (8.0) $178, #11 (9.2) $600, Batman #227 (9.0) $215, Beware the Creeper #1 (9.6) $260, Captain America #100 (9.6 Boston Copy) $1800, Captain America Comics #9 (6.5) $2550, Captain Marvel Adventures #11 (9.4 Edgar Church/Mile High Copy) $5000, Crime Does Not Pay #24 (7.0) $2200, Daredevil #9 (9.4) $600, Daredevil #57 (9.6) $255, Detective Comics #65 (8.0) $2250, #72 (8.5 Rockford Copy) $1300, #408 (9.4) $265, Doctor Strange #169 (9.6) $754, Fantastic Four #2 (9.0) $8400, #11 (9.4) $10,400, #44 (9.4 Cleveland Copy) $525, Flash Comics #71 (9.4 Big Apple Copy) $2650, Frankenstein Jr. #1 (9.6 File Copy) $374, Green Lantern (SA) #41 (9.4) $400, Hawkman #1 (9.4) $3795, Hero For Hire #1 (9.4) $865, House of Mystery #174 (9.4) $875, House of Secrets #89 (9.4) $200, Incredible Hulk #161 (9.6) $225, #181 (7.5) $625, Iron Man #1 (9.8) $6000, Iron Man #2 (9.6) $550, #55 (8.0) $145, Marvel Team-Up #23 (9.8) $225, Master Comics #21 (6.5 Crowley Copy) $3000, Master Comics #43 (9.0 Crowley Copy) $450, The Ringo Kid #27 (8.0) $175, Silver Surfer #5 (9.4) $595, Spectacular Spider-Man Annual #1 (9.8) $225, Spectre #5 (9.6) $500, Super DC Giant #13 (9.4) $300, Superman #13 (5.5) $749, Tales of Suspense #39 (2.0) $650, Thor #246 (9.4) $131, X-Men #7 (8.0) $485, #29 (9.6) $750, #55 (9.6) $725 and #104 (9.6) $250.

At present, the forecast for ComicConnect.com seems very favorable, as the user-base and listings continue to grow at a near exponential rate. ## Basement Comics

The comic market was alive and strong for 2007 and while we write this report before the last quarter of the year, we feel it will finish just as strong at the end of the year. Sales were steady at the major shows that we attended and were equally impressed by the amount of material we sold thru our eBay online store. If I had to comment at all, it would be that we seemed to sell a great amount of material that we have had in stock for a long while, and most were non-hero comics. It seemed that customers had moved to collecting comics that were not the targets of the high grade hawks that look to pump them up to multiples of Guide, they are looking for bargains. Nothing wrong with that at all actually, the public will find trends and titles that have not been mined and enjoy them while they can and get the most out of their money.

It was recently discussed as to what market should influence The Guide, perhaps a blend or use of all markets are needed to reflect realized prices for comics and material. Its time to jump to the 21st century and get all available info online for buyers of The Overstreet Guide to use. Sources such as "brick and mortar" stores, E-sales, shows and auctions, while each a separate market, all could provide great info for a future online Guide that could be very helpful to buyers.

eBay: We set up a E-Store thru eBay almost two years ago and have been amazed at its growth and the power of selling your comics to buyers outside the USA. Our international sales have more than tripled in the last year and that means lots of material leaving the country that may never get back here to be sold in the USA again. Buyers seemed to be very interested in titles such as Aquaman, Plop, THUNDER Agents, Rip Hunter, CGC Graded items, Creepy, Eerie and lots of Conan magazines shipped across the Atlantic this year. As long as items are strictly graded and priced at Guide, repeat buyers line up to get more of the items after they establish a relationship with the seller. I never knew there were so many comic collectors in Portugal looking for CGC graded books until I opened this online store.

We also have found our niche and aggressively purchase and list items such as strip reprints of all kinds including Comic Review Magazine, Warren magazines, Fangoria, specialized trade paperbacks and graphic novels. It seems that esoteric items that we could never sell at any show eventually sell within a year if we take the time to list them and describe them accurately.

Books of note that have sold through our E-Store include: Funny Pages #6-12 Lost Valley Copies $9,000 for the group, three Ken Kelly paintings that averaged $1,200 each, Air Pirates Funnies #2 VF+ $120, Whiz Comics 10 VG $435, a Bill Gaines Rejection Letter $90, Exciting Comics #59 VF $500, Sign of Zorro Exhibitor's Campaign Book $50, large amounts of Spirit sections and Warren magazines that are to numerous to list. I can say that our online store is not a bargain bin looking to dump at deep discount levels, we instead take the time to list interesting items and have no problem selling them at Guide prices.

Good Old Fashioned Comic Conventions: I have been attending comic shows first as a helper for Bob Cook (a local comic legend) since 1975 and have graduated to having my own booths and "winged monkeys" of my own to help me sell my wares now. The excitement of getting to the show and running around on the floor trying to score material for future sales still excites me just as much now as then, but times are changing.

While the San Diego Comic-Con is by far the largest event, I saw even less old time sellers and old comic booths than the year before! Cost of gasoline, hotels and shipping of inventory puts many of us retailers deep in the hole before we make our first dollar at the show. So doing shows far from home may just be replaced with E-Selling. I was amazed by many of the top end buyers saying that they may not brave the huge crowds next year for the show. Sales were decent but a week long event just seems to tire me out and it takes another week just to recover.

However, I can say that Wizard World Chicago for us is still the best buying show of the entire season. Sure, we sold a good amount to make it worth the day long ride as well. We had a phenomenal year at shows and sold lots of odd-ball material along with the usual issues that are asked for endlessly. NY Comic Con, Pittsburgh, FX were all pretty decent and we had a great chance to sell, buy and push the online store to as many customers that we can while out on the road.

Many books change hands at these mega-shows and do in the end affect trends, and more importantly, mold hopefully new buyers of older material for the future. Some goodies sold at conventions this year: King Kong Movie Program 1933 $1,000, Weird Suspenstories #1 Rare Canadian version CGC 6.5 $1,300, Incredible Hulk #1 FN+ $3,000, Avengers #1 VG $500, Daredevil #1 VG $515, Tales of Suspense #39 FN $2850, Journey into Mystery #83 FN+ $1455, Tarzan #3 Dell File Copy $350, Incredible Hulk #181 FN+ $675, WOW What a Magazine #1-4 avg GD Condition $5,000 for set, Showcase #1 GD- $160, Pussycat #1 magazine $250, Hit Comics #6 G-GD+ $375, Slow Death #1 VF+ $55, Phantom Lady #22 GD+ $240, Star Studded fanzine #1 VF $100.

We were glad to see lots of new faces at shows and lots of new customers eagerly looking for all types of comics this year. Seemed like Dell and Charlton and Undergrounds were finally getting some attention again and it seemed like Funny Animal titles were being sought after just a little more this year. DC Digest, Treasury Editions, Magazines and Fanzines still are constant sellers and we always are quick to pull the trigger on a collection full of these items.

I guess in closing I will say the same old thing I say to all my customers, "Buy what you like, you may own it a long time!"

Doug Sulipa
Doug Sulipa's Comic World

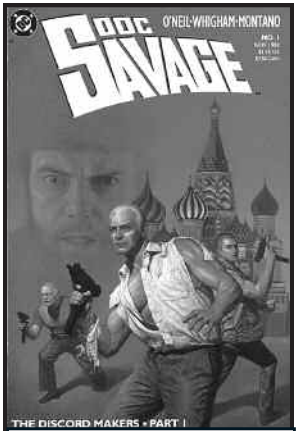
We bought and sold a lot of comics in the last year. There was the usual relentless demand for popular key issues, in almost all grades. High Grade Marvel and DC comics were the most requested, but we were only able to supply about 20% of the issues requested in these grades. Most of the 9.0 thru 9.8 graded raw comics we sold were from the 1975 thru 1987 era. If we had more 9.0 and up copies from 1974 and older, we would have sold a lot of them. We also had a lot of requests for GD to VF Comics from the 1960 thru 2006 era from all publishers and were able to fill about 90% of those orders. About 50% of 1960s comics we did not have in VF or better, otherwise we would have fulfilled about 95% of want lists. We sold a lot of 1950s comics, but especially Dell comics. I specialize in trying to carry all comics printed from 1960 to 2006 in the $100 and under price range. Although we do have a decent selection of "Over-$100" comics and probably 50,000 comics from the 1950s and perhaps 2,000 comics from the 1940s. The great majority of collectors buy only the more affordable under-$100 comics. If at one point in their lives, they have more disposable income, collectors might graduate to the more expensive items they have always dreamed about. In the late 1980s, I was still dealing in a lot of high end items but made the decision to instead try to stock everything (in the under $100 price range) from all publishers. I have never regretted the decision and have since handled almost everything printed in North American comics related items from the last 50 years, most items many many times. In addition I got into everything comics-related and also into all types of non-comic magazines, books, records and posters. I have a very loyal group of buyers who constantly thank me for carrying 1000s of items almost no one else can be bothered with. It was, and still is, an amazing experience. For me, Sad Sack and Jughead comics outsell both Wolverine and X-Men comics, mainly because the latter are carried by almost every back issue dealer nationwide, so why bother ordering by mail. How many dealers have a decent selection of Harvey and Archie comics? Superhero comic sales have been strong in the last year (to investors, in part because of all the films, but also to buyers wanting to fill in runs and get a lot of books all in one place, with good grading). But the oddball comics that most dealers do not carry are much more notable, because they tend to sell well in all grades, at higher percentages of Guide and at a much better turnover rate. As in any collectible field, dealers who specialize and excel in one area of collecting obtain better prices and have a strong repeat clientele and that has been our aim. eBay sellers will usually tell you that it is hard to convert one-time buyers into new long-term clients. The presence of the Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide since 1970 has done a superior job of stablizing prices, far beyond what we see in most other hobbies. Many would say it has over-inflated superhero comics, but that is not so, because if you take into account strict grading, you will find the majority of items that sell are within the 50% to 150% of Guide price range, which it relatively stable for a collectibles hobby. Without The Guide, we would see wildly erratic pricing (as with the used paperback market, where books that should sell for $2 can bring $50, and books that should sell for $50 can he had for $10.) For example, Richie Rich Digest Magazine (10/1986-10/1994) #11-42 are near impossible to find for collectors who need them, and low Guide prices make them sell instantly when they do show up. Demand is 5-10 times bigger than supply, and in another marketplace one would expect them to sell for $25-$50 each range, but they simply remain sold out everywhere in the $5 each and under range. Just a few lesser known items that consistesntly sell for 200% or more include: Josie #45, 106, Transformers #80, Savage Sword #235, Katy Keene Digests, Creepshow, Betty and Veronica #320, many give-away comics, Dennis and the Bible Kids, Masters of the Universe #12, 13, Moebius Graphic Novels, Hunger Dogs GN, Squadron Supreme: Death of a Universe GN, Conan GNs, Charlton Comic Digests, and many more. Many investors try hard to make money in comics and do not succeed, while many collectors who do not follow the trend and buy what they like, do make good money when selling their collections. It is always recommended that you go after the items that you enjoy. Once there, learn about them and use that knowledge to guide your buying decisions.

Alternative/Independant Comics: We have managed to sell to the "Book Reading Crowd" (normally non-comic collectors), quite a lot of alternative comics from popular media, at a much faster rate than to comic collectors, including; (Doc Savage, Shadow, most horror, Aliens, Predator, Star Wars, Crow, Vampires, Werewolf, Zombies, Anne Rice, H.P. Lovecraft, Adult, Underground, Planet of the Apes, Green Hornet, Westerns, Vietnam War, WW2, Animated Cartoons, Bone, Buffy, Classics, Religious, all EC Reprints, Indiana Jones, Elric, Phantom, Sherlock Holmes, 1990s Robotech, James Bond, Personality, Simpsons, top comic artists, much TV related, Tarzan, Robert E. Howard, movie adaptations, SF and other author book adaptations, comic strips, Dick Tracy, etc. These buyers appreciate them for what they are, good reading and are not particularily concerned about condition.

Comic collectors are fascinated with all 1980 and older comics, including: "Ground-Level" Comics, Underground Comics, Ditto-Zines and Fanzines. Most of these have small print runs and are never seen by the average collector. When you add to that the challenge of locating these scarce and cool items, and at still reasoanble price levels, it is easy to see why many fans get hooked. These sell in any and all grades, with most attempts at price guides being futile, as pure supply and demand is the rule. Record prices and demand continue for the best known of the "Investment Alternate" comics (at 150-300% Guide,) including: Albedo #1,2, Cerebus #1-21, Elflord (Nightwind: 1980-82) #1-15, Orb #1, TMNT #1, etc.

We have over 50,000 different Independent comics from the 1980-2006 era in stock, surely the biggest selection anywhere, with well over 1/3 not listed in the Guide. Probably only about 10% of them were overprinted, giving the false impression that they are all common and worthless. Millions of these comics were dumped in bargain bins and many are no longer common in high grade, because of over-handling. Many had small print runs of only 1000-5000 copies, making them among the scarcest comics of the last 30 years. Yet about 95% can be had for under $5.00. So if you want an affordable area to collect, with endless variety and lots of surprises, this is for you.



The "Book Reading Crowd" finds titles like Doc Savage popular, regardless of condition. (#1 from the 1988 series shown)

Some of the bestsellers (at 120-175% Guide) include: Alien Encounters, Aliens (1988 mini), Alien Worlds, all Alan Moore tites, Armour, Army of Darkness($20 ea), Berni Wrightson Master of Macabre, Big Apple, Blackthorne, 3-D Zone and other 3-D comics (G.I. Joe, Star Wars, Transformers, Harvey, TV etc), Blazing Combat (Apple), Blood of Dracula (Wrightson issues), Bone, Cody Starbuck(1978), 1980s Continuity Comics (Adams, etc), Cobalt Blue (1977), Crow #1-3, Critters #1-5,48-50(scarce), Crow(1st series), Crusaders #1 (Southern Knights), Deadworld, Dick Tracy (Blackthorne) #71-99, Dick Tracy Reuben Award series, Echo of Futurepast, Eddie Campbell's Bacchus, Eightball, Elfquest, Fantasy Quarterly #1, Faust, Femforce, Flaming Carrot #1-5, Galaxia, Gasm, Gobbledygook (1984), Grendel (Comico), Hate, Hobbit, Hot Stuf (Sal Q), How to Draw series (Transformers and G.I. Joe), Imagine(Star Reach), John Byrne's Next Men #21, Judge Dredd, Justice Machine (Noble) #1-3 and Annual #1, Leather & Lace, Lone Wolf & Cub #1,41-45; Love and Rockets #1-20, Macross #1(1984), Mage (1984) #1-7, Magnus #1-12, Magazine #1-4, Mr. A series (Ditko), Miracleman #11-24 (Red Hot), Nexus (Capital) #1-3, Ninja High School (1986/87), Nucleus, Oktoberfest, Omaha Cat Dancer, Omen (Vigil), ORB, all Paragon Pub (pre-1982 titles, Femzine etc.,) Phantacea, Planet of the Apes(all), Power Comics(1970s), Primer (Comico), Quadrant, Quack (Star Reach), Rai #1-10, Rock Comics (Adams-a), Solar #1-10, Spirit, Star Reach, Tales Too Terrible to Tell (hot and scarce), Tank Girl, Tarzan(all), Tick, Transit, Twisted Tales, Uncensored Mouse, Untamed Love, Usagi Yojimbo #1-5, Vortex, Wally Wood's Thunder Agents, Weird Romance, World of Wood, Xenozoic Tales, Yummy Fur, Zen (1987), Zot and more.

Archie Comics: We have a giant selection of 35,000 Archie Comics and 10,000 Digests, thus they are a specialty and one of our bestsellers. Since there are so many to choose from, collectors have seemed focused on their favorite characters, and/or anything that could be considered a key issue including Giants, #100s, last issues, X-overs, monster covers, origins, all 1980s appearances of Cheryl Blossom/Josie/Sabrina, etc. The High-Grade collectors mainly seem interested in Betty and Veronica, Red Circle Horror and key issues, but most of these are scarce in better than VF, so we mainly had and sold only 1980s and newer issues in 9.0 or better. The only exceptions were the Archie digests of the 1974-1985 era, as we bought and sold over 100 high grade 9.0-9.6 copies from the Manitoba Collection at 125-300% Guide. Most buyers were just happy to find someone who had what they needed in any grade, thus we sold mainly GD thru FN copies all through the year. Archie's Betty and Veronica was by far the best seller, with #1-30, 320-347 being hot sellers and very hard to keep in stock. B&V #320(1st Cheryl Blossom) is the #1 most requested Archie and when we can locate it at all it is worth 200% Guide. 1950 and older Golden Age Archies are in very low supply and have big demand, bringing 120-150% Guide. 1951-1960 Archies are even getting scarcer as more disappear into permanent collections. It is getting more commonplace for overgraded scarce and key issue Archies to sell on eBay for 150-300% Guide in actual grade, especially on lower graded and more affordable copies. All Dan DeCarlo art comics are in high demand, including all his non-Archie comics and even his Adult cartoon digests.

Early issues of Archie's Girls Betty and Veronica are best sellers by far. (#1 shown)

With the last Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles movie came an unexpected demand for the Archie comics, but not the Mirage Pub. ones. Presumably it is because the Archie editions had widespread newsstand distribution. The 1988-1990 titles are mostly still relatively common, but the 1991-up issues are scarce. Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles Adventures #50-72, Specials #6-10 and Digests all had low print runs and are now quite scarce, and are suddenly in big demand, bringing 200-400% Guide, with virtually every dealer everywhere sold out (#72 in VF/NM brings $30.) The Mighty Mutanimals in Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles Adventures are extra hot (1st app. in #19, and #51-54.) The Mighty Mutanimals (4/1992-6/1993) is a hot title (current VF/NM values are: #1=$6; #2-4=$4; #5-7=$6; #8=$8; #9=$12.) Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles Adventures Special (1992-1994) is a hot title (current VF/NM values are: #1,2,4-6=$6; #7-9=$12; #10=$20.) TMNT Mutant Universe Sourcebook is a hot title (current VF/NM values are: #1,2=$10; Update=$15.)

Atlas/Marvel Comics: We had a lot of requests for the pre-Marvel horror/SF prototype issues and have virtually sold out (120-135% Guide). Millie the Model #18-93(Dan DeCarlo) were in huge demand and we nearly sold out (125-150% Guide). All the Western titles sold well, but especially those that became Marvel (Gunsmoke Western, Kid Colt, Rawhide Kid, Ringo Kid, Two Gun Kid) at 110-125% Guide. We sold every $50 and under Atlas in stock that had Dan DeCarlo art (120-135% Guide.) The most popular genre this year was the Teenage titles at 125-150% Guide, including: Cindy, Frankie, Georgie, Hedy Devine, Jeannie, Kathy, Linda Carter, Millie the Model (all titles), Miss America, Mitzi, My Friend Irma, Nellie the Nurse, Patsy Walker (all titles), Tessie the Typist, Teen and Wendy Parker. All Horror/SF and War titles were steady sellers (115-125% Guide). The other genres sold slower (but still better than many other publishers of same vintage) through the year (at 100-120% Guide) including: Crime/Mystery, Funny Animal, Humor /Parody, Romance, Sports, Spy titles.

Atlas/Seaboard Comics: We sold more 9.0 and up High Grade copies this year than any other, mainly from the Manitoba collection (125-200%+ Guide.) There are 61 different color comics from this publisher and they are one of the most sought of all publishers for Bronze Age completionists, as the number is so finite and they are historically interesting. Vicki is by far the toughest of the color comics to find, especially the low print #3,4. The titles with art by Adams, Chaykin, Ditko, Toth, Wood, and Wrightson sold fastest as usual. We sold a lot of GD-FN copies also (125-150% Guide.) Most also pick from the 6 comics related mags: Devilina, Thrilling Adventure and Weird Tales of the Macabre sold in all grades, with the scarcer #2s at 150% Guide, and #1s at 125% Guide. Getting a complete set of the 7 non-comic B&W magazines is a great challenge. My Secrets #1(2/1975) is very rare. We sold a GD/VG copy for $50. Sea Monsters #1(1976) is rare (VG $50.) Movie Monsters are harder to find #1(VF$30; FN$20; VG$14); #2-4(VF=$40; FN$=30; VG=$20.) Gothic Romances #1 is rare in any grade and sells instantly in the 300% Guide range.

Charlton Comics: With our 35,000 Charlton comics, we have the world's biggest selection, thus we always do well with them. These comics sell well in all grades, but easily 85% of sales are in the G to FN/VF condition ranges, mainly because most are tough in VF or better. We sold over 100 issues from the Manitoba collection (almost entirely Horror and SF) in 9.0-9.6 grades at 125-200%+ Guide. In addition we sold a lot of Horror/SF and Superhero/Hero comics in VF or better. The other genres actually sell better in FN or lower. The Hanna-Barbera titles were easily the bestsellers in mid-to-lower grades, followed by the TV related titles. All 1960 and older titles were way up in demand, but especially the more obscure titles. By far the most popular hero title was The Phantom, especially #67-74 (Don Newton art issues); Hercules and other titles with Jim Aparo art are up in demand. This year was notable in that we had far more buyers filling in sets, rather than key issue buyers. Collectors who enjoy the hard to find and unusual love the Charlton magazines and odd related items including: Adult Cartoon Titles (Cartoon Carnival, Comedy Capers, Good Humor, 150 Cartoons), Charlton Bullseye, Charlton/Xerox Comic Digests (12+ Different), CPL (Fanzine), Horror Monsters, Mad Monsters, Monsters Attack, Sick magazine, and other non-comic mags by Charlton (True Western, Romance, Movie/TV, Puzzle, etc.).

Our bestsellers (at 120% to 150% Guide) included most 1950-1970 War comics, Abbott and Costello, Barney and Betty, Beetle Bailey, Beyond the Grave, Bionic Woman, Blondie, Blue Beetle, Bobby Sherman, Bugaloos, Bullwinkle, Capt. Atom, Charlton Bullseye (comic and mag), Charlton Premiere, Cheyenne Kid, Cowboy Western, David Cassidy, Dino, Doomsday+1 (Byrne), Dudley Do-Right, EH!, E-Man, Emergency, Flash Gordon, Flintstones, Ghostly Haunts, Ghostly Tales, Ghost Manor, Go-Go, Gorgo, Great Gazoo, Gunfighters, Hanna-Barbera Parade, Haunted, Haunted Love, Hercules (hot), Hong Kong Phooey, Huckleberry Hound, Jetsons, Judo Master, Jungle Jim, Jungle Tales of Tarzan, Kid Montana, Konga, Korg, Magilla Gorilla, Many Ghosts of Dr. Graves, Masked Raider, Midnight Tales, Monster Hunters, Mysterious Suspense, Outer Space, Outlaws of the West, Partridge Family, Pebbles, Phantom, Ponytail, Popeye, Primus, Ronald McDonald, Quick Draw McGraw, Reptisaurus, Ronald McDonald, Sarge Steel, Scary Tales, Scooby Doo, Six Million Dollar Man, Soap Opera Love/Romances, Son of Vulcan, Space Adv., Space 1999, Space War, Speed Buggy, Static, Strange Suspense, Thane, Thunderbolt, Top Cat, Underdog, Unusual Tales, Valley of Dinosaurs, Vengeance Squad, War, Wheelie and the Chopper Bunch, Wyatt Earp, Yang and Yogi Bear.

Christian and Religious Comics: We sell a lot of religious comics, because we have the biggest selection around. The Spire titles are by far the most collected of the genre. These 19 Archie titles are always in the highest demand at 125-150% Guide. Scarce Archie Spires titles (200%+ Guide) include: Archie and Mr. Weatherbee, Archie's Circus, Archie's Date Book, Archie's Festival, Archie's Roller Coaster, Archie's Sports Scene and Christmas with Archie. There are about 38 non-Archie Spire titles and many completionists that want them all (at 125-150% Guide). Spire comics are typically found in G or VG condition, with FN copies being uncommon and VF or better copies being scarce. The bestsellers (at 150-200% Guide) are Hansi the Girl Who Loved the Swastika, Hello I'm Johnny Cash, and Tom Landry and the Dallas Cowboys. Life of Pope John Paul II #1 is the bestselling of all Christian comics at 200-300% Guide. Other consistent DC and Marvel sellers include Easter Story, Francis Brother of the Universe #1, Life of Christ, Limited Collectors Edition C-36 (Bible), Mother Teresa and Life of Christ, Pilgrims Progress and Screwtape Letters.

Classics Illustrated and Related: This year was the opposite of last year, as we sold mostly GD-FN range cheaper editions in the $5-$50 price range. We helped fill in some reading copy runs, with the scarce issues and issues with less printings still being the usual obstacles. First appearance of new art and new cover issues were in even higher demand, as they are a different type of original. Many collectors are just as satisfied with any printings, but want both the old and new cover and art editions. Canadian variant editions (not in Guide) of #1-74 are in high demand, especially those with new illustrated text stories that do not appear in US editions (150-400% of equivalent US edition.) The scarcer Classics Illustrated Junior issues are; #506, 514, 525-529, 532-534,537,540,542,543,547,553,555, 556,558-565,568,571-573,575-577 (FA-VG = 200-300% Guide; FN-VF = 150-200% Guide.) In constant demand are all the scarcer issues of Classics Illustrated (in any printing and in all grades = 120-150% Guide) #8,14,20,21,33,40,43,44,53,66,71,73, 74,84,110,113-118,129,161-169. Once they finish their main sets, many buyers then go out to complete World Around Us, Classics Special Issue, Classics Junior, Famous Authors, Picture Progress, Boys Life, etc. I do well with and carry a large selection of non-Gilberton Classics related items, including: Berklet/First Classics #1-27(#14 up = low print and scarcer), Marvel Classics #1-36, Moby Books BLB Classics (36 Diff), Pocket Classics (72 diff), Clasicos Infantiles (Mexican Juniors), Jack Lake (30+ diff, Modern Junior-r), King Classics, Golden Legacy, Golden Picture Classics, Power Records, Tele-Guide, Marvel-UK Digests, Acclaim Classics, and more. The UK Classics Illustrated with all-new stories and covers never seen in USA are in very high demand in the $25-$150 each range (#158A James Bond Dr. No brings $500 in high grade and became DC's Showcase #43.)

Comic Digests: We have about 15,000 comic digests in stock, thus we are the #1 destination for fans who want to complete sets. Over 85% of what we sold this year were in the GD to FN/VF ranges, going to fans trying to complete various sets. Most of the pre-1994 comics digests were never bagged, as nothing was commonly available to collectors, thus rubbing and handling wear is present on almost all still existing copies. High grade begins at VF on pre-1995 comic digests. Most sets are tough to assemble in even VF, never mind VF/NM or better. Most digests have zero copies graded by CGC, with even the most popular issues have only 1-3 copies each slabbed. In the last 5 years, we managed to buy several collections, especially those from the Manitoba Collection and we have sold over 300 in strict 9.0 or better. But now all the sources have dried up and we will again find it tough to stock even VF or better copies.

The rare Charlton/Xerox Comic Digests bring 200-300% Guide, including Barney and Betty, Bugs Bunny, Dino, Flintstones, Jetsons, Pebbles and Bamm-Bamm, Road Runner, Scooby Doo, Space: 1999, Tweety and Sylvester, Woody Woodpecker and Yogi Bear. The Marvel digests are often requested in high grade, but sell in all grades (135-175% Guide) including Alf, Dennis, G.I. Joe, Haunt of Horror, Spider-Man, Star and Transformers. The DC Digests are most requested in high grade, but sell in all grades (125-150% Guide) including Adventure #491-503, Best of DC #1-71(with 41-71 low print), DC Special Blue Ribbon #1-24, DC Special Series #18,19,23,24, Jonah Hex and other Western Tales 1-3, Tarzan Digest #1. The 1979 Skylark Digests of Doc Savage and Stories from the Twilight Zone are scarce and sell instantly at 200% Guide. Dennis the Menace Pocket Full of Fun #1-50 and Dennis and His Friends #38-46 digests are undervalued and getting scarcer (150-200% Guide). The Gold Key comic digests started it all, with the 1960s issues being the most desirable of all digests (Golden, Mystery, Walt Disney, plus the even scarcer Story Digests of Boris Karloff, Dark Shadows, Ripleys, Tarzan.) They are always regular bestsellers (at 125%-150% Guide in any grade). High grade 9.0 and better GK digests are nearly non-existent.

The Harvey digests were in big demand (1977-1985 = 120-135% Guide; 1986-1993= 150-500% Guide). These Harvey digests had low print runs, are extra scarce, dealers are sold out everywhere. They are on most wantlists (bringing 200-500% Guide in ANY grade.) Casper Adventure Digest #6-8, Casper Digest (10/86-1991) #11-18, Casper Digest (V2; 9/91-11/94) #6-14, Casper Enchanted Tales #6-10, Harvey Wiseguys #3,4, Hot Stuff Digest #2-5, Million Dollar Digest (11/86-11/94) #11-34, New Kids on the Block Digest #1-5, Richie Rich Adventure Digest #4-7, Richie Rich Digest (10/86-10/94) #11-42, Richie Rich Digest Stories #11-17, Richie Rich Digest Winners #11-16, Richie Rich Gold Nuggets #1-4, Richie Rich Million Dollar Digest #6-10, Richie Rich Money World Digest #1-8, Richie Rich Digest (11/77-8/82) #7-9, Wendy Digest #2-5.

Oddball comics sold better in 2007 than in the last 3 years. (FOOM #22 shown)

DC Comics: For the Silver, Bronze Age and on, Batman is seen as the main character to buy from DC. Perhaps only in the Golden Age does Superman become more important to collectors. Especially in the Bronze Age, we see 2-3 times the demand for Batman over Superman. Wonder Woman is hands down the most important female superhero of all time. JLA and JSA are incredibly popular teams, and along with the 3 previous characters, they form the backbone of collectible DC Comics. It is hard to recall that in the 1981-1985 period, that all the above were all slower sellers and had smaller print runs, because Marvel dominated the marketplace. If you check around, you will find no one is heavily stocked on the above in the 1981-1986 era. Perhaps inspired by the success of the new X-Men, Pérez's New Teen Titans hit the market in late 1980 and became a bestseller. Crisis hit the market in 1986 to revamp the entire roster at DC Comics, perhaps the best move they ever made. The Man of Steel 6 issue mini-series in 1986 turned Superman back into the top seller it should have always been. Frank Miller blew away fans and breathed new life into Batman in Dark Knight Returns in 1986. The 1987 Justice League series was the starting point for entrenching their popularity near the top. Pérez's 1987 Wonder Woman series finally restored her to glory. The 1986 Secret Origins series, featured all-new post-Crisis origins for most of the main characters. The 1989 Batman movie blew it into the stratosphere. As a result, most 1989-1990 Batman comics were overprinted. All these 1985 and newer comics form most of the important DC comics that started the Copper Age of comics. The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide glossary now officially defines the Bronze Age as 1970-1984. The above 1985-1989 era comics are good long-term investments in strict 9.0 or better. But take note that the lower print run 1981-1985 era books might outperform them.

Many fans are assembling sets of DCs with Neal Adams covers. The *Tomahawk*s with Adams' covers remain the most elusive in high grades. If you check the CGC Census, you will see only 1-3 copies each exist in 9.0 or better. CGC 9.4 copies would easily bring $500 each, with #116 (the 1st and most wanted issue) probably worth closer to $1000. Up in demand are the classic 1960s covers by Nick Cardy, thus Aquaman and Bat Lash are a bit up in demand. But the most requested Cardy covers are the Teen Titans issues and Romance comics. High Grade CGC copies are still rare.

DC comics seem to attract more readers than Marvel, thus they sell well in all grades. Perhaps it is simply because there are usually more than double the Marvel comics in dealer inventories as compared to DC. There most certainly is a lot of demand for high grade copies, but lower grades are perhaps even more popular, as most buyers seemed to be filling in runs this year, rather than just chasing key issues. Silver and Bronze Age DC have far less copies, and are also much scarcer in high grades, as compared to their Marvel counterparts, yet on average, the Marvels are far more expensive. The sales of new comics from DC often rival and surpass the new Marvels, thus the 1960s-1970s DC seem to be a relative bargain. This year we sold over 700 raw high grade Manitoba collection comics in the 9.0 to 9.8 range from the 1975-1985 era at 125-300% Guide. DC War comics were the most requested and bestsellers in high grade. DC Horror would have rivaled them, if we had not previously sold most of the high grade Manitoba copies. High Grade collectors have started realizing that 1960s DC comics are quite scarce in even VF and I have noticed a sharp increase in sales of VF range copies. Oddball comics sold better than the last 3 years at 120-135% Guide, mostly in GD-FN grades, including Amazing World of DC, Cartoon/Humor, Digests, Fanzines, Fireside Books, Giveaways, Magazines, Paperbacks, Posters, Promo items, Romance, Teenage, Treasuries, TV, War and Western. All DC Horror titles were again top sellers in all grades, especially 1968-1974 era, Giants, Neal Adams and Wrightson art issues. DC Horror and War comics have been getting harder to restock, as supplies continue to dry up.

The bestsellers for us this year (at 110% to 135% Guide) included Action #252-300, 347, 360, 373(Giants), 377-392(Legion), 401-440, Adventure #267-320, 381-400, 428-440, 459-467, 461-466, 491-503, All-American Men of War #82-117, All-New Collectors Edition C-54-56,58, All-Out War, All Star Comics #58-74, Aquaman #50-52, All-Star Comics #59-74, All-Star Western #1-11, Amazing World of DC #1-4,9,14-17, Bat Lash, Batman #121-429, Batman Family #11-20; Best of DC Digest #1-71, Black Magic, Blitzkrieg, Brave and the Bold #59-200, Challengers #74, Crisis #1-12, Dark Mansion #1-4, DC Comics Presents #1,2,26,47,56,77,78,85-88,94,97 and Annual #1, DC 100 Page Super Spectacular #4-22, DC Special #2-4,6,11,28,29, DC Special Series #1,3-13,15,16,18-24,27, DC Special Blue Ribbon Digest #1-24, DC Superstars #17, Detective #311,318, 325, 327,328,355,359,362-364,369-372,385,387, 389,391,392, 394-495, Doorway to Nightmare, 1st Issue Special #1,3,5,7-9,12,13, Flash #105-130, 201-250, 275-313, 340- 350, Flex Mentallo, Fox and Crow, Freedom Fighters, Ghosts #1-40, GI Combat #66-68,83,87-154,200-210, Girls' Love #84-180, Girls' Romances #81-160, Green Lantern (1960-1986) #40,45,59,61,76-123,181-200, Heart Throbs #75-146, Hot Wheels, House of Mystery #174-259,291-300,321, House of Secrets #81-154, Isis #1-8, Joker #1-9, Jonah Hex #1-20,81-92 and Digest #1-3, Justice League of America #91-261, Kamandi #50-59, Legion #259-300, Limited Collectors' Edition C#23-25,32-34,37,39,41,43-46,48-52,57, Men of War, Our Army at War #83-301, Our Fighting Forces #123-162, Plop #1-5, 21-24, New Teen Titans #1-20, Real Screen, Our Army at War #83-250, Our Fighting Forces #123-181, Phantom Stranger #1-41, Rima #1-7, Secret Society of Super-Villains #1-15, Secrets of Haunted House #1-20,41,44, Sgt Rock #302-350,400-422, Shazam! #1,8,12-17, 25-35, Showcase #55,57,60,61,64,70,79-81,83,84, 97-99, Sinister House #1-4, Spectre #1-5, 9, Star Spangled War #84-183, Strange Advs. #205-236, Superboy #80-100, 197-245, Super DC Giant #S-13 thru S-26, Super Friends #1-20, Supergirl (1972) #1-10, Superman #150-200, 233-300, 400-423, Superman's GF Lois Lane #79-137, Superman's Pal Jimmy Olsen #100-150, Superman Family #164-190, Swamp Thing (1982) #20-40, Tales of New Teen Titans #42-44 and Annual #3, Tarzan #207-258, Tarzan Family, Teen Titans (1966) #1-25, 46-53, Time Masters #1-8, Time Warp, Tomahawk #116-119,121,123-130, Unexpected #105-162, Unknown Soldier #205-219,248-268, V for Vendetta, Watchmen, Warlord #1-10, 37-50, Weird Mystery #1-10, Weird War #1-30,64, 68, 93-101, Weird Western #12-39, Weird Worlds, Witching Hour #1-85, Wonder Woman (1942-86) #51-130,171-220, 267-329, Wonder Woman (1987-2007) #51-63, 85-96, 120-200, World's Finest #81-120, 169,173-179, 198-212, 244-282, 320-323, Young Love #39-126 and Young Romance #125-208.

Dell Comics: We have a large selection of 20,000+ Dell comics, thus they always do very well for us. Tarzan comics were the #1 Dell/GK seller of the year, followed not far behind by Turok. TV comics and Western comics were the next most requested this time around. Those with photo covers sell fastest. Next most popular were animated titles from TV cartoons, especially those from Hanna-Barbera. After a period of being moderate to slow, the Movie Classics have again picked up in demand, especially those with photo covers, Horror/SF themes, good art (Manning, Toth, etc.) or John Wayne appearances. Newspaper strip reprint titles have slowed again in sales. Over 90% of Dell buyers purchaed GD-FN copies; FN/VF and better copies were slow sellers. The Guide is low on GD-FN copies, and at the same time high on VF to NM- copies. The wide condition/price spread that works for superhero comics, just does not work as well on other comic genres and especially with Dell. Most investors do not think of Dell when looking for their high grade investments, except perhaps the key issues. Easily over 50% of the pre-1970 Comics we sell to overseas customers are Dell Comics.

Fanzines, Misc. Comic and Cartoon Magazines: We have a giant selection of 10,000 different (non-Marvel/DC), assorted comic and cartoon related magazines, fanzines and related items. I have bought and sold literally 100s of items that I have only seen once in the last 40 years. I really enjoy dealing in "oddball" items, and they certainly abound among these. These are loaded with early and obscure works of now famous artists, and writers (much never reprinted), plus have in-depth articles, pinup covers and art on all the popular characters, through all the way to totally obscure and "the very bad." These can be exciting to collect, as you run across endless things of interest, that most collectors will never see in a lifetime. The majority of these items sell in the $5 to $25 each price range. Most customers are not overly concerned about condition, most are focused on finding any copy of the item of interest.

Giveaway and Promotional Comics: Giveaway comics are fascinating. Less than 25% of those existing are listed in the Guide, but most of the important ones are in fact listed. The Marvel, DC, Popular Character and Popular Artist issues, are just an extension of the collecting the regular series of those titles. Some Promo comics are so rare that it is not unusual to see them sell for 2 times to 100 times Guide prices at auction. Most of those that go for the highest multiples, are the ones not listed in the Guide and usually involve a highly collectible character, especially Spider-Man. When you take into account regional giveaways, pamphlets, flyers, Marvel shareholder items and titles with 10 or more variant printings, Spider-Man collectors will tell you that under 25% are listed in the Guide. If you collect promo items with Spider-Man on the cover, the number suddenly explodes ten-fold into hundreds and perhaps thousands of items. Marvel and DC related promo and ephemera items are in the biggest demand by the fans who love scarcer and oddball items, including these titles: Marvel Age, Marvel Comics Preview (Distributor ashcan promo), Marvel Monthly Catalog, Marvel Quarterly Report, Marvel Requirer, Marvel Spotlight (Retailer promo giveaway from Marvel on slick paper), Marvel Spotlight (Retailer promo giveaway on newsprint), Mega Marvel and Sales to Astonish, handouts, flyers, displays, posters, advance news items, distributor books, shareholder items, Previews items, insert items, sendaway items, toy items, Direct Currents(DC), store and restaraunt promos, and more. Most of these items sell in the $3 to $20 each price ranges, to very active buyers. Supergear Comics (Superman) and Boston Pops' Biff Bam Pops (Spider-Man) are $500-$1000 items in high grade, but impossible to find.

There are over 35 titles of He-Man/Masters of the Universe and over 12 titles of She-Ra/Princess of Power mini-comics that came with the action figures, and if you include variants, it might be double that. These are among the most collected giveaways. The DC comic booklets from Atari video games are in high demand: Atari Force, Centipede and Swordquest. Super Power Collection #1-25, those Kenner Color Gum card size mini-comics (2-3/4" x 4-1/4") are fast sellers (VF $10 ea.) March of Comics are top sellers, but can be extremely elusive. I have many customers who have searched for many years for select issues (125-200% Guide.)

Literally 1000s of non-character giveaways, especially post-1980 titles remain unlisted. Many of these are regional items, which makes them even scarcer. Most collectors collect by: (1) the comic's age, (2) its scarcity and (3) its theme. The most commonly collected themes are: Unknown Superheroes, Politics, Health, Restaurants, Christmas, Foreign Country, Job-Related, Environmental, Educational, Substance Abuse, Sex-related, Institutional, Cartoon, Science, etc. Our #1 best sellers are any and all titles published in Canada, as we have many Canadian comic completionists. The majority of Promo comics are in the $5-$15 price range, with scarce and desirable titles widely varied from $20 to $100 each.

Gold Key Comics (non-Disney): Tarzan was our #1 bestselling Gold Key (and Dell) this year, with VF or better copies the most requested. Reading copies were the next most requested, and finally even mid-grade copies moved well, as many people seemed to want to complete their runs. The scarce Photo Back Cover Variants are selling in all grades (at 125-150% Guide) including: Avengers(TV) #1, Star Trek #1-3, and Wild Wild West #1-2. Demand for Dark Shadows virtually doubled this year, presumably due to the 40th anniversary and the release of seasons on DVD. Demand for Dark Shadows paperbacks was even higher.

Whitman variants of the Gold Key comics and digests published from 11/1971 thru 3/1980 sell moderately well at 125-200% of GK issue values. 1968 Canadian Newsstand Variant cover price issues are still selling to completionists and variant collectors at 115-125% Guide. The 1972-1974 era Gold Keys with 16-page Bonus Fun Catalogues (advertising) make the standard 36 page comics into 52 pagers. These 52 pg. Fun Catalogue issues seem to have a slightly smaller survival rate and tend to be about a grade lower than surrounding issues. It is perhaps time they got identified and had a premium of about 20% added in the Guide.

Demand for high grade copies was up by almost 50%, with these titles bringing 125-150% Guide (for VF or better copies) including: Boris Karloff, Dark Shadows, Dr. Solar, Grimm's Ghost, Korak, John Carter, Magnus Robot Fighter, Mars Patrol, Mighty Samson, Munsters, Occult Files of Dr. Spector, Phantom, Ripley's Believe it or Not, Scooby Doo, Space Family Robinson, Spine Tingling Tales, Star Trek #1-10, Tarzan, Turok, Twilight Zone, Wild Wild West and all Hanna-Barbera #1 and key issues.

These issues are among the bestsellers (selling in all grades at 115-135% Guide) including: Adam-12, Addams Family, Amazing Chan, Auggie Doggie, Banana Splits, Battle of the Planets, Beatles Yellow Submarine, Beetle Bailey, Beneath the Planet of the Apes, Bullwinkle, Close Shaves of Pauline Peril, Dagar, Dan Curtis (Giveaways) #1-9, Family Affair, Fat Albert, Flash Gordon, Flintstones, Fun-In, Funky Phantom, George of the Jungle, Gold Key Spotlight, Gomer Pyle, Hair Bear Bunch, Hanna-Barbera Bandwagon, Happy Days, H.R. Pufnstuf, Huckleberry Hound, Inspector, Jetsons, Kroft Supershow, Lancelot Link, Land of the Giants, Laredo, Lidsville, Little Lulu, Little Monsters, Lone Ranger, Looney Tunes, Lucy Show, Magilla Gorilla, Mighty Mouse, Milton Monster, Mr. Ed, Mr. and Mrs. J. Evil Scientist, My Favorite Martian, Nancy and Sluggo, Peanuts, Peter Potomus, Phantom, Pink Panther, Popeye, Quick Draw McGraw, Rifleman, Smokey Bear, Snagglepuss, Snooper and Blabber, Space Ghost, Super TV Heroes, Three Stooges, UFO Flying Saucers, Underdog, Wacky Races, Wacky Witch, Wagon Train, Yakkey Doodle, and Zody the Mod Rob.

Harvey Comics: 1950s and 1960s Harvey cartoon comics are among our best sellers in any grade, with the biggest problem being trying to re-stock them once sold. The only Harvey comics that seem a bit more plentiful are the Richie Rich, Sad Sack and Casper issues from the 1977-1984 period, otherwise everything else is uncommon to scarce. These comics were traditionally not saved by collectors, thus most copies on the market are "Used" copies from childhood days and casual readers, so high grade copies are scarce to rare. Most of the Harvey cartoons have been around longer than the Marvel superheroes and those generations remember them well. Completing any of the 50+ issues runs can actually be very difficult, as most dealers have only tiny selections. We have 30,000 Harveys, so we help many fans fill in gaps in their sets. High grade copies are hard to find and continue to bring record prices. We managed to get in a batch of about 75 Sad Sack File Copies from the 1960s in 9.0 to 9.4 and sold over 50% of them within the first week at 150-250% Guide. We also sold over 50 more 1976-1984 Richie Rich comics from the Manitoba Collection (9.0-9.6 at 150-300% Guide).

The 1988-1994 Hanna-Barbera and other Harvey cartoon titles had low print runs, but at least can be more easily found in VF. They remain undervalued (VF copies bring $4-$8 ea.). The non-cartoon Harveys are actually good solid sellers and often get forgotten. All 1960s comics with a Richie Rich backup story are more sought, as collectors with near-complete Richie sets are now moving on to these, thus titles like Mutt and Jeff are up in demand. Scooby Doo is hot from all publishers and the Harvey ones are getting scarcer (bringing 200% Guide). All Richie Rich issues #1-10 (over 50 titles of comics and digests) sell 50-150% faster than later issues. Richie Rich is by far the most important and collected character from this publisher and should be a great long-term investment for decades to come.

Bestselling titles (at 130-160% Guide) include Baby Huey, Blondie (undervalued), Casper's Ghostland, Casper and Nightmare, Dagwood, Devil Kids, Flintstones, Fruitman, Hanna-Barbera Giant Size, Harvey Hits, Hot Stuff, Jetsons, Little Dot, Little Dot's Uncles and Aunts, Little Lotta, Playful Little Audrey, Pebbles and Bamm-Bamm, Richie Rich (all 1975 and older,) Sad Sack (all pre-1965,) Spooky, Stumbo Tinytown, Tuff Ghosts, TV Casper and Co., Underdog, Unearthly Spectacular, Wendy and Yogi Bear. Other good sellers (at 115-125% Guide) include Alarming Tales, Alarming Adventures, Astro Comics (giveaway with 15+ variations,) Black Cat, Blast-Off, Casper the Friendy Ghost, Dick Tracy, Felix the Cat, First Love, First Romance, Friendly Ghost Casper, Joe Palooka, Kerry Drake, Little Max, Man in Black, Mazie, Mutt and Jeff, Richie Rich (all 1976 up), Sad Sack(all 1965 up) and Warfront.

IW and Super Reprints: There are a lot of completionists for these publishers, thus they all sell. About 1/3 are common, 1/3 are uncommon, with 1/3 being scarce to rare. Our minimum prices are: (GD=$4; VG=$7; FN=$10; VF=$18), with better titles selling for about 50-100% higher. Those who like old cheap books usually buy reading copies. Completionists usually prefer the higher graded copies. Scarcer titles sell instantly when listed, with many still undervalued in the Guide. Many have Pre-Code reprints at much lower prices than the slightly earlier vintage originals. None of these comics carry the Comics Code, but should have. Superhero, Jungle, Horror/SF, and War titles being the bestsellers. Western, Teenage, Humor, Funny Animal and Cartoon and Romance titles are are all moderate sellers. Top artists include Cole, Crandall, Davis, DeCarlo, Fine, Frazetta, Heath, Kinstler, Kirby, Krigstein, Powell, Severin, Ward, Wood and others. Most of these books are 40-50+ years old, yet reading copies are only in the $5-$10 range.

Liquidity and Beyond: The backbone of the comics back issue market is the Superhero comic. In the pre-1970 years, it was Golden Age superheroes that transformed readers into collectors. From the 1970s to date, it has become the Marvel and DC Silver Age superheroes that dominate the market. Many of us started as younger readers with cartoon, Archie or other comics and drifted into reading superheroes, but it is the Marvel superheroes of the Silver Age in particular and beyond that have driven the Market to the lofty heights we know today. The superhero Universe was a world most of us got hooked on, usually in our pre-teen to teenage years. The quest to read and enjoy more of these classic tales has made many readers into lifetime collectors. As we delve more into the world of comics, many of us tried out other genres of comics: Horror, Sci-Fi, Western, War, TV, Cartoon, etc. A very large portion stayed with Superheroes, but perhaps moved on to try and enjoy those of other publishers too. Naturally the GA superheroes are the rarest, most valuable and are extremely important, but likely over 90% of today's collectors will never purchase a single GA back issue. Most of the comics currently available for sale in dealer inventories are Marvel comics. Well over 50% of the comics currently available for sale are 1981-2007, about 1/3 are Silver thru Bronze Age, about 15% are comic-related items and only about 3% are Golden Age. The vast majority of existing back issues are in collections. In my 36 years as a dealer I estimate I purchased 6 million comics and sold 5 million of them, thus my remaining current stock of just over 1 million comics. When collectors buy these items, few of them worry about future liquidity. If you are buying them to enjoy, this is not a concern. If you are spending large amounts, or a substantial portion of your income, this should be a concern. Currently the biggest gluts in the Market are the 1981-1995 Marvel and DC superhero comics in strict 8.5 Very Fine+ or lower grades, especially those from 1988-1995. Many dealer inventories are loaded with these slow sellers (including about 40% of my own inventory). It needs to be duly noted that for us, 1981-1987 Marvel and DC superhero comics in strict 9.0 or better (especially 9.4 up) are currently among our hottest sellers. Most of the collections we have been offered in the last few years are heavily loaded with average graded 1981-1995 Marvel and DC superhero comics, thus would be yet more overstock for us and of no value (in fact they would take up more valuable space and cost more for labour to process them. Collections like these, if one is able to find a dealer-buyer at all, typically garner offers of 5% to 15% of Guide value (often only 10 cents per book). Meanwhile, the TNC comics (Traditionally Non-Collected) from the 1981-1995 period are uncommon to scarce, including Archie, Harvey, Cartoon, Charlton, Gold Key/ Whitman, Western, War, Horror, Digests, Magazines, Fanzines, Mad and Cracked. These TNC comics are low in stock in most dealer inventories and tend to have a higher wholesale value per unit, as they are harder to re-stock. Yes, most dealers do not care about Harvey and Archie comics, but how many dealers have a decent stock of these collectible items? TNC comics tend to sell well in all grades, for us with a turnover rate of 300% to 1000% better then average graded Superhero comics of the 1981-1995 period. This is the year that I have finally decided to begin clearance sales on our overstock of 1981-1995 Marvel and DC superhero comics, with most being sold in lots of 25-100 comics each in the 50 cents to $1 each wholesale price range. Some sell to dealers, but most sell to fans who just want to READ THEM (Gasp!) So far they have sold quite well and we hope to clear out 300,000+ comics from our warehouse in the next few years. We added in some TNC comic sets to the mix and on average we have yielded about double the average prices as compared to Superhero comics of the period.

Supply and demand plays a large role in the market. If you buy all the same comics as everybody else, you might end up with common and thus slow selling material. If you buy items that are scarce in any condition, you will find a lot more buyers and at better percentages of retail. If you decide to collect the most popular and common characters, and want them saleable at a good price in the future, you will need to buy high grade items that are scarce in condition. These high grade comics need to be able to withstand the strict grading standards of CGC and not just wishful thinking. High grade comics (even those from the 1980s) can be sold successfully in many ways: (1) let CGC grade them and then auction them; (2) sell them to a knowledgeable high grade dealer; (3) sell them to fellow collectors; (4) sell them raw on eBay with large scans to show you know how to grade; (5) display them on the CGC Chat Boards. On the flip side, older comics in low grade sell quite well to readers on eBay and for a decent percentage of Guide.

Savage Sword of Conan
is a set everyone wanted to complete. (#204 shown)

Many collectors bought a lot of comics in the 1980s, only to realize today that they did not hand-select them by today's CGC standards, they did NOT bag and board them on the day of release and they made the mistake of reading them, thus the collection they thought was "Pristine Mint" is now in fact only a bunch of common Very Fine average comics and thus hard to sell.

Marvel Comics: Marvel Superhero comics from the 1961-1964 era are by far the most wanted comics of the Silver Age comics. Yes we all dream about those rare Golden Age comics, but as most collectors today grew up on Marvel Comics, they have become the holy grails of the hobby for many, or even most, fans. This explains the staggering prices received on high grade issues and since most of them are still issued today as new comics, it seems there is no end in sight. Thus the 1961-1964 Marvel Superhero comics sell in every grade. For the 1965-1969 era, low grade and high grade copies sell the fastest, but because even 9.0 copies are getting expensive, I have seen increased demand for nice VF copies. The 1970-1974 era Marvels had small print runs and are scarcer than most of the 1965-1969 issues and are more affordable, so they sell about 2-3 times faster and moving well in all grades. The 1975-1980 era are in high demand, mainly in VF or better. The 1981-1987 Late Bronze to Copper Age comics were in very high demand, but mainly only in strict VF/NM 9.0 or better grades. 1981-1995 Marvel Superhero issues in VG to VF are perhaps the most overstocked comics of all time, and mainly sell in investment grades and as reading copies. Most 1996-2007 Marvels had lower print runs and fetch better prices than 1988-1995 era comics, and they might even be good long-term investments. All good Bronze Age key issues were selling in all grades, but non-key issues of lesser titles were slower. We had a lot of Bronze and Copper Age issues in 9.0 and better from the Manitoba Collection and they sold about three times faster than the more common VG-VF grades. As usual, I sold a lot of oddball comics and other format items, mainly because of our huge selection, including: Cartoon, Humor and Parody, TV/Movie, Romance, Teenage, Toy Related, TV, War, Western, etc, at 125-200% Guide. I also sold more than usual oddball format items, including: Digests, Fanzines, Giveaway/Promo items, Memorabilia, Paperbacks, Posters, Treasuries, Slurpee Cups, Calendars, Portfolios, etc. Many of these odd items are getting harder to restock once sold out.

All Marvel Horror comics and all pre-1985 Marvel magazines (all types) were top sellers in all grades, with high grade the most wanted. Reading copies are always in high demand, and in fact I have sold out on lower graded copies (GD, VG) on many many issues and often have only FN or even VF as my cheapest copies. We have more people trying to fill out the Marvel magazine runs than anything else from this publisher this year. Savage Sword of Conan is a set everyone wanted to complete this year, with the biggest obstacle being the lower printed #200-235 for most buyers. Issues #200-235 are hard to keep in stock even at 150-250% Guide. This year Savage Sword #235 was our bestselling Marvel and constantly sold out (NM=$125; VF/NM=$60; VF=$45; FN=$30; VG=$20; G=$12). If you check out the CGC Census, you will see that the 1970s Marvel Magazines are much 2-10 times scarcer in high grade than their color comic counterparts. From the Manitoba Collection, we had another great year, selling over 900+ raw 1976-1985 era high grade 9.0 to 9.8 Marvel comics, magazines and Treasuries at 125-300% of Guide. The most undervalued comic of the Silver Age is probably Strange Tales Annual #2(7/1973; 4th app. Spider-Man) which precedes Amazing Spider-Man #3 yet lists at 25% of the value. Tales of Suspense #49(1st X-Men x-over) is undervalued too.

The bestsellers for us this year (at 115%-150% Guide) included: Amazing Adventures #1,5-8,11-18, Amazing Spider-Man #1-30, 101-150, 252, 298-300, Astonishing Tales #1-6, 12,13, 21-25, Avengers #1-11, 47-250, Beware, Bizarre Advs., *Capt. National Lampoon Magazines: National Lampoon are loaded with great material that is unknown or forgotten. In the 1950s and 1960s Mad was arguably the greatest parody magazine of them all, but in the 1970s National Lampoon took that position. 90% of the issues we sell are in the GD-FN range. We had about 100+ high grade 1970s issues from the Manitoba collection and sold about 50% of them at 150-200%+ our normal VF range prices.

Included in the title is great art by Adams, Bode, Frazetta, Jeff Jones, Kaluta, Morrow, Romita, Arnold Roth, Barry Windsor-Smith, Gahan Wilson, Berni Wrightson and many others.

We sold about 75 Manitoba collection high grade 9.0-9.6 range copies (120-300% Guide). All are now scarce in strict 9.0 or better. Bestsellers (at 120-135% Guide) included: All-New Collectors' Edition C-54 (Superman vs. Wonder Woman), C-55(Legion), C-56 (Superman vs. Muhammad Ali), Captain America's Bicentennial Battles (Kirby/Smith-a), DC Special Series #27( Batman vs. Hulk), Funtastic World of Hanna Barbera #1-3(New-s), Limited Collectors' Edition C-23 (House of Mystery), (Batman issues = C-25, C-37, C-44, C-51), C-32 (Ghosts), C-34 (Christmas w/Super-Heroes), C-46(JLA), C-48( Superman vs. Flash), Marvel Treasury #24-28(with new material), #1-10(reprints), Superman vs. Spider-Man #1. The Annie, G.I. Joe and Smurfs Treasuries all had small print runs and are scarcer (150% Guide). Rudolph #NN(1972) is one of the rarest Bronze Age comics and the Christmas & Archie Treasury is rare too (both bring 200% Guide). Amazing World of Superman is getting scarcer, but especially in high grade (due to its black-c). The oddball titles are scarce and bring 125% Guide, including: Golden Picture Story Book (1961) ST#1-4, Modern Promotions (1972/73; Beetle Bailey, Flash Gordon, Katzenjammer Kids, Mandrake) and Walt Disney Paint Book series (6 different circa 1975). A forgotten rarity was uncovered this year: a Famous First Edition C-61 Signature Edition (Silver Stone Graphics Pub., 1979, Superman #1 softcover in a portfolio type slipcase; Serial Numbered Edition of 250 copies; signed by Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster; NM- value estimated at $500.)

Tower Comics: Dynamo, Fight the Enemy, Go-Go, Noman, Thunder Agents, Tippy Teen, and Undersea Agents were all great sellers thru the year, selling mostly to readers and fans filling out sets in GD-FN grades (at 110-125% Guide). We did fill a few want lists for VF or better copies, but these are becoming tougher to find in higher grades and very few exist in CGC 9.0 or better. These gems remain undervalued in high grades, considering they contain the talents of Crandall, Ditko, Kane, Wood, etc. They published Good Old Days magazine (1964-1981; $5-$20 ea.) Tower was also a vintage paperback publisher (related to Belmont and Midwood books) with many highly collectible titles.

Variants and Premium Editions: Marvel's 30 and 35 cent Variants are the ones that started the Variant craze. These are some of the highest demand comics of the entire Bronze Age. Guide values are still well below market and even wholesale values, but are finally beginning to creep up. The 30 cent Variants are about 50-200 times scarcer than regular 25 cent printings and should Guide at a minimum of 300% of the 25 cent edition prices (better and scarcer titles bring 500-1000%). The 35 cent Variants are about 200-1000 times scarcer than regular 30 cent printings and should guide at a minimum of 600% the 30 cent edition prices (better and scarcer titles at 800-2000%). Iron Fist #14(35 cent Variant) is the most desirable of the Marvel Variants. The Western, War, Horror and Reprint title issues turn out to be some of the rarest, with raw copies sometimes bringing $50-$200 for 30 Cent Variants in mid-grades and $100-$800 for 35 Cent Variants in mid-grades. Spider-Man titles bring top premiums and should be priced at about 50-100% higher than other Superhero titles. Star Wars #1 (35 cent Variant) still brings top premiums and although it is one of the most common Variants, it has gone unfilled on hundreds of Marvel want lists for up to 25 years (which is strange because regular printings of Star Wars #1 are slow to dead sellers).

Limited Edition Modern Variants (mainly 1990-2007) including Gold Editions, Multiple Cover Variants, Convention Editions, Dynamic Forces, Signed Copies, Hologram covers, Platinum, Polybagged specials, Signed and Numbered, are often red hot upon release. However, most do not perform well in the long-term, because as soon the the newest “hot” Limited Edition Variant gets released, the previous one tends to get forgotten. Unfortunately, this is what happened to Limited Edition Sports Cards, one can always make more new limited editions and the old ones get more and more diluted in value. The ones that seem to hold value and demand, are those in which there is constant demand for the regular editions.

Canadian Newsstand Variant cover price editions sold better than ever before, as awareness spreads. There are far too many of them (5000++) to ever be listed in the main part of the Guide. Many times this year I saw them both intentionally and mistakenly sold as "Rare Price Variants, not listed in Overstreet.” Just two examples of many: a FR/GD Transformers #1 and a G.I. Joe #21 in VG, both sold for over $50 on eBay. In general, these are about 50 to 100 times scarcer than a USA Direct Edition printing. To make matters more difficult, about 90% of them are only FR/GD thru FN/VF, with about 9% in VF or VF+, and perhaps 1% are in VF/NM or better. Dates for existing Canadian Newsstand Cover Price Variants include: Archie comics and digests (1/1984-12/1997); Charlton (2/1983-8/1984); DC (all newsstand comics, magazines and digests from 10/1982-9/1988); Dell (random 1960-1962, plus back cover variants and assorted 1950s cover price variants = regular issues with 15 Cent covers and Giants with 30 cent covers), Gold Key (5-8/1968, and 4/1972-4/1973), Harvey (1960s Giants with 35 Cent cover prices), Mad (some 1964 and 7/1978-7/1979), Marvel (all newsstand comics, magazines and digests from 10/1982-8/1986), Warren (3/1977-3/1983), Whitman (mainly early 1981, and 1983-1984.) We sell these Variants at 135-200% Guide. High grade copies have been known to change hands at 300% or more of Guide. Very few of these Variants have been graded by CGC. For example, Secret Wars #8 has 1885 copies graded, but only one Canadian Variant (in FN) on their Census. One day I expect that Variant collectors will regret not buying these sooner.

Early 1977-1979 Marvel Direct Editions were both intentionally and mistakenly sold as "Whitman Variants of Marvel" comics, all through the year. Only a few Treasuries were actual Whitman editions. Otherwise only the outer plastic bags were actually "Whitman." See Guide #36 on page 125 for full details, or email me. I have witnessed sellers who know they have early Marvel Direct Editions, intentionally sell them as "rare Whitman Variants" in a quest for more money and are often indeed getting rewarded with 200%-1000% selling prices for their efforts. Early Marvel Direct Editions have a Black Diamond on the cover, no "cc" on the cover, and no UPC or obscured UPC Codes etc.) The 1977 issues are most desirable and sell at 120-150% Guide to Variant collectors. For 7/1978 and 3-4/1979, there were only Newsstand Editions printed (with the exceptions of Micronauts and *Shogun Warrior*s, which are often mistaken as reprints, but are actually uncommon Direct 1st printings). Strangely enough, I am told by Variant Completionists, a few 1978-1979 Direct issues are very elusive and scarce, but it’s too early to identify and price these in this newer segment of the collecting market.

A new trend in Variants is the quest for scarce 2nd, 3rd and beyond printings (mostly from Marvel and DC comics in the 1980s to early 1990s). Batman: The Killing Joke (1988) had at least 11 printings, of which typically 65% of the copies on the for-sale market are First Printings, thus gathering a complete set of 11 printings is a very difficult task. Batman #397-399, 401-403, 408-416, 421-425, 430-432 all had at least 2 printings, with some issues having 6 or more printings. About 50% have the printings noted in the indicia inside. The other printings, one can only tell apart by comparing the ads on the back cover. At least 75 different printings exist for these 23 different issues, but most likely the actual number exceeds 100 different. This "Batman Variants" set would be extremely difficult to assemble, as no one knows what exists and many are rare. Other early 1990s and older second printings include X-Men #248,270,275, 282, New Mutants #87, 100, New Warriors #1, G.I. Joe #1-30, Amazing Spider-Man #361, Silver Surfer #34, many assorted other Marvel and DC comics. The strange part is that most later printings are scarcer than First Printings and it would not suprise me to see Variant collecters pay multiples to complete their sets.

Warren, Skywald, Eerie/Stanley and other Horror Comic Mags: Warren magazines are one of the bestselling and fastest turnover items in my entire inventory. They sell in every grade, but the Reading Copies (VG and Lower) are the toughest grades to keep in stock. When Warren folded circa 1983, their back issue department copies got dumped on the market in quantities of about 1000-5000 copies each (more of the low numbers and less of the high numbers). By about 2002, over 95% finally got absorbed by the market, as most of the final copies got dumped on eBay. Suddenly, Horror comics became hot, and literally thousands of collectors found themselves having half to nearly-completed sets of Creepy, Eerie and Vampirella, so they all decided to start filling in these sets. These are by far the most collected titles. This resulted in dramatic price increases and constant demand. Most of our buyers buy groups of 20, 50 or even 100 mags at a time. We have discovered that some issues seem to be much scarcer than others, so the theory is that some issues were initially sold out, and others only available in low quantities, from the Warren Warehouse. It is only the Warehouse that has held back the values of these amazing mags, otherwise under regular market conditions, they would be 200% to 600% higher in price. Blazing Combat #1 and the Anthology (Mail Order only) are scarce in any grade, but rare in 9.0 or better and sell instantly at 200% Guide. The scarcity of Eerie #17 is now legendary (90% of existing copies have chipped interior upper and lower right corners, caused by a dull blade at the factory), with most copies bringing 300%-500% Guide on eBay. Recently a raw FN/VF copy sold for $548.99. I sold the best copy I ever owned 3 years ago for $500. This book's value needs to triple in the Guide and it would still be low. We sold hundreds of high grade copies of Warren mags in the 1975-1983 era from the Manitoba Collection (9.0 to 9.6 copies) at 125-300% Guide.

The scarce and/or high demand Warren magazines include: After Hours #1(1957; 1st Warren mag; Bettie Page) Blazing Combat #1 and Anthology, Comix International, Creepy, Best of Creepy paperback, Dracula (TPB & UK New English Library mag editions,)Edgar Allan Poe's Fall of the House of Usher HC, Eerie, Famous Monsters, FM Convention Books and Paperbacks, Flintstones at New York World's Fair 1964, HELP, Heidi Saha (500 printed? Very RARE,) Monsterland/Forrest J. Ackerman's Monsterland, Monster World (replaces Famous Monsters #70-79), Odd World of Richard Corben, On The Scene Presents Freak-Out, USA, Screen Thrills (1962-1965,) Spacemen, Spirit Special (Mail only, approx. 1500 printed). Teen Love Stories, Tiny Tim, Vampirella, Warren Presents and Wildest Westerns/Favorite Westerns of Filmland.

The Comics Horror mags by Eerie Pub, Globe, Hamilton, Major, Modern Day, Stanley, Tempest Pub, and World Famous are never hot, but are always consistent sellers. Reading copies are in highest demand and we have started to sell out of everything in less than FN Condition. The Eerie and Stanley titles, with their gloriously colorful "Violent Torture, Bondage and Gore" covers and contents, have what everyone remembers and that's why collectors want them. Weird Vampire Tales and Terrors of Dracula are uncommon to scarce and bring 135-150% Guide. The rest sell in all grades in the 120-135% Guide price range, including: Chilling Tales of Horror, Horror Tales, Murder Tales, Shock, Strange Galaxy, Tales from the Tomb, Tales of Killers, Tales of Voodoo, Terror Tales, Web of Horror, Weird, Weird Worlds, and Witches Tales.

The Skywald magazines (Nightmare, Psycho and Scream) are about three to six times scarcer than the average Warren magazine, with the last four issues of each title being the scarcest issues. They sell in all grades bringing at 140-160% Guide. They are very hard to restock once sold, and VF or better copies are getting very hard to find all the time. King magazines (3-7/1971; Boris-a) are rare. Crime-Machine and Hell-Rider are also decent sellers.

Whitman Comics: The 8-12/1980 Whitman issues of former Gold Key titles are finally understood to be scarce and still bring 150-500% Guide prices. The 1983-1984 issues are uncommon and bring 120-200% Guide prices. The Whitman Variants (not yet listed in the Guide) of Gold Keys published from 11/1971 thru 2/1980 are uncommon to scarce, with some rare, depending of the popularity of the character bringing 125-200% of GK issue values. The better non-Cartoon titles (Star Trek, Tarzan, Twilight Zone etc.) approach the high end in pricing. Marvel Whitmans do not exist (see Variants in this report).

We got the most requests ever for the Whitman Variants of DC comics, with most buyers wanting FN or better (but we sold VG and lower to a few buyers completing their runs). We sell most DC Whitmans from this price range (and up): VF/NM=$16; VF=$12; FN=$9; VG=$6; GD=$4.

Comics Buyer's Guide

Overview of the Market: Attendees I saw at 2007 conventions demonstrated (along with comics-shop sales) that it has been another growth year for the comics market. Mind you, the feeding frenzy at Wizard World Chicago seemed based to a large extent on dealers' cutting prices. On the other hand, the top end of the top end of comics collectibles is also seeing big bucks.

And media attention always seems to draw the curious to pay increased attention to the comics from which they came – though minor successes (or downright failures) don't lead to high profits for "investing" in, say, Painkiller Jane (on- and off-screen so quickly that there seemed to be little if any movement) or Ghost Rider (with a little more interest, but . . .) back issues. On the other hand, the third film outing for Spider-Man and the second for Fantastic Four provided better box-office results and more back-issue performance.

Nevertheless, even cautious collectors are looking ahead already to the "dark" version of Batman. Based on fan reaction at Wizard World Chicago to a preview panel for Batman: The Dark Knight, it's not hard to anticipate a wave of collecting nostalgia that a reimagined franchise could bring. Moreover, younger viewers of the 1989 film are now entering the prime "disposable income" demographic and may be looking for support for nostalgia that older collectors don't even feel.

Moving away from super-heroes: Neil Gaiman's and Charles Vess' fantasy series Stardust was brought to the big screen in late summer with Gaiman fans eagerly picking up the movie adaptation, the original comics, and DC's special-edition hardcover collection. However, as back-issue properties, they're still easy to find – which is what fuels collectibles down the line. If everyone takes them for granted today, they may be hard to find when the film is declared a classic a decade from now (which will be 20 years after the first release of #1).

In fact, it's never too late to scout out items that could pay off. Here's the thing: As this is written, the stock market is spitting up blood from an ulcer that threatens to throw the U.S. economy into the hospital. Abandoning the metaphor: When stocks and bonds are questionable investment, investors often look to collectibles as a hedge. If people continue to be nervous about their portfolios, it's almost a tradition that they'll start paying high prices for high-quality rarities.

In the meantime, prices for run-of-the-mill 1940s and 1950s reading copies aren't uncommonly found at what you'd pay for a new comic book you'd find on comics racks today.

Michael Tierney Collector's Edition

At the turn of the new Millennium, things looked pretty grim for the comics industry, especially while new comic sales continued to plummet. But the turnaround that began a few years ago continued on into 2007, and what sells new affects what sells old.

The year started with a duel over the Number One new comics sales spot being fought each month between Marvel and DC. At first the contest was like an old fight movie, with each company taking turns delivering dominating blows. But by the middle of the year, titles with high mainstream recognition like Stephen King's Dark Tower: The Gunslinger and Laurell K. Hamilton's Anita Blake, along with numerous crossover events like World War Hulk, Fallen Son and the X-Men's Endangered Species, placed Marvel firmly in the top spot. And no event in 2007 was bigger than the epilogue to last year's Civil War crossover, when Captain America was assassinated. Retailers had no idea about Cap's death until customers heard it on the news. Captain America #25 sold out instantly and its value shot through the roof. The highest I've sold a copy for was $16, and it always sells very quickly at that price. Could I have sold them for more? Most certainly. But I've always held the line on pricing books that see a lot of short-term speculation, because I don't want someone with 20/20 hindsight to say years later that I ripped them off. Giving customers a good deal that they'll always remember is more important that a quick profit, and hopefully ensures that I'll keep them around for the long term. I've heard many stories of astounding prices on eBay, but more about the online facet of the industry later.

Even though DC's grip on the top spot was eventually broken by Marvel, the impact caused by their new comics dominance over the last few years is still very evident in the back issue department. The demand for Golden and Silver Age DCs is dramatically different from when I first started retailing comic books over 25 years ago. Back then Marvel was the market. Whenever I'd buy a collection, it was mainly for the Marvel back issues, and I'd dump the DCs cheap just to be rid of them. In 2007, the demand for DC back issues was the greatest that I've ever seen. A Fine Minus copy of the Adventures of Dean Martin & Jerry Lewis #1 sold instantly for $275. A Very Good copy of Challengers of the Unknown #3 went for $120. The first Catwoman cover on Detective Comics #122 went quickly in Very Good Minus for $240. The first appearance of Lana Lang in Superboy #10 went for $350 in Fine Minus. And a rare copy of The Phantom Stranger #6 from the 1950s sold for $110 in Good Plus.

Obviously, key issues are always hot. But DC was in demand across the board. Detective Comics #181 sold in Fine Plus for $200, and #193 in Fine Minus for $120. Whiz Comics #117 went for $64 in Fine Minus, and Wow Comics #10 for $110 in Very Good Minus. By contrast, my biggest Marvel sale was the Amazing Spider-Man Annual #2 in Fine Plus for $88. That's a huge change from previous years, where Marvel was once the dominant force in back issue sales.

One of the smart things Marvel did during their journey back to the top was a return to producing All Ages material. Not kiddie pabulum like they did with the Marvel Age line, but true All Ages material that any reader of any age could enjoy. With the new Marvel Adventures line, Marvel also created yet another continuity that runs separate from those of the old time Marvel Universe, the M2 Universe, and the Ultimate Universe. Yep. Marvel has four continuities all running simultaneously. While it might seem daunting for new readers to find their way into reading Marvels these days, the important thing is that they are producing entry material for youth. This is where the next generation of comic readers is being developed today. And the Marvel Adventures line outsells the DC mature Vertigo line, with the exception of the excellent Fables. So, for me at least, sales to youth are more important than mature sales.

There are, however, three big laments that I hear from customers on a regular basis. While big crossovers and event books have created much of the popularity for whichever company is on top at the time, self-contained issues have become a rarity. I hear more and more requests for stand alone stories, that don't require reading half of a publisher's monthly line. Big crossovers are another barrier to entry level readers. The flip side of this is that customers who're demanding stand alone stories can still find them in my back issues bins. And many comics from the '80s, and even the '70s, sell for less than what a new comic costs.

Also a concern for customers is the seemingly unending problem of late shipping. While the impact on the sales for a late shipping mini-series like Civil War or Infinite Crisis might not be evident, for a supposedly monthly title it can be devastating. Wonder Woman was a perfect example of this. The new series launched to big numbers, but after only four issues in a year's time, when DC finally jumped over the missing last issue of the story arc and went on to the new writer, sales suffered. This probably reflected more than it should have on the performance by the new writer, who was quickly replaced. Late shipping is what killed the sales on Wonder Woman. An independent example is Hunter-Killer, which was doing solid numbers until sporadic shipping killed interest. The most glaring effect of late shipping was on Captain America, who reached new heights of popularity when he died, but it took two months for the next issue to ship. By then, the momentum was lost. In contrast, the five part followup of Fallen Son: Death of Captain America mini-series arrived on time and sold very well. I went through several reorders just to keep the book stocked on the shelves. That Marvel did a large overprint is a welcome change from the old days, when their reaction to declining sales was to short print hot titles.

The relaunch of Brave and the Bold performed well. (#1 shown)

The other lament I heard is concern about the bottom dollar prices often brought on the back issue market on eBay. While high grade, key books always sell well, just about everything else often sells at bargain basement prices. I currently do a lot of buying for my stores off of eBay, but for now have stopped selling there. The reason for this is because literally thousands of comic stores failed during the late '90s and early part of the new Millennium. All of their inventory, primarily from the last 40 years, is being dumped onto the online market. Add to this that every collector who has an urge to sell is also dumping their collections on eBay at the same time, and you get a flooded market that still shows the repercussions of the new comics glut from the '90s. It will take a while for all of this excess inventory to be absorbed. So... now is the time to buy. Eventually the online marketplace will reach equilibrium, and return to the lucrative early days when there were more buyers than sellers. Once this happens, that'll be the time to sell online.

Given enough time, everything goes through cycles. In new comics, long dormant titles like Thor and The Brave and The Bold returned in 2007 and performed very well. Plus, the independent publishers were not to be over looked. Dynamite had a bona fide hit when The Lone Ranger galloped off the shelves even faster with each successive month. Buffy the Vampire Slayer by Dark Horse saw monster sales with Josh Whedon doing the story work, helped by constant reprints that kept each issue available. And Classics Illustrated returned with both old and new material. Everything old is new again.

Dark Adventure Comics

In the last handful of years there has been a kind of marketplace disparity between product and price results between online selling, conventions, auctions, eBay, mail order and "brick and mortar" retail. This looked to be a fracturing and possible herald of implosion in the overall market in general that was starting in the middle grades and spreading outwards, halting at high grade slabbed. To paraphrase one dealer, what was once the foundation of base sales was now a levy of discounted sand. I have come to see it as market correction.

The one predominant factor I have noticed in the past year is that the 21st Century comics market is beginning to achieve a sense of balance in the sales venues noted above, as all are exhibiting some similarities of sales patterns. The overall market has not fractured so much into niche markets of selling but has been directed into niche markets of buying that are barking loudly. The industry that exists today is not the one we originally created or grew up with. The platforms of sales have changed and along with it the rules of inventory and vagaries of buying. The comic animal has been changing for a long time and is now possibly settling down and achieving definition again now that the analog sales mind of the past has become the digital future set down by the consumer.

Product is everywhere, not just in the hands of the dealer and the dusty boxes in the back room. There is more material available currently than at anytime I can remember. The only difference is it just isn't as readily available anymore to the industry dealer to fit into the industry discipline to create a stable across the board industry market model based on availability, grade and pricing. It is a buyer's market that has a chaotic discipline of its own and the challenge is to continue to define it so the long term market is durable, the business of the industry is balanced and the Guide still relevant. And also so that the collectors are happy, the participants make money and read well and the business of comics goes on, even without a new generation of comic readers.

What is true today and most obvious is that key issues are the dominant sellers and high-grade slabbed 9.4+ copies are and will remain the crux of the investment portfolio and high-end collector market which accounts for a huge portion of the overall back-issue industry sales figures. The present and future is high-grade pre-1975 comics, pedigree issues and memorabilia for the top-end money. The only flaw here is the lower percentage of buyers who can afford the price tag which now separates this segment completely from the rest of the overall market with its day trading aura. Key 9.8 Silver and Bronze brings staggering multiples – it is still way cheaper than key Gold and is bought by the Memory-Laners who remember them and who are now popping in career earnings and riding the tail of this segment while reaching for the bridle.

Another large sales segment is affordable lower grade buyers which, strangely enough, push prices on low-grade keys almost into mid-grade territory, so there is more equity on a low-grade key than a mid-grade. Sales on filling title runs are an even larger segment, as both high and low-grade buyers are active in doing this. The remaining market is all collectors and readers looking for the best deal possible in the heady boom or bust buyer's climate that is comics.

What is painfully obvious is that a great deal of comics material is, has and will become nothing more than cultural box filler in a search of a buyer. This needs to be recognized, as there is more product than there are buyers or readers on many items. Look at the large amounts of non-key Silver Age comics that are not affordable low grade or investment high grade. The buyer's market dictates 30-60% reductions in Guide prices for any movement. The same can also be said for Bronze and later books but the lower prices have not made them so apparent. For years the buyers have spoken and the market has corrected & this is the plain truth and nothing other than a sudden one hundred thousand more active buyers in the market is going to change this anytime soon.

There's low-end, high-end and everything else is a crapshoot, though saleable at some price – a new rule of thumb for us all. There are always a few exceptions, but this is our current state of affairs that will be here indefinitely until pricing spreads are realistic to buying realities. It isn't the market of 20 years ago with moderate 1-2-3 spreads for affordable money and stable sales across the board at Guide. The great news is that these buying patterns are present in all selling venues and to me that means a stable and balanced market (though one for buyers) that has changed, settled and which I can do business in.

So, speaking of business (and ending the soapboxing on the obvious) – we haven't dropped off the earth the last couple of years. I was hit by a drunk driver and sustained enough injury to seriously curtail my running around the country so I apologize to all our national convention customers. We have been very active locally and moving warehouse material online and with eBay and wholesaling to other dealers (as always) and wish to thank all of our long-time customers.

This is actually a nice time for the industry. There is more in-depth information on the hobby than ever before in this Guide and online with ever-increasing websites, chatrooms, info boards and collector's associations and tons more areas in which to acquire material. CGC has become indispensable and offers great resources to the collector in addition to their third party grading service and there are more quality comic-related movies in the theaters seeping into the public consciousness. It would be great if the publishers could finally figure out how to better market new comics material to readers outside the existing buying group to create a new crop of collectors.

I will leave it to the other advisors who have hit the pavement hard to examine the year in minutiae while I note my current observations on the scene.

Golden Age: Superman, Batman and Captain America have all sold well this past year and we have noticed an upswing in Good Girl art and sales of issues mentioned in Seduction Of The Innocent. Timelys are still the hottest ticket but have slowed and perhaps reached their price wall for the present with the exception of 9.2+ slabbed copies. Nedor has had some action and Fawcetts overall are weak. The large amount of books pushed into the market from a few major collections over the past year have sated the esoteric and key book buyers, but have created price reductions in many regular titles and non-key character issues.

Atom Age: Clearly the only market segment that has blanket sales in all grades in all genres and categories. Horror and resurgent superhero titles are much in demand and high grades are setting record prices as many books in this age are scarce in any condition. ECs are hitting a wall in high-end price but I have noticed a few exceptions. Most other horror titles are still the best bargain in this era.

Silver Age: Key issues in high grade dominate sales with low grade affordable issues following and as stated previously, mid-grades are searching aimlessly for a market. DCs in high grade CGC 9.4+ are exploding in value, especially on high end superhero and war with Marvels following closely. I notice most of the important sales are of CGC 9.6+ only representation. Archies and Harveys like Richie Rich are of increasing interest and moving well and getting above Guide in high grades with lesser grades still moving well at slight reductions. Gold Keys and Dells are slowing with the Random House File Copies that flooded the market and buyers are picking and choosing among high grades at small to large price reductions.

Bronze Age: All mainstream titles and characters are selling in various grades at reduced pricing but clearly, high grade is ruling with 9.8 key copies bringing unbelievable results. Giants, romance and westerns have slowed considerably and war and horror are moving nicely in upward gains.

Modern Age: With the exception of reading and enjoying, key issues only in exemplary grade are the rule. Current hot titles like Walking Dead have shown impressive movement but it is always important to note new books spark interest, get hot, their prices rise rapidly and then cools to overall small gains. Even though there are smaller print runs today it still doesn't change the fact they are readily available in grade.

Everything Else: Fanzines, high grade Marvel and DC magazines, Vampirella, Skywald and Atlas magazines are still showing growing interest and I've seen CGC high-end slowing somewhat, though still strong. Memorabilia sales on most comic-related characters pre-1970 are hot and heavy and the Seventies memorabilia is starting to plateau. Figures, statues and toys show no major change other than a slight downward dip.

It is becoming more and more apparent that slabbing should only be done for high grade books pre-1975 and most grades pre-1955 for the conservation aspect. I've seen tons of unsold later CGC'd books languishing because it simply isn't cost effective for non-keys and lower grades. Plus comics are there to hopefully be read and enjoyed. Thanks to all and I hope everyone has a fun and productive year and finds a true gem in the dust of antiquity.

Hake's Americana & Collectibles

Comic books and original comic book and comic strip art continue to play a large role in our auctions, and we have seen a number of record prices for them as they are combined with our traditional strengths in other comic character items and political collectibles.

In our January 2007 auction, we sold the Alex Toth-illustrated splash page from the Black Canary story in Adventure Comics #418 for $15,181. Toth, of course, is considered one of the masters of comic book illustration. His line work and the distinctive use of shadowing in his work is as appealing as when it was first conceived. Widely known as the designer of cult favorites Space Ghost and Harvey Birdman: Attorney at Law, Toth also did design work for Hanna-Barbera and illustrated several non-superhero comic books, Disney's Zorro being one of the most fondly remembered. Toth also drew the Golden Age Flash, Green Lantern, Atom and Dr. Mid-Nite. While many of us were saddened when he passed away in May 2006, there was something fitting to the fact that he was still at his drawing board when it happened.

In another of our auctions, just two weeks before Fantastic Four: Rise of the Silver Surfer opened, we saw record prices on three Fantastic Four comics: a CGC-certified Fantastic Four #1 graded 7.5 with off-white to white pages sold for a record $19,898, a CGC-certified Fantastic Four #2 graded 9.2 with off-white to white pages brought in $11,638, and a CGC-certified Fantastic Four #4 graded 9.0 sold for $4,495.

We have also seen continued strength in a number of genres, particularly in Westerns, space-themed heroes, and Disneyana, and this has applied to a number of different categories in addition to comics. Watches, play sets, and tin toys specifically have performed well in our auctions. It's important to note that both the Disneyana and watch categories are have witnessed sustained upsurges over protracted periods.

A few examples of these successful areas include Major Robertson's (actor Ken Mayer) original uniform from the science fiction show Space Patrol ($16,675), a Walt Disney US Time-Ingersoll Birthday Watches Retailers Complete Display ($12,650), a rarely seen Boxed Windup Toy "Mickey and Minnie Mouse Playland" ($4,600), the Strange World Adventure Club Buck Rogers pinback ($3,749), a rare Hopalong Cassidy Pocket Watch by U.S. Time, boxed ($2,625), a Hopalong Cassidy Film Festival autographed poster with numerous signatures including Ronald Reagan, John Wayne, Roy Rogers, Dale Evans, and others ($1,782), an Official Hopalong Cassidy Holster Set by All Metal Products Co. ($1,544), The Lone Ranger And His Great Horse Silver boxed Hartland set ($1,786), the Marx Alamo Playset No. 3546 ($1,581), a Gene Autry Watch by Wilane Watch Company, boxed ($1,265), the Toreador on Horseback from Ferdinand ceramic figurine by Zaccagnini ($4,025), Hobo Mickey Seated On "London Xii Miles" Marker glazed ceramic figure by Wadeheath ($2,981), and the complete Spanish edition of the always popular Mickey Mouse Waddle Book ($2,788).

Also highlighting this success were a Queen of the West/Dale Evans Official Autographed Deluxe Wrist Watch and accessories set ($3,162), a Howdy Doody Wrist Watch with rare packaging and box ($1,626), a complete Orphan Annie Miracle Compass Sun-Watch ($1,518), a Buck Rogers Rare Strip Card Set ($4,427), the Space Patrol Magic Space Pictures, Membership Kit Letter and Out Of Stock Postcard ($3,289), and a Flash Gordon Sparkling Rocket Fighter Ship, boxed Marx Windup ($2,713).

This is not the venue to detail successes in the political collectibles arena, I would be remiss if I did not point out the spectacular sales this niche has experienced. While they certainly don't have superpowers, there are definitely characters involved, if you know what I mean.

Harley Yee Comics

2007 was one of my best years ever, with the Internet playing an important part. As most people know, I have been traveling to shows for over 20 years, and I've also had a catalog for most of those years. However, either through my website or eBay store, I am completely astounded by the hundreds of new buyers I am finding.

As with 2006, my best seller was again Amazing Spider-

Man leading the way. Again, some of the current and future movies have influenced the market with a record price for a Silver Surfer #1. Also, the future Iron Man movie has made Tales of Suspense #39 and Iron Man #1 hard to keep in stock.

Timelys again were my fastest selling Golden Age group. Captain America Comics and related titles were hard to keep in stock. Many new collectors have entered the market and the demand will only grow in 2008.

Golden Age DC have continued their resurgence with the Superman titles leading the way. Early *Action*s were impossible to find and prices have hit the multiples of Guide. The Batman titles and Wonder Woman titles have remained strong with all DC titles selling at an above average pace.

I see Silver Age DCs as the big growth area, as long-time collectors seem to be releasing some of their books or whole collections into the market. The grades will never be Marvel-like, but you will see some of the old Marvel multiples if the books are 9.2 or better. Batman titles still remain the most popular Silver Age title.

DC
IS HE MAN...OR GHOST?
THE PHANTOM STRANGER
STOP! DON'T READ ANOTHER WORD FROM THAT EVIL BOOK!

There's been a surge in demand for 1950s DC titles like The Phantom Stranger. (#4 shown)

DC 1950s titles have always sold well for me, but I have seen a surge in demand for Mystery in Space, Strange Adventures, Brave and the Bold, Showcase and Phantom Stranger. This group of books has some real quality material in them and I think collectors have come to realize this.

Bronze Age Marvels and DCs has been a growth area for many years now. Younger collectors may not buy an Amazing Fantasy #15 or Batman #1, but they may buy an Incredible Hulk #181 or House of Secrets #92 instead.

Archie titles have always sold well over many generations and collectors. There is something about the character that appeals to collectors who mainly collect DC, Timely, Marvel and just about anything else. Maybe a lot of us want to be a little like Archie in real life.

Some of the other Golden Age groups like Centaurs and Fiction House have always been hard to find but have recently become hot books. I can only credit this increase to Internet discussion boards where books are displayed and discussed and some of the classic artists' covers are displayed.

Good Girl and Horror books have been a little soft the last few years. Collectors still want the key books or classic covers but seem to hold off buying the entire title run.

2008 will see those trends continue as the internet, CGC, and discussion boards continue to influence the market in a positive way by spreading the words and pictures to more and more collectors.

Mark S. Zaid, Esq.
EsquireComics.com

EsquireComics.com enjoyed yet another incredible year for 2007, especially as I attempt to balance my time between comics and my full-time national security law practice. I primarily specialize in investment quality, high-grade Golden Age, as well as Platinum Age, and particularly rare or esoteric books such as promotional anti-communism or political issues.

Within the Golden Age market, absent a market crash overall with the U.S. or world economy, I do not envision a significant slow-down for sales in the coming year. Indeed, I believe the opposite will happen, as a new wave of collectors continues to enter the marketplace. These investors are primarily old collectors who have finally matured into their place of life. Their careers have solidified and their family lives have stabilized. A perfect combination for the brand new investor-collector! Added to the fact that I feel the next 15 years will continue to see new and amazing original owner collections coming to light as those from the depression/WWII era sadly pass on, we are actually poised to witness one of the most exciting eras of Platinum and Golden Age collecting.

The Internet, of course, continues to be buck all trends by reducing our previously held notions of rarity by constantly bringing to light some of the most difficult and seldom-seen copies of [FILL-IN-THE-NAME-HERE]. Without a doubt, the scarcity ratings we have come to love within both The Overstreet Price Guide and Gerber Photo-Journals are continually being redefined. While on many levels, I love the ability of the Internet to help me find those issues that simply never show up at conventions or in dealer's inventories, I must also admit a breath of disappointment at how easy it often becomes to locate books I thought I would spend years having to search for across the globe yet simply find through Internet searches or unsolicited solicitations. The only true factor that always matters nowadays is just simply how much money you are willing to spend to own that key book. And while on the topic of the Internet, I was honored to serve as an expert commentator for an educational website designed to teach primarily new collectors about comic books and collecting: http://www.videojug.com/tag/comic-books.

As far as some financial data, on all levels during the last year I continued to see significant sales/purchases such as the following CGC certified comics: Green Lantern #1 9.0 (GA) - $35,000.00; Green Lantern #2 9.0 (GA) - $7,000.00; Mad #17 9.6 Gaines - $2,900.00; All Star #7 9.0 - $3,300.00; ; Superman #48 9.4 Toledo - $5,100.00; along with Cancelled Comic Cavalcade #1 & #2 - $2,800.00 and More Fun #94 Church - $4,500.00.

I have also continued to expand my involvement in obtaining legal related comic book items such as "ashcans" (comics submitted to secure trademarks) (please see my article co-authored with fellow advisor Gary Colabuono that appears in this edition of the Guide), copyright deposits copies submitted to the Library of Congress, and trial exhibits (issues submitted during litigation such as between DC and Fawcett in 1948). An amazing piece of history surfaced this past year when I had consigned to me a collection of documents (both original and vintage copies) from the 1947 litigation between Superman's creators Jerry Siegel and Joseph Shuster and DC Comics. The collection included legal briefs and correspondence that had never publicly surfaced before and, in my opinion, helped rewrite what we thought we knew about Superman's creators and publisher.

The past year also witnessed growth in an area that means a great deal to me, and that is educating the public on matters that relate to the integrity of the hobby. The Network of Disclosure (www.networkofdisclosure.com), of which I am now in my second term as a Committee Member, continues to expand its membership and includes long-standing dealers and collectors. Together, those who comprise the NOD seek to ensure buyers and sellers engage in fair transactions that involves complete disclosure of all known enhancements that any comic book has undergone. I encourage collectors and dealers, both new and old alike, to take a few minutes to review the NOD's website and consider adding your voice to the effort.

At the end of the day, collecting as an adult is not that different from when we were kids. To be sure, the amount of money involved has changed significantly, though perhaps it is relative given we spent probably 75% of our allowances on comics (could you imagine doing that today with your income!) But no matter the extent to which your foray into comics is to enjoy a healthy return on your investment, comic collecting should remain fun. When the enjoyment from the time I spend through EsquireComics.com disappears, that is when I will also close shop. Fortunately, that time has not yet come!

Metropolis Comics

Twelve years ago the 26th edition of The Overstreet Price Guide hit the stores. This was the first Guide in which I would be listed as an Overstreet Advisor and I was excited to say the least. I had already been in the business for about 9 years and had been collecting practically my whole life (even before I could read – as a wee lad I was literally drooling over copies of Ghost Rider and Marvel Team-Up much to the dismay of my older brothers who tried to keep their comics in Mint condition). I remember conversations with Bob Overstreet, who was very kind and spent time talking to me about comics and treated me like I was a Senior Advisor. I collected sales data as best I could for Bob to utilize in his annual assessment of the market. I didn't even have a computer let alone a database at the time so I faxed pages upon pages of sales to his office. My "lightning bolt" ad for my old company, Vincent's Collectibles, graced the second page of the Guide and my picture was right there with the rest of the advisors on page A-65. Life was good. I was starting to move up the ranks, get my name out there and carry out my goals in the comic book biz.

It is hard to believe a dozen years have gone by. So much has changed in comics. The advent of the internet, eBay and third party grading has made an immense impact on the way we view, buy, sell and trade comics. But as much as things have changed there has been one constant for me, and that is my love of comic books. I still get excited walking into a comic store, picking up the latest copy of Superman, Hulk, Batman or Spider-Man and seeing how my favorite good guys are doing in their never-ending battle against the forces of evil. When I buy a Silver Age key, Golden Age collection or a hoard of high grade Bronze Age comics I still get a kick out of it. I never imagined as a kid that I would ever have an Action Comics #1, Batman #1 or Spider-Man #1. I still read, collect and invest in comics and I think I always will. People often tell me I am very fortunate to have been able to turn my passion into a business. I have to agree. I am very fortunate and blessed to be doing something I love and believe in.

On behalf of my partner Stephen Fishler and my entire staff I would like to thank all of the customers, dealers, creators, historians, and fans who have helped us have such an amazing year. Sales for our company are at an all time high due to increased interest at conventions, our gallery, through the mail and of course, online. We will continue to strive to bring you the best selection of vintage comics and customer service in the business. Thanks so very much. And now, on to the market report…

Golden Age: Many comic fans collect Silver Age, as they can more easily connect to the characters they grew up with or because they are not too familiar with many of the Golden Age heroes/titles. I think this is a mistake and can limit the enjoyment one gets from comic collecting. A great reference tool that every avid comic collector should have is the Gerber Photo Journals. There are four volumes, two Golden Age and two Marvel, the DCs were never completed. In the Golden Age volumes you will find pictures of the covers of almost every Golden Age comics published. Astounding? Yes, it is! If you really want to have fun as a collector you should own these. I can not count how many times I have spoken to collectors who have been looking for something new or different to collect and had no idea about the Gerbers. As soon as they had them it was like a whole new world opened up to them. Titles like Red Dragon, Tip Top, Captain Battle, Mystery Men, Blue Ribbon, The Arrow, Blue Bolt, Master Comics and Keen Detective Funnies become exciting new titles to collect. Ask your local dealer or give me a call if you are interested in picking up a set!

The desire for quality Golden Age comics is very strong. To say it is a robust market would be an understatement. This past year we have moved big keys like Detective #27 F/VF w/light restoration, Batman #1s from Fair to FN+, the highest grade October copy of Marvel Comics #1 CGC 5.0, Human Torch #2 (#1) CGC 9.0, Marvel Mystery #9 VF-, Superman #1 CGC 5.50 w/slight professional restoration, All-American #16 CGC 5.0 and Captain America #1 VG. We also sold an outstanding run of All Star Comics that averaged about VF 8.0 with highlights like #1 CGC 9.0, 2 CGC 9.2 Edgar Church Copy, 3 F/VF, 4 CGC 9.0 Edgar Church and #8 VF.

Thousands of copies of low and moderately priced comics have also been scooped up by avid collectors including titles like Action, Adventure, Batman, All Top, All Winners, Archie Comics, Captain Marvel Adventures, Catman, Classics Illustrated, Crime Does Not Pay, Detective, Famous Funnies, Fantastic, Fight, Flash Comics, Four Color Disneys, Human Torch, Little Lulu, March of Comics, Marvel Mystery, Modern, More Fun, New Adventure, Phantom Lady, Planet, Plastic Man, Police, Popeye, Popular, Red Dragon, Sensation, Seven Seas, Shadow, Spirit sections, Stamp, Star Spangled Comics, Superman, Tarzan, Terry & The Pirates, Tip Top, True Crime, Uncle Scrooge, Walt Disney Comics & Stories, Western, Whiz, Wings, Wonder Woman, World's Finest, Wow, Zip and Zoot.

Of particular note is the returning strength of Pre-code horror and the ever-present popularity of ECs. Pre-code horror was very cheap and popular about 10-15 years ago but then jumped. Now with the appreciation of other genres in recent years Pre-code horror is beginning to look somewhat affordable again. ECs sell because people love quality art and story-telling. Creators like Wood, Craig, Kamen, Davis, Feldstein, Ingles and Frazetta will always be valued by comic fans. Speaking of Frazetta, Sci-Fi, Adventure, Western and Horror comics featuring art and covers by the legend have also been increasing in collectability over the last year. Issues #209-216 of Famous Funnies feature fantastic covers by Frazetta and are popular. Even though they are all listed at the same price in the Guide, an educated comic collector knows that there are common issues (209-212) and tougher issues (213-216) and the books are priced accordingly in the market.

Silver Age: The ruler of the roost is once again Marvel. I realize this is no big surprise. As I mentioned last year, look out for Iron Man, as he is coming on strong due to the anticipation of the movie. The trailer was received with a very positive reaction at the SD Comic Con last summer and prices have been skyrocketing on Tales of Suspense #39 and Iron Man #1 ever since. This has been the trend over the years with many of the comic to movie Silver Age Marvel characters. I know we are all purist collectors but for those entrepreneurs out there, the key to making money on these comics is to buy early (when you first hear the project has been green lit and there is a good name attached to the lead and supporting characters), and then sell at the peak which is about 2-3 months before the movie debuts. However, there is also plenty of excitement after the movie hits screens across the country… if it's a hit!

Amazing Spider-Man is still by far the best selling Silver Age title, no, make that best selling title – period. No other title comes close. We sold over 30 copies of Amazing Fantasy #15 and Amazing Spider-Man #1 and at the time of this writing it is only September '07. The 1960s keys from Marvel and the mid 1950s and early 60s DC keys are prime movers. While a major focus is usually placed on Marvel here are some recent sales on DCs from this past year: Action #242 VF- sold for $2400, Green Lantern #76 CGC 9.0 $1150, Aquaman #1 CGC 9.2 $2700, Batman #181 CGC 9.6 $3600 and Showcase #30 CGC 9.0 $1500. Gold Key titles like Magnus, Turok and Dr. Solar have also been selling well, especially the File copy collection we have.

Bronze Age: Conan, Daredevil, Defenders, Batman, House of Mystery, House of Secrets, Incredible Hulk, Inhumans, Iron Fist, The Joker, Justice League of America, Mr. Miracle and Swamp Thing have all been steady sellers. Though it was a little slow for some time, Incredible Hulk #181 has been coming back strong. Keep investing in Bronze Age as it is still cheap and it has a lot of room to appreciate.

The Future: For the last four years I have been hosting the Comic Zone radio show. You can listen to over 150 interviews for free at www.comiczoneradio.com. This has been a great joy for me. Being able to interview legends like Stan Lee, Neal Adams, Frank Miller and Todd McFarlane has been a blast. Being able to spread the word about comics, a true American art form, has been tremendously rewarding. As a fan, collector, creator, dealer, promoter or whatever, you can help too. Turning the next generation of potential fans on to the modern-day mythology and folklore known as comics is our job. Give a comic to a son, daughter, nephew, niece, cousin, parent, grandparent or heck even a complete stranger. In closing, I wish you all the best in your collecting endeavors!

In the inaugural edition of The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide in 1970, the top five Golden Age keys were valued at the following.

| | Mint 1970 | 9.2 2008 |
|---|---|---|
| Action Comics #1 | $300 | $675,000 |
| Detective Comics #27 | $275 | $525,000 |
| Marvel Comics #1 | $250 | $440,000 |
| Superman #1 | $250 | $400,000 |
| All-American Comics #16 | $50 | $245,000 |

Top Books

The following tables denote the rate of appreciation of the top Golden Age, Platinum Age, Silver Age and Bronze Age books, as well as selected genres over the past year. The retail value for a Near Mint- copy of each book (or VF where a Near Mint- copy is not known to exist) in 2008 is compared to its Near Mint- value in 2007. The rate of return for 2008 over 2007 is given. The place in rank is given for each comic by year, with its corresponding value in highest known grade. These tables can be very useful in forecasting trends in the market place. For instance, the investor might want to know which book is yielding the best dividend from one year to the next, or one might just be interested in seeing how the popularity of books changes from year to year. For instance, All Star Comics #8 was in 22nd place in 2007 and has increased to 19th place in 2008. Premium books are also included in these tables and are denoted with an asterisk(*).

The following tables are meant as a guide to the investor. However, it should be pointed out that trends may change at anytime and that some books can meet market resistance with a slowdown in price increases, while others can develop into real comers from a presently dormant state. In the long run, if the investor sticks to the books that are appreciating steadily each year, he shouldn't go very far wrong.

Grading Definitions

10.0 GEM MINT (GM): This is an exceptional example of a given book - the best ever seen. The slightest bindery defects and/or printing flaws may be seen only upon very close inspection. The overall look is "as if it has never been handled or released for purchase." Only the slightest bindery or printing defects are allowed, and these would be imperceptible on first viewing. No bindery tears. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp. No creases. No dates or stamped markings allowed. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, centered and clean with no rust. No staple tears or stress lines. Paper is white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. No interior autographs or owner signatures. Centerfold is firmly secure. No interior tears.

9.9 MINT (MT): Near perfect in every way. Only subtle bindery or printing defects are allowed. No bindery tears. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Generally well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, generally centered and clean with no rust. No staple tears or stress lines. Paper is white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is firmly secure. No interior tears.

9.8 NEAR MINT/MINT (NM/MT): Nearly perfect in every way with only minor imperfections that keep it from the next higher grade. Only subtle bindery or printing defects are allowed. No bindery tears. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Generally well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, generally centered and clean with no rust. No staple tears or stress lines. Paper is off-white to white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is firmly secure. Only the slightest interior tears are allowed.

9.6 NEAR MINT+ (NM+): Nearly perfect with a minor additional virtue or virtues that raise it from Near Mint. The overall look is "as if it was just purchased and read once or twice." Only subtle bindery or printing defects are allowed. No bindery tears are allowed, although on Golden Age books bindery tears of up to 1/8" have been noted. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Well centered and firmly secured to interior pages. One corner may be almost imperceptibly blunted, but still almost sharp and cut square. Almost imperceptible indentations are permissible, but no creases, bends, or color break. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples must be original, generally centered, with only the slightest discoloration. No staple tears, stress lines, or rust migration. Paper is off-white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is firmly secure. Only the slightest interior tears are allowed.

9.4 NEAR MINT (NM): Nearly perfect with only minor imperfections that keep it from the next higher grade. The overall look is "as if it was just purchased and read once or twice." Subtle bindery defects are allowed. Bindery tears must be less than 1/16" on Silver Age and later books, although on Golden Age books bindery tears of up to 1/4" have been noted. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with high reflectivity. Generally well centered and secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp with ever-so-slight blunting permitted. A 1/16" bend is permitted with no color break. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration apart from slight foxing. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples are generally centered; may have slight discoloration. No staple tears are allowed; almost no stress lines. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is cream to off-white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is secure. Slight interior tears are allowed.

9.2 NEAR MINT– (NM–): Nearly perfect with only a minor additional defect or defects that keep it from Near Mint. A limited number of minor bindery defects are allowed. Cover is flat with no surface wear. Inks are bright with only the slightest dimming of reflectivity. Generally well centered and secured to interior pages. Corners are cut square and sharp with ever-so-slight blunting permitted. A 1/16”-1/8” bend is permitted with no color break. No creases. Small, inconspicuous, lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable as long as they are in an unobtrusive location. No soiling, staining or other discoloration apart from slight foxing. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples may show some discoloration. No staple tears are allowed; almost no stress lines. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is cream to off-white, supple and fresh. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is secure. Slight interior tears are allowed.

9.0 VERY FINE/NEAR MINT (VF/NM): Nearly perfect with outstanding eye appeal. A limited number of bindery defects are allowed. Almost flat cover with almost imperceptible wear. Inks are bright with slightly diminished reflectivity. An 1/8" bend is allowed if color is not broken. Corners are cut square and sharp with ever-so-slight blunting permitted but no creases. Several lightly penciled, stamped or inked arrival dates are acceptable. No obvious soiling, staining or other discoloration, except for very minor foxing. Spine is tight and flat. No spine roll or split allowed. Staples may show some discoloration. Only the slightest staple tears are allowed. A very minor accumulation of stress lines may be present if they are nearly imperceptible. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is cream to off-white and supple. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is secure. Very minor interior tears may be present.

8.5 VERY FINE+ (VF+): Fits the criteria for Very Fine but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

8.0 VERY FINE (VF): An excellent copy with outstanding eye appeal. Sharp, bright and clean with supple pages. A comic book in this grade has the appearance of having been carefully handled. A limited accumulation of minor bindery defects is allowed. Cover is relatively flat with minimal surface wear beginning to show, possibly including some minute wear at corners. Inks are generally bright with moderate to high reflectivity. A 1/4" crease is acceptable if color is not broken. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. No obvious soiling, staining or other discoloration, except for minor foxing. Spine is almost flat with no roll. Possible minor color break allowed. Staples may show some discoloration. Very slight staple tears and a few almost very minor to minor stress lines may be present. No rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is tan to cream and supple. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is mostly secure. Minor interior tears at the margin may be present.

7.5 VERY FINE– (VF–): Fits the criteria for Very Fine but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

7.0 FINE/VERY FINE (FN/VF): An above-average copy that shows minor wear but is still relatively flat and clean with outstanding eye appeal. A small accumulation of minor bindery defects is allowed. Minor cover wear beginning to show with interior yellowing or tanning allowed, possibly including minor creases. Corners may be blunted or abraded. Inks are generally bright with a moderate reduction in reflectivity. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. No obvious soiling, staining or other discoloration, except for minor foxing. The slightest spine roll may be present, as well as a possible moderate color break. Staples may show some discoloration. Slight staple tears and a slight accumulation of light stress lines may be present. Slight rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is tan to cream, but not brown. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Centerfold is mostly secure. Minor interior tears at the margin may be present.

6.5 FINE+ (FN+): Fits the criteria for Fine but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

6.0 FINE (FN): An above-average copy that shows minor wear but is still relatively flat and clean with no significant creasing or other serious defects. Eye appeal is somewhat reduced because of slight surface wear and the accumulation of small defects, especially on the spine and edges. A FINE condition comic book appears to have been read a few times and has been handled with moderate care. Some accumulation of minor bindery defects is allowed. Minor cover wear apparent, with minor to moderate creases. Inks show a major reduction in reflectivity. Blunted or abraded corners are more common, as is minor staining, soiling, discoloration, and/or foxing. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. A minor spine roll is allowed. There can also be a 1/4" spine split or severe color break. Staples show minor discoloration. Minor staple tears and an accumulation of stress lines may be present, as well as minor rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is brown to tan and fairly supple with no signs of brittleness. No hint of acidity in the odor of the newsprint. Minor interior tears at the margin may be present. Centerfold may be loose but not detached.

5.5 FINE– (FN–): Fits the criteria for Fine but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

5.0 VERY GOOD/FINE (VG/FN): An above-average but well-used comic book. A comic in this grade shows some moderate wear; eye appeal is somewhat reduced because of the accumulation of defects. Still a desirable copy that has been handled with some care. An accumulation of bindery defects is allowed. Minor to moderate cover wear apparent, with minor to moderate creases and/or dimples. Inks have major to extreme reduction in reflectivity. Blunted or abraded corners are increasingly common, as is minor to moderate staining, discoloration, and/or foxing. Stamped or inked arrival dates may be present. A minor to moderate spine roll is allowed. A spine split of up to 1/2" may be present. Staples show minor discoloration. A slight accumulation of minor staple tears and an accumulation of minor stress lines may also be present, as well as minor rust migration. In rare cases, a comic was not stapled at the bindery and therefore has a missing staple; this is not considered a defect. Any staple can be replaced on books up to Fine, but only vintage staples can be used on books from Very Fine to Near Mint. Mint books must have original staples. Paper is brown to tan with no signs of brittleness. May have the faintest trace of an acidic odor. Centerfold may be loose but not detached. Minor tears may also be present.

4.5 VERY GOOD+ (VG): Fits the criteria for Very Good but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

4.0 VERY GOOD (VG): The average used comic book. A comic in this grade shows some significant moderate wear, but still has not accumulated enough total defects to reduce eye appeal to the point that it is not a desirable copy. Cover shows moderate to significant wear, and may be loose but not completely detached. Moderate to extreme reduction in reflectivity. Can have an accumulation of creases or dimples. Corners may be blunted or abraded. Store stamps, name stamps, arrival dates, initials, etc. have no effect on this grade. Some discoloration, fading, foxing, and even minor soiling is allowed. As much as a 1/4" triangle can be missing out of the corner or edge; a missing 1/8" square is also acceptable. Only minor unobtrusive tape and other amateur repair allowed on otherwise high grade copies. Moderate spine roll may be present and/or a 1" spine split. Staples discolored. Minor to moderate staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as some rust migration. Paper is brown but not brittle. A minor acidic odor can be detectable. Minor to moderate tears may be present. Centerfold may be loose or detached at one staple.

3.5 VERY GOOD– (VG–): Fits the criteria for Very Good but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

3.0 GOOD/VERY GOOD (GD/VG): A used comic book showing some substantial wear. Cover shows significant wear, and may be loose or even detached at one staple. Cover reflectivity is very low. Can have a book-length crease and/or dimples. Corners may be blunted or even rounded. Discoloration, fading, foxing, and even minor to moderate soiling is allowed. A triangle from 1/4" to 1/2" can be missing out of the corner or edge; a missing 1/8" to 1/4" square is also acceptable. Tape and other amateur repair may be present. Moderate spine roll likely. May have a spine split of anywhere from 1" to 1-1/2". Staples may be rusted or replaced. Minor to moderate staple tears and moderate stress lines may be present, as well as some rust migration. Paper is brown but not brittle. Centerfold may be loose or detached at one staple. Minor to moderate interior tears may be present.

2.5 GOOD+ (GD+): Fits the criteria for Good but with an additional virtue or small accumulation of virtues that improves the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

2.0 GOOD (GD): Shows substantial wear; often considered a "reading copy." Cover shows significant wear and may even be detached. Cover reflectivity is low and in some cases completely absent. Book-length creases and dimples may be present. Rounded corners are more common. Moderate soiling, staining, discoloration and foxing may be present. The largest piece allowed missing from the front or back cover is usually a 1/2" triangle or a 1/4" square, although some Silver Age books such as 1960s Marvels have had the price corner box clipped from the top left front cover and may be considered Good if they would otherwise have graded higher. Tape and other forms of amateur repair are common in Silver Age and older books. Spine roll is likely. May have up to a 2" spine split. Staples may be degraded, replaced or missing. Moderate staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as rust migration. Paper is brown but not brittle. Centerfold may be loose or detached. Moderate interior tears may be present.

1.8 GOOD– (GD–): Fits the criteria for Good but with an additional defect or small accumulation of defects that detracts from the book's appearance by a perceptible amount.

1.5 FAIR/GOOD (FR/GD): A comic showing substantial to heavy wear. A copy in this grade still has all pages and covers, although there may be pieces missing. Books in this grade are commonly creased, scuffed, abraded, soiled, and possibly unattractive, but still generally readable. Cover shows considerable wear and may be detached. Nearly no reflectivity to no reflectivity remaining. Store stamp, name stamp, arrival date and initials are permitted. Book-length creases, tears and folds may be present. Rounded corners are increasingly common. Soiling, staining, discoloration and foxing is generally present. Up to 1/10 of the back cover may be missing. Tape and other forms of amateur repair are increasingly common in Silver Age and older books. Spine roll is common. May have a spine split between 2" and 2/3 the length of the book. Staples may be degraded, replaced or missing. Staple tears and stress lines are common, as well as rust migration. Paper is brown and may show brittleness around the edges. Acidic odor may be present. Centerfold may be loose or detached. Interior tears are common.

1.0 FAIR (FR): A copy in this grade shows heavy wear. Some collectors consider this the lowest collectible grade because comic books in lesser condition are usually incomplete and/or brittle. Comics in this grade are usually soiled, faded, ragged and possibly unattractive. This is the last grade in which a comic remains generally readable. Cover may be detached, and inks have lost all reflectivity. Creases, tears and/or folds are prevalent. Corners are commonly rounded or absent. Soiling and staining is present. Books in this condition generally have all pages and most of the covers, although there may be up to 1/4 of the front cover missing or no back cover, but not both. Tape and other forms of amateur repair are more common. Spine roll is more common; spine split can extend up to 2/3 the length of the book. Staples may be missing or show rust and discoloration. An accumulation of staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as rust migration. Paper is brown and may show brittleness around the edges but not in the central portion of the pages. Acidic odor may be present. Accumulation of interior tears. Chunks may be missing. The centerfold may be missing if readability is generally preserved (although there may be difficulty). Coupons may be cut.

0.5 POOR (PR): Most comic books in this grade have been sufficiently degraded to the point where there is little or no collector value; they are easily identified by a complete absence of eye appeal. Comics in this grade are brittle almost to the point of turning to dust with a touch, and are usually incomplete. Extreme cover fading may render the cover almost indiscernible. May have extremely severe stains, mildew or heavy cover abrasion to the point that some cover inks are indistinct/absent. Covers may be detached with large chunks missing. Can have extremely ragged edges and extensive creasing. Corners are rounded or virtually absent. Covers may have been defaced with paints, varnishes, glues, oil, indelible markers or dyes, and may have suffered heavy water damage. Can also have extensive amateur repairs such as laminated covers. Extreme spine roll present; can have extremely ragged spines or a complete, book-length split. Staples can be missing or show extreme rust and discoloration. Extensive staple tears and stress lines may be present, as well as extreme rust migration. Paper exhibits moderate to severe brittleness (where the comic book literally falls apart when examined). Extreme acidic odor may be present. Extensive interior tears. Multiple pages, including the centerfold, may be missing that affect readability. Coupons may be cut.

Overstreet Advisors

Even before the first edition of The Official Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide was printed, author Robert M. Overstreet solicited pricing data, historical notations, and general information from a variety of sources. What was initially an informal group offering input quickly became an organized field of comic book collectors, dealers and historians whose opinions are actively solicited in advance of each edition of this book. Some of these Overstreet Advisors are specialists who deal in particular niches within the comic book world, while others are generalists who are interested in commenting on the broader marketplace. Each advisor provides information from their respective areas of interest and expertise, spanning the history of American comics.

While some choose to offer pricing and historical information in the form of annotated sales catalogs, auction catalogs, or documented private sales, assistance from others comes in the form of the market reports such as those beginning on page 75 in this book. In addition to those who have served as Overstreet Advisors almost since The Guide's inception, each year new contributors are sought.

With that in mind, we are pleased to present our newest Overstreet Advisors:

METROPOLIS THE NATION'S LARGEST COMIC DEALER

THE FOLLOWING IS A TRUE STORY...

METROPOLIS WE'RE CONFUSED!

We hope that someone who reads this will be able to explain why this kind of thing happens, because we don't get it!

At the biggest convention of the year, a dealer who traveled hundreds of miles to set up bought a high-grade Fantastic Four #1 for roughly 1/2 the price that we would have paid. After that comic passed through the hands of several dealers, Metropolis did in fact buy it. The fellow who had initially sold it at the convention could easily have made seven thousand dollars more if he had sold it to us.

SHOULDN'T THESE GUYS KNOW BETTER?

SHOULDN'T EVERYONE? IS IT STILL BETTER TO GET MORE MONEY FOR YOUR COMICS THAN LESS? DOES THE EARTH STILL REVOLVE AROUND THE SUN? ARE THERE STILL PEOPLE OUT THERE WHO ARE NOT OFFERING THEIR BOOKS TO METROPOLIS AND LOSING MONEY SELLING TO THE WRONG GUY?

If anyone out there can shed some light on why this still happens in this day and age, could you please let us know?

The following represents a small sample of prices that we will pay for your comic books. Other dealers say that they will pay top dollar, but when it really comes down to it, they simply do not. If you have comics to sell, we invite you to contact every comic dealer in the country to get their offers. Then come to us to get your best offer. We can afford to pay the highest price for your Golden and Silver Age comics because that is all we sell. If you wish to sell us your comics, please ship us the books securely via Registered U.S. Mail or UPS. If your collection is too large to ship, kindly send us a detailed list of what you have and we'll travel directly to you. The prices below are for NM copies, but we are interested in all grades.

THE NATION'S LARGEST COMIC DEALER METROPOLIS

FACT 1: ABSOLUTELY NO OTHER COMIC DEALER BUYS MORE GOLDEN AND SILVER AGE COMICS THAN METROPOLIS.

Although the pages of the price guide are filled with other dealers offering to pay "top dollar," the simple truth is that Metropolis spends more money on more quality comic book collections year in and year out than any other dealers in the country. We have the funds and the expertise to back up our word. The fact is that we have spent nearly 4 million dollars on rare comic books and movie posters over the last year. If you have comic books to sell please call us at 1.800.229.6387. A generous finder's fee will be given if you know of any comic book or movie poster collections that we purchase All calls will be strictly confidential.

FACT 2: ABSOLUTELY NO OTHER COMIC DEALER SELLS MORE GOLDEN AND SILVER AGE COMICS THAN METROPOLIS.

We simply have the best stock of Golden and Silver Age comic books in the country. The thousands of collectors familiar with our strict grading standards and excellent service can attest to this. Chances are, if you want it, we have it !

APPRAISAL SERVICE

If you'd like to know the value of your comics, why not ask the guys who created the universal 10 point grading scale? Metropolis offers the following absolutely free!

1. VALUE APPRAISAL to determine your comics' retail value based on all parameters including current desirability of the comic, relative scarcity and historical significance.

2. COMPLETE EXAMINATION of comics for all types of restoration.

3. DOUBLE GRADING SYSTEM to ensure greatest accuracy.

Our staff reflects over 50 years of comic evaluation and retail experience. There is not a more knowledgeable staff anywhere. For more info, call Toll-Free

1.800.229.METRO
(6387)

Please limit the number of comics to 10. Comics should be from 1930 -1975. That is our field of expertise.

SELLER TIP :

Sometimes having your comics sealed by a 3rd party grader increases the value. Other times it won't and you only lose money on grading fees. Our consultation determines when and when not to have a comic "slabbed", and you'll even save 20% submitting comics to 3rd party graders through Metropolis!

QUESTION:

IS IT BETTER TO GET MORE MONEY FOR YOUR COMICS?

METROPOLIS

CONSIGNMENT SERVICE

For two decades, Metropolis has been recognized and renowned for obtaining and selling the most sought after comic books and collections. Our services have been enlisted by the private individuals who are the most aggressive collectors in the market. If you're considering selling or consigning your comic books, there is no company better poised than Metropolis to help you realize the best return.

In today's market, the decision of just how to sell your comic books is critical. Making the right choice is like walking a tightrope without a net. Perhaps the most common pitfall novice sellers fall into is blindly consigning to an auction house. We guarantee you will realize a higher return on your investment by consigning with Metropolis. If you're considering parting with your collection, and think an auction house is the best way to go, we strongly advise you consider the following:

Do the Math. The commission rate an auction house charges you, the seller, is typically 15%. However, the auction house will also charge the bidder a "buyer's premium" of 19.5%. Make no mistake about it, a bidder in an auction simply deducts that additional 19.5% from the final price they are willing to pay. Bottom line: The auction house is taking nearly a 35% cut from each and every transaction. By having their hand in the pocket of both the bidder and the seller, the auction house ensures the most profit for itself, while the consignor hemorrhages on their investment. At Metropolis, our commission is on average less than half of what others charge.

When you consign to Metropolis Collectibles, you have at your disposal the services of the largest dealer of vintage comic books in the world. More importantly, you benefit from the thousands upon thousands of long-term customer relationships we've developed over the past 20 years. We're in it for the long haul, and will work with you to develop a strategy that will get you the highest return. We won't "square-peg" your collection into a formula that doesn't fit. We will pursue the avenue or avenues that work best for the comics you consign. Sometimes, that means selling your comics to the private individuals who pay the very best for being offered the very best. Oftentimes, we will arrange exclusive viewings at our showroom in Manhattan. We also maintain thousands of want lists of customers waiting in the wings for certain comic books to come to market - comic books that you may have in your collection. Our Internet sales continue to double every year, and our robust ecommerce business already boasts over 1 million hits each month! If you're thinking of selling your comics, call Metropolis Collectibles at 1-800-229-METRO (6387) or email consign@metropoliscomics.com for a free consultation.

WE FILL WANT LISTS

We have a simple question to ask . . . have you us your want list yet? Here is what it will cost you . . . 5 to 10 minutes of your time.

Here is what you could stand to gain . . . SOME OR ALL OF THE COMIC BOOKS (CGC OR RAW)
THAT YOU HAVE BEEN SEARCHING FOR THE LAST FEW YEARS!!!

WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?

"The Batman #1 you sold me was in the nicest, unrestored condition I've ever seen!", Bob Overstreet, author "The Official Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide."

"I'm glad that you have a great selection of Golden Age and Silver Age comics in stock. You have been able to constantly find books to fill some very tough missing holes in my collection. I also appreciate your consistent, tight grading and fair prices!"

Dan Hampton, Las Cruces, NM

These are just two of the many satisfied customers that have bought books from us in the past. Over the years, we have developed a very strong return customer base because we ACCURATELY price, grade, and describe books (in detail) over the phone and through the mail/email. If CGC books are desired, we can definitely fill those needs as well !!! In the past few years, we have acquired nearly EVERY major Golden Age and Silver Age book more than once for our many want list clients. These include books like Action 1, Detective 1, Detective 27, Marvel 1, Superman 1 and more recent gems like AF 15, FF 1, Hulk 1, Flash 105 and Showcase 4, 8, 22. OUR SPECIALTY IS GOLD, SILVER, BRONZE, AND COPPER AGE BOOKS (1933 - 1993). Please check out our great selection of old books! (CGC or Raw).

We don't claim that we can fill every list all the time, but if any company can accomplish this, it would certainly be us! We can say this with much confidence because our representatives travel to the majority of the 50 states and Canada plus attend many of the major comic book conventions (San Diego, Chicago, Detroit, New York, etc.) to uncover books you would not have the opportunity to find. When we are not on the road, we spend MANY hours on the phone locating books from our long list of past and present comic sources we've developed over the 25 years we have been dealing in comic books. When sending your want list either E-MAIL us, or mail us and include a self-addressed stamped envelope (if possible), your phone number, and a good time to reach you. We DON T send out catalogs, so please ask for specific books and conditions desired. We will contact you when we find the items you've requested. Phone calls are also welcomed. WE WILL GLADLY SUGGEST AND PERSONALLY PUT TOGETHER COMIC BOOK INVESTMENT PORTFOLIOS FOR BIG AND SMALL INVESTORS. OUR ADVICE IS ALWAYS FREE!

SAVE YOURSELF ALL THE HASSLE AND LET US DO THE LOOKING FOR YOU!
CALL, FAX, MAIL, OR EMAIL US YOUR WANT LIST!

YOU HAVE NOTHING TO LOSE AND EVERYTHING ON YOUR WANT LIST TO GAIN!

Competitive pricing always. Accurate grading. MANY CGC BOOKS AVAILABLE. Friendly, courteous service. Interest free time payments/layaways possible. Checks, Money Orders, Visa, Mastercard, Discover and American Express accepted for total payment OR down payment on books. 7 day money back guarantee before a sale is considered final on all non-CGC books. # THE PROBLEM :

What is wrong with public auctions ?

The CHAMELEON STRIKES!

Long wait until results

Sometimes six months or more. Then if the item does not sell more waiting.
You only get one chance per auction!

CAPTAIN AMERICA LIVES AGAIN!

Advance Squeeze

They give money so you do not have to wait for funds, you spend the money, the item comes up for sale and fails to meet reserve,you let it sell for less because you do not want to pay back the advance, or they negotiate to buy the piece out from you.

SHOWCASE
THE FLASH

Price Games

Items not protected by reserves or by illegal shill bidding will sell for far less that other ways of personal selling. Think about it! An auction is a wholesale marketplace attended largely by professional dealers. You collect, how often do you go ? So dealers buy your stuff and then sell it for a profit. You wind up waiting months to pay the auctioneer 30% for wholesaling your item. Also big auctions report millions in sales. There are only a handful of firms who can report millions in revenue per year, so how does so much stuff get absorbed in one day of selling, in one physical location, answer, it either sells wholesale, or it never really sold.

Multiple Rarity Dilution

Seven Batman #1's available all at once in one auction will not perform as well as selling one .... The perception of scarcity creates value.

Selling myths

Buyers assume auction is the cheapest way to buy items, Sellers think its often the place to get the best price, how can both be right? Most items are from dealers placing things in auction or the auction house themselves. Very often it is not disclosed in the realized prices that they bought back their own material as no outside buyer stepped up to meet the price, many fantastic prices you see reported are dealers trying to seed records so they can sell the items in the open market after for less….. so your stuff sells for less creating the myth of bargains, the house stuff does not sell or sells for run up prices, nobody really knows.

No special attention

Your stuff is offered among many other things with no special attention. All you get is a photo and bland description.No professional sales copy. There is no sales department to contact with questions. No personal salesmanship at all.

No personal or phone selling

Many serious buyers have questions or require a personal touch when spending their fortunes. The current options of websites and auction houses offer no personal touch.

Hidden fee's

You truly receive only about 70% of the final realized price. Auction's charge a buyers fee of 15-20% and the consignor at least 5%, sometimes 15% also. This means that you are actually giving up 15% - 35% of the sale price, so you cannot go by just sellers fees. Also, there is usually buyback fee if you try to protect your items, sort of like paying rent on a property you own.

GIANT-SIZE X-MEN

Rings, shills, and other illegal games

Rings are buyers that control auctions, make non-compete deals. This is done in order to get yours and others items cheap so they can have another auction amongst themselves and split the difference between what they paid for the auction and the real price. Shills are used when an auction house has a bid of lets say $4,000 for an item on the book or called in, and on the floor the item is $2,000, the shill is used to raise to the book so the item does not sell for $2,200, but $4,000 to the unfortunate trusting buyer. Although this might seem helpful to sellers, they usually only do it for their own items because they do want some bargains to go through to please buyers. It is just another unethical thing that goes on and both are well documented with many lawsuits and criminal records.

The best NEW way to sell anything......

Represented Private Treaty (RPT)©

Honest, fast, reliable, personal selling

- With the expert use of all the tools we've developed and honed over the years, including: eBay, websites, catalogues, a large customer database, conventions, and decades of experience we can represent your interests selling for a smaller % of sales than anyone else.
- In as fast 14 days I can usually sell anything. Rarely do things stay over 30 days.
- You can have complete yes/no control over prices, I can counter offers and/or collect offers. You can be as involved or as little involved as you wish. I make sure your stuff sells.....any other buyer or auction house works against you, I work for you.
- My interest is yours, whether it's the best price, or sell for market as quickly as possible, I do both all the time.
- Sometimes people have to be talked into buying things, they need payment terms, questions answered, I provide all of that. Sometimes you need to present items in the most positive light using professional sales copy to achieve a sale. I provide this level of personal service you cannot get anywhere else.
- Time and time again I have been given items from dealers and collectors which were "hard sells" or where they were unable to attain their target price. Although these pieces were already offered on websites and private auctions, I was able to get a better price through my contacts and reputation.
- I have no system you have to conform too, like catalogue dates, etc. When you are ready I will take your items and place them strategically into my sales stream.

In 2008 as we approach our $20,000,000th dollar in sales here is a brief list of some of our accomplishments along with some references.

COMIC COLLECTOR/DEALER

Paying up to 100% or more of guide for many comics of interest

---

▼ POINTS TO CONSIDER ▼

TO SELL ON EBAY OR NOT TO SELL ON EBAY—THAT IS YOUR QUESTION?

- Consigning your comics to an eBay seller or an auction may not let you realize your collection's potential. EBay sellers and auctions charge 15% to 35% on every transaction regardless if they sell for less than guide. Many items sell for way below guide and you still pay all related charges. Many dealers buy these items well below market value. After you consider all charges and the final selling price you will generally net much less then we would pay. Selling to us there will be no charges, no waiting for payment. It's easy, and you will be treated with honesty and fairness.
- We have over 25 years experience in comic fandom. We have purchased many well-known collections while competing against other interested parties. Give us the chance to show you your top price.
- Being a collector/dealer gives us the ability to buy your entire collection and pay you the most for it. You will maximize your collection's value.

WHAT WE DO

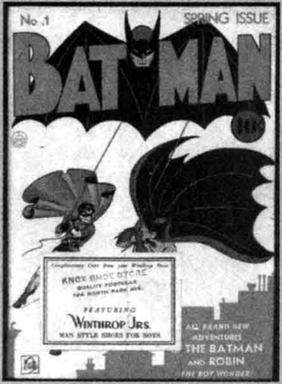
For over a decade, Classics Incorporated has been helping collectors preserve their treasures. Given the advanced state of the hobby these days, it's imperative that you make the right decisions whether you're buying or selling one comic, or an entire collection. Classics Incorporated is an expert in all aspects of the marketplace, from third-party grading and auctions, to pedigreed comics, restoration, and investment consulting. Our accuracy in CGC grading, pressing and valuation is unparalleled. Using our unique combination of services and advice will ensure that you make the best decision for your comics.

The process is easy. Our website classicsincorporated.com will answer any questions you have about our services, and guide you through the easy process of submission. In addition, the website offers many insights into the marketplace, including published articles, comic valuation tables, before and after pictures of our work, and links to helpful sites that delve deeper into the nuances of comic collecting. You will not find such a complete accumulation of crucial information anywhere else.

A quick look at a few of the many services we offer:



A Batman #1 with an ugly sticker on the front cover, dying to be removed using the conservation service. Cost for conservation: $90.

PRESSING

One of the most popular services used by our clients today, pressing is best utilized for high grade, unrestored comics. Pressing is not considered restoration, and is used to remove light defects to make a high grade even higher (for example, pressing a Spider-man #20 from CGC 9.0 to 9.2). The age of the comic does not matter, and because of the low cost of pressing (as low as $15 per book), the comic's value does not have to be high for the service to be beneficial. But it takes practice to find the right candidates for pressing. Many factors must be considered for each book, such as how to spot "bad" and "good" defects. Guidelines are set forth on classicsincorporated.com so you can make informed decisions before sending us your books for review.

CONSERVATION

Another low-cost service, conservation best suits lower to mid grade comics in the GD to VF range. Its main goal is to rid a comic book of harmful agents (tape, glue, stains, mold), and/or improve the appearance and desirability through light restorative techniques. Comics older than 1964 are the best candidates for conservation, although there are exceptions. Value is not a significant factor due to the low cost of conservation, which starts at $30. Conservation can include water, dry, and solvent cleaning, tear seals, support, staple cleaning/replacement and pressing. A breakdown of costs can be found on classicsincorporated.com.

This Amazing Fantasy #15 is a prime restoration candidate. Other than the torn off logo area, the book is in VF. Current value is $750.

RESTORATION

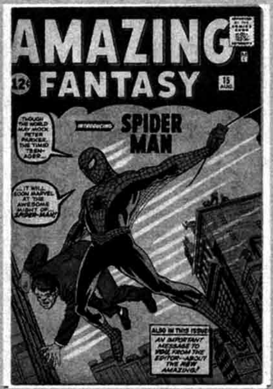
The eldest of the services offered, restoration targets low grade comics in the FA to GD+ range. It utilizes every weapon in our arsenal to maximize the grade of a comic, including piece replacement, grafting and color matching. The best candidates for restoration are pre-1960 comics with a current value of $1000 or more. The truth is as many as 50% of comics submitted to us for restoration are turned down because the work is either unnecessary or detrimental to its value. But restoring the right candidates can produce eye-popping results. Classicsincorporated.com offers guidelines that will aid you in finding the right books for this service. We also offer free appraisals on emailed scans and online auctions.



The same Amazing Fantasy #15 after restoration. Its new grade is VF, with a value of $2000. Cost of restoration: $500.

RE-CREATION

This service is strictly for coverless comics, particularly the key issues like Spider-man #1, Superman #1, and Marvel Comics #1. We attach exact replicas of covers onto these coverless comics, each cut to fit the comic perfectly. Many collectors purchase coverless key issues because of their affordability. This service allows the comic to appear complete without the collector having to pay thousands of dollars more for a real cover. Cost is $150 per cover, and includes any necessary interior support, tear seals, assembly and pressing. Check classicsincorporated.com for more information and a complete list of available covers.

RESTORATION REMOVAL

On occasion, you may find minor unnecessary restoration on one of your books. Is removal feasible? Minor professional restoration, such as tear seals and support using rice paper and water-soluble adhesive, and acrylic and water-based color touch are the safest to remove. In some cases a book's value can significantly increase with this service, but great care must be taken in choosing the right candidates. Check classicsincorporated.com if you think you have a book that can benefit from restoration removal.

Hear what Collectors are saying about CGC.

"CGC is a GREAT organization and the staff and company are simply the best out there. I believe that CGC is going to stay the industry leader of which the other small timers will try to strive for, but never even come close to reaching."

Michael Gray • Collector

"I want to say that the level of service that your company has provided so far has been first rate. On my family's vacation to Florida in August, Scott agreed on short notice to accept my books for grading in person. What a terrific experience. Friendly reception, great communication and consistent grading among all of my books. You guys do a terrific job. Despite the heated discussions going around regarding grading consistency (I suppose everyone thinks their books are NM!!) I understand your position and the pressure involved to perform. I commend you on your ability to remain consistent, as far as I can see, in your grading standards."

Roy Delic • Collector

"Thanks for the excellent service I consistently receive from you! I have been in this field for over 40 years, and appreciate the important role that third party grading can have in facilitating the wonderful world of rare comic books. Over time I have personally developed a tremendous respect for all of the effort that CGC puts into its operation. There are very few people I will let handle my best comics, but I have met CGC's Steve Borock and Mark Haspel and trust them with my books. Doing business with CGC has been a real pleasure. Thanks CGC!"

Charles Wooley • Collector and Dealer • Former Co-Owner "Million Year Picnic"

"Thank you for your professional service during my visit to your operations. I am now more confident your abilities to be the best grading service in comics for the collector, investor or dealer. After seeing every aspect of the operation, one could see that CGC will be the main player in securing high grade comics for all of us!"

Dan Davis • Collector

"With CGC, buying through the post office is no longer Russian roulette"

Frédéric Manzano • Editions Déesse
Paris, France

"Steve Borock and his team are real professionals. The service you provide fills the credibility gap in comic book collection which private collectors (like me) have been searching for. Your service has further legitimized this collectible."

Michael Katz • Collector

"I recently sold a several hundred comic book collection book by book for $12,000 on eBay. Unfortunately, I only submitted a few books to CGC. What a mistake! Were I to do it again, I would have submitted everything. The graded books went at guide or much better every time. The ungraded books went at a discount to guide, simply because one person's grading standards vary from another. The CGC grade was one that everyone trusted."

Mike Finn • Collector

"I've been a collector since 1974....I have certainly seen this hobby mature through the years. I truly feel that CGC has been the catalyst to finally bring a standard structure to our hobby – no small feat! CGC has carried our hobby to a new level of integrity and safety."

Jon Lindstrom • Collector

"CGC has taken the guessing game out of the comic business for me. I can't imagine going back to the days of over graded comics and undisclosed restoration."

Jeff Williams • Collector

"CGC has added real value to collections. I am very excited that Overstreet has recognized CGC's expertise and I hope that the result will be a new price guide which reflects the true marketplace."

Scott Collins • Collector

"My opinion of CGC's grading has been verified. Steve, I want to thank you and CGC for your honesty and your accuracy and look forward to many many years of future grading."

Kennith M. Basteiro • Collector

"I have been happily following CGC's impact on the marketplace. Speaking as a collector that has been into comics for over 30 years, and the founder of the Western PA collection, I believe such a service is long overdue in this hobby."

Michael Friedlander • Collector

"I have been a part of comic fandom since 1963. Since having my first comics graded in 2002, I have had nothing but good things to say about my experience with CGC. Mr. Borock and his staff have been consistent with their grading and turn around times. I know I am one of the few "underground" comics collectors around and I really appreciate the extra time and effort Mark Haspel has put into the analysis of each book to verify its proper printing and grade."

Howard Gerber • Collector

"Steve, I must say if it wasn't for your advice and help, I wouldn't have known about the alterations to the book. I can only imagine the horror and disappointment in finding out later. I really appreciate all your extra efforts and taking the time to help me. You've been great. CGC provides an invaluable resource to collectors. I'm glad you guys are around to make a new era of collecting a better place."

Rob Gonzalez • Collector

"The Gaines estate is thrilled with the results. You know what? We'd be mad NOT to use CGC's services!"

Grant Geissman • Author, "Foul Play!" & "Tales of Terror! The EC Companion"

CGC

Our Hobby's Choice!

"CGC has enabled buyers of high-grade comics to become 'confident buyers' despite the baying of some nay-sayers; CGC has adhered to the very high standards of our hobby. The CGC staff have always dealt with me courteously, and professionally."
Gary Dolgoff • Overstreet Advisor

"I'm slab-happy over your superlative service."
Michelle Nolan • Overstreet Advisor

"We no longer have to worry about buying undisclosed damaged goods. It is easy to see the results of risk free CGC transactions. I would never sell a high grade book without having it certified by CGC first!"
John Hauser • Overstreet Advisor

"Straight, right on the money grading! Accept no substitutes!"
William Insignares • Overstreet Advisor
Owner demolitioncomics.com

"CGC is an important part of our business plan. CGC has continued to meet our needs and has always placed a premium on customer service."
Brian Peets • Overstreet Advisor
• CEO A-1 Comics, Inc.

"I can tell you the grading is accurate and the holder is an excellent product. There is no doubt that CGC is the future of comic book collecting."
Jef Hinds • Overstreet Advisor

"CGC is an ever growing presence in the comic collecting hobby/industry. For a 4 year old third party grading service to have gained so much influence and respect in the comic community, one must only look to its top quality grading and unbeatable customer service to see why!"
Carl De La Cruz • Overstreet Advisor
Darthdiesel Comics & Collectibles

"Just a quick note to tell you how much I like the service so far. For the most part, the difference was no more than a half grade between us. This was what I was looking for from your service. Keep up the good work and stay on track."
Rob Rogovin • Overstreet Advisor
Four-Color Comics

"CGC has vastly improved my turnover time on sales of quality comics from all ages: Golden Age to Modern. Not only do books sell faster, they often sell for more! That translates into increased profits and I love it. I give CGC my highest recommendation."
Chris Foss • Overstreet Advisor
Heroes and Dragons

"The level of grading consistency and integrity that CGC has brought to our hobby has reinforced my confidence in the fact that comic books are among the best investments anywhere – better than stocks, better than bonds, on par with real estate. I am proud to say that ComicLink clients have learned that firsthand."
Josh Nathanson • Overstreet Advisor
ComicLink

"CGC has been an incredible asset to the comic community with their restoration check and help in identifying pedigree books. Finding out if a book has been restored or is truly a pedigree copy has been solved!"
Tom Gordon • Overstreet Editor

"CGC is the only way to go to get maximum dollars for high-grade books. Their support services are backed by friendly, responsive and professional people who know how to get the job done."
Dan Greenhalgh • Overstreet Advisor
Showcase New England

"The level of accuracy, consistency, professionalism and beauty of the end product at CGC has revolutionized, energized and stabilized this hobby, lifting it to a height that would have otherwise been impossible."
Mark Wilson • Overstreet Advisor
PGC Mint

"CGC has always been both professional and extremely helpful when I deal with them. From their inception when Sotheby's first helped premiere their service with our live auction in 1999, to the present time. They have changed the market place in the arena of both live and Internet auctions. They have given the collecting community something that never existed before – the knowledge that a book being bid upon is the grade described and cannot be tampered with. This simple fact has given the market a stability that it never had before, and we are all receiving the benefits!"
Jerry Weist • Senior Overstreet Advisor

"The CGC gang did an outstanding job in grading our Lost Valley Collection. We could not have been happier with the service we received. Getting the rarest and best graded comics in this comic collection professionally graded was THE smartest thing we did all year."
Al Stoltz • Overstreet Advisor
Basement Comics

"We are amazed at the prices our CGC comic books are realizing on eBay."
Stephen Fishler • Overstreet Advisor
Metropolis Collectibles

"CGC has rewritten the rule book for the comic book industry. With its professional grading standards, there are no more 'mystery' grades and disappointed comic book buyers. Its census report provides an accurate and current picture of what's rare and what's not, which is an invaluable tool for both buyer and seller alike. All things considered, no major player in comics can ignore CGC and expect to be successful!"
Dave Anderson • Overstreet Advisor
Want List Comics

"CGC has now set the industry standard."

The EC Comics line of the 1950s is widely recognized as historically significant, not only for its storytelling approach, but also for the incredible level of talent it attracted. Many of their regular contributors would define their era of comic book creators and dramatically impact the generations that followed. The EC Archive series restores these classic tales in newly corrected, full color presentations along with historical notes and insights.

Why consign to a Heritage auction instead of selling to a dealer?

The dealers in this guide bid in our auctions! If you sell outright to a comic dealer, you will never know how much he might have been willing to pay. In a Heritage auction, that same dealer will have to bid against all of the other major dealers, as well as thousands of retail collectors, driving the auction price higher and higher. You'll know each and every item was sold to the one buyer willing to pay the highest price for it.

SATISFIED SELLERS:

"Far as I'm concerned, the real superheroes are those great guys at Heritage. I really lucked out when I met' em 'cause they got me prices that exceeded my wildest expectations, plus it was a real kick to work with them. I don't want this to sound like a TV commercial but, so help me Spidey, there's no one I'd rather entrust with my collection. Excelsior!"

"We have been very pleased with our decision to consign our extensive comic book collection to Heritage Auction Galleries. It was Heritage's promised professionalism that attracted us. We have not been disappointed... It's an exciting, slightly unnerving venture for us, but we are comforted that Heritage is running our show."

© 2007 Disney Enterprises, Inc.

Poetic Disney stories hit the newsstands in 1934, when the famed animation studio joined in a mutual promotional plan with Good Housekeeping magazine. GH felt that a Disney page in each issue of their magazine would be a sales plus; Disney liked the idea of a "permanent advance publicity 'break'" for its latest cartoon shorts. Soon a monthly feature was born. From April 1934 to September 1944, new Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphony films were transformed into rollicking comic poems with masterful painted art. Now, for the first time, these funny, fascinating features are together in one book—and grounded in history via a wealth of Disney animation art and ephemera!

Walt Disney's Mickey and the Gang is available at your local book retailer, or you can order directly from www.gemstonepub.com/disney or call 1-800-322-7978.

Our strict Grading alone saves 25%-50%+ over 'industry-standard' grading!

You hear it all the time... this one, or that one... saying, "We grade strictly". We really do. Finally, grading that you can depend on. Our grading standards- honed and perfected over 3 decades in the comics business, both collecting and dealing - are unabashedly the strictest in the industry. Our VGFs, for instance -are routinely appraised anywhere from a FINE+ to a 'Norway Near Mint' (an actual quote). Plus, we get consistent praise for our grading (as well as our professional packing of orders, fast service, and just 'doing the right thing') on eBay (we are listed under 'gdcomics' there...) See our 100% Positive Feedback Rating.

So enjoy our strict, consistent grading... you'll save 25% to 50%, compared to buying books that are graded 'normally'...

That's Right!!

SINCE 1972

I will pay LESS for books I do not need. If you have books for sale that are common, chances are I have multiple copies currently in stock. (So do ALL of the larger Golden Age/Silver Age Advertisers in this guide.)

If I buy these items, (with or without the books I need) I will NOT pay MORE, top dollar, etc. NO ONE will, despite all the high-flying rhetoric to the contrary.

FACT IS........

- I WILL pay more, Top Dollar, Etc. for the books I need. There are THOUSANDS from 1933-1976.
- At any given moment, you cannot possibly know which books I need UNLESS you contact me.
- Regardless of ALL of the claims of Top $ Paid, the person with the GREATEST NEED at the time of sale, if they have the money, will usually pay you the most for your books. I am only one of many (not the only) dealer that CAN and WILL pay top dollar for what I need.
- Conclusion: If you are selling, Golden/Silver Age comic books, in any grade (1933-1976), Original comic art, or Pulps, and you want input from a serious, motivated buyer, then I invite you to consider contacting Richard Muchin, a full time professional with over 30 years of experience; for details BEFORE you sell your collection.

MY HISTORY IN COMICS:

If you are about to sell your Comic Book or Comic Art collection, above everything else seek an experienced dealer whom you can trust. I began with comics in the early 1960s, eventually publishing the EC fanzine Squa Tront. I attended conventions (even before there was The Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide), introducing people like Bruce Hamilton to fandom and becoming friends with MAD Magazine publisher Bill Gaines. By 1974 I had opened one of the first specialty comic stores in America, The Million Year Picnic.

Two partnerships and twenty years later, I inaugurated the first Sotheby's Comic Book and Comic Art Auctions in the fall of 1991. The auctions set the tone for the comics market with $12 million in sales and brought national press coverage and respect that comics had never before experienced. I recently have moved onto eBay with special "event" auctions that have sold over $1.5 million during the past two years and made me one of the leading PowerSellers in America for rare Comic Art and Comic Books.

I am also the author of The Comic Art Price Guide, 1st and 2nd editions, have recently finished Bradbury: An Illustrated Life for William Morrow, and also wrote The 100 Greatest Comic Books, just out this year from Whitman Press.

MY PROMISE TO YOU:

What all this means to you the seller is that in Jerry Weist you have one of the most experienced and capable people in comics at your disposal.

 Do you want to sell your comics?
  I can give you the best price, and honestly appraise your collection before you sell.
 Do you want to bring your collection to auction, and possibly gain a better percentage of Guide value?
  I have been bringing people to auction for the past fifteen years – with outstanding results!
 Do you want to consider a private sale of important comic artwork?

I have been working with the top buyers and VIP clients for over twenty years, and I wrote the book on comic art prices. My promise to you is that with my years of experience, I can honestly evaluate your collectibles and give you the assurance that you can choose the option that best fits your needs — Private Sales, Auction Sales or Individual Purchase. I have the flexibility to act as a consult, helping you decide how to best sell your collection and gain top dollar.

Jerry Weist, Ray Bradbury and Al Feldstein during filming for Tales From The Crypt: From Comic Books To Television, produced by Chip Selby in the fall of 2003. This photo was taken during the filming for the special DVD release interview where Bradbury and Feldstein met for the first time on film to discuss their experiences working together on EC's Bradbury adaptations.

You may contact me at jerryweist@adelphia.net, my home phone (978) 283-1419, or my home office at Jerry Weist, 18 Edgemoor Road, Gloucester, Massachusetts, 10930, USA.

Senior Overstreet Advisor since the 1970s, Charter CGC Member, Sotheby's Comic Art and Comic Book Consultant, eBay seller of the month and Power Seller with over 400 100% positive feedbacks, author of The Comic Art Price Guide, with over 40 years experience in the comic field.

JOHN VERZYL AND DAUGHTER ROSE, "HARD AT WORK."

John Verzyl started collecting comic books in 1965, and within ten years he had amassed thousands of Golden and Silver Age comic books. In 1979, with his wife Nanette, he opened "COMIC HEAVEN," a retail store devoted entirely to the buying and selling of comic books.

Over the years, John Verzyl has come to be recognized as an authority in the field of comic books. He has served as a special advisor to the "Overstreet Comic Book Price Guide" for the last 25 years. Thousands of his "mint" comics were photographed for Ernst Gerber's "Photo-Journal Guide to Comic Books." His tables and displays at the annual San Diego Comic Convention and the Chicago Comic Convention draw customers from all over the country.

The first COMIC HEAVEN AUCTION was held in 1987, and today his Auction Catalogs are mailed out to more than ten thousand interested collectors and dealers.

Big Little Books

INTRODUCTION

In 1932, at the depths of the Great Depression, comic books were not selling despite their successes in the previous two decades. Desperate publishers had already reduced prices to 25¢, but this was still too much for many people to spend on entertainment.

Comic books quickly evolved into two newer formats, the comics magazine and the Big Little Book. Both types retailed for 10¢.

Big Little Books began by reprinting the art (and adapting the stories) from newspaper comics. As their success grew and publishers began commissioning original material, movie adaptations and other entertainment-derived stories became commonplace.

GRADING

Before a Big Little Book's value can he assessed, its condition or state of preservation must be determined. A book in Near Mint condition will bring many times the price of the same book in Poor condition. Many variables influence the grading of a Big Little Book and all must be considered in the final evaluation. Due to the way they are constructed, damage occurs with very little use - usually to the spine, book edges and binding. More important defects that affect grading are: Split spines, pages missing, page browning or brittleness, writing, crayoning, loose pages, color fading, chunks missing, and rolling or out of square. The following grading guide is given to aid the novice:

9.4 Near Mint: The overall look is as if it was just purchased and maybe opened once; only subtle defects are allowed; paper is cream to off-white, supple and fresh; cover is flat with no surface wear or creases; inks and colors are bright; small penciled or inked arrival dates are acceptable; very slight blunting of corners at top and bottom of spine are common; outside corners are cut square and sharp. Books in this grade could bring prices of guide and a half or more.

9.0 Very Fine/Near Mint: Limited number of defects; full cover gloss with only very slight wear on book corners and edges; very minor foxing; very minor tears allowed, binding still square and tight with no pages missing; paper quality still fresh from cream to off-white. Dates, stamps or initials allowed on cover or inside.

8.0 Very Fine: Most of the cover gloss retained with minor wear appearing at corners and around edges; spine tight with no pages missing; cream/tan paper allowed if still supple; up to 1/4" bend allowed on covers with no color break; cover relatively flat; minor tears allowed.

6.0 Fine: Slight wear beginning to show; cover gloss reduced but still clean, pages tan/brown but still supple (not brittle); up to 1/4" split or color break allowed; minor discoloration and/or foxing allowed.

4.0 Very Good: Obviously a read copy with original printing luster almost gone; some fading and discoloration, but not soiled; some signs of wear such as corner splits and spine rolling; paper can be brown but not brittle; a few pages can be loose but not missing; no chunks missing; blunted corners acceptable.

2.0 Good: An average used copy complete with only minor pieces missing from the spine, which may be partially split; slightly soiled or marked with spine rolling; color flaking and wear around edges, but perfectly sound and legible; could have minor tape repairs but otherwise complete.

1.0 Fair: Very heavily read and soiled with small chunks missing from cover; most or all of spine could be missing; multiple splits in spine and loose pages, but still sound and legible, bringing 50 to 70 percent of good price.

0.5 Poor: Damaged, heavily weathered, soiled or otherwise unsuited for collecting purposes.

IMPORTANT

Most BLBs on the market today will fall in the Good to Fine grade category. When Very Fine to Near Mint BLBs are offered for sale, they usually bring premium prices.

A WORD ON PRICING

The prices are given for Good, Fine and Very Fine/ Near Mint condition. A book in Fair would be 50-70% of the Good price. Very Good would be halfway between the Good and Fine price, and Very Fine would be halfway between the Fine and Very Fine/

Near Mint price. The prices listed were averaged from convention sales, dealers' lists, adzines, auctions, and by special contact with dealers and collectors from coast to coast. The prices and the spreads were determined from sales of copies in available condition or the highest grade known. Since most available copies are in the Good to Fine range, neither dealers nor collectors should let the Very Fine/Near Mint column influence the prices they are willing to charge or pay for books in less than near perfect condition.

The prices listed reflect a six times spread from Good to Very Fine/ Near Mint (1 - 3 - 6). We feel this spread accurately reflects the current market, especially when you consider the scarcity of books in Very Fine/Near Mint condition. When one or both end sheets are missing, the book's value would drop about a half grade.

Books with movie scenes are of double importance due to the high crossover demand by movie collectors.

Abbreviations: a-art; c-cover; nn-no number; p-pages; r-reprint.

Publisher Codes: BRP-Blue Ribbon Press; ERB-Edgar Rice Burroughs; EVW-Engel van Wiseman; FAW-Fawcett Publishing Co.; Gold-Goldsmith Publishing Co.; Lynn-Lynn Publishing Co.; McKay-David McKay Co.; Whit-Whitman Publishing Co.; World-World Syndicate Publishing Co.

Terminology: All Pictures Comics-no text, all drawings; Fast-Action-A special series of Dell books highly collected; Flip Pictures-upper right corner of interior pages contain drawings that are put into motion when rifled; Movie Scenes-book illustrated with scenes from the movie. Soft Cover-A thin single sheet of cardboard used in binding most of the giveaway versions.

Promotional Comics

THE MARKETING OF A MEDIUM

by Dr. Arnold T. Blumberg, DCD

with new material and additional research by Sol M. Davidson, PhD, and Robert L. Beerbohm

Everyone wants something for free. It's in our nature to look for the quick fix, the good deal, the complimentary gift. We long to hit the lottery and quit our job, to win the trip around the world, or find that pot of gold at the end of the proverbial rainbow. Collectors in particular are certainly built to appreciate the notion of the "free gift," since it not only means a new item to collect and enjoy, but no risk or obligation in order to acquire it.

Ah, but there's the rub. Because things are not always what they seem, and "free gifts" usually come with a price. As the saying goes, "there's no such thing as a free lunch," so if it seems too good to be true, it probably is. This is the case even in the world of comics, where premiums and giveaways have a familiar agenda hidden behind the bright colors and fanciful stories. But where did it all begin?

Some of the earliest characters that were used as successful tools in promotional comics were Palmer Cox's creation "The Brownies." The illustration shown here showcases them drinking and endorsing Seal Brand Coffee.

EXTRA EXTRA

As we learn more about the early history of the comic book industry through continual investigation and the publishing of articles like those regularly featured in this book, we gain a much greater understanding of the financial and creative forces at work in shaping the medium, but perhaps one of the most intriguing and least recognized factors that influenced the dawn of comics is the concept of the premium or giveaway. (Note: Some of the historical information referenced in this article is derived from material also presented in Robert L. Beerbohm's introductory articles to the Platinum Age and Modern Age sections.)

The birth of the comic book as we know it today is intimately connected with the development of the comic strip in American newspapers and their use as an advertising and marketing tool for staple products such as bread, milk, and cereal. From the very beginning, comic characters have played several roles in pop culture, entertaining the youth of the country while also (sometimes none too subtly) acting as hucksters for whatever corporation foots the bill. From important staples to frivolous material produced simply to make a buck, these products have utilized the comics medium to sell, sell, sell. And what better way to hook a prospective customer than to give them "something for nothing?"

Starting in the 1850s, comics were being used in free almanacs such as Elton's, Hostetter's and Wright's to lure readers for the little booklets to sell patent medicine, farm products, tobacco, shoe polish, etc. Most of these are exceedingly rare today, hence it is difficult to compile an accurate history. More mention of these early precursors can be found in the Victorian Comics Era essay following this one. But although comic characters themselves were already being aggressively merchandised all around the world by the mid-1890s--as with, for example, Palmer Cox's The Brownies--the real starting point for the success of comics as a giveaway marketing mechanism can be traced to the introduction of The Yellow Kid, Richard Outcault's now legendary newspaper strip.

This unused cover was designed as the second cover for "Motion Picture Funnies Weekly." While the concept for this promotional comic title never caught on, the inaugural issue did feature the origin and first printed appearance of the Sub-Mariner.

Newspaper publishers had already recognized that comic strips could boost circulation as well as please sponsors and advertisers by drawing more eyes to the page, so Sunday "supplements" were introduced to entice fans. Outcault's creation cemented the theory with proof of comic characters' marketing and merchandising power.

Soon after, Outcault (who had most likely been inspired by Cox's merchandising success with The Brownies in the first place) caught lightning in a bottle once more with Buster Brown, who has the distinction of being America's first nationally licensed comic strip character. Soon, comic strips proliferated throughout the nation's newspapers as tycoons like Hearst and Pulitzer recognized the drawing power of the new medium and fought circulation wars to capture the pennies of the nouveau readership. They paid exorbitant salaries to comic strip artists such as Rudolph Dirks (Katzenjammer Kids), and used the funnies as newspaper supplements and as premiums to attract readers. Corporations soon had the chance to license recognizable personas as their own personal pitchmen (or women or animals...). Comic character merchandise wasn't far behind, resulting in a boom of future collectibles now catalogued in volumes like Hake's Price Guide to Character Toys.

TWO BIRTHS FOR THE PRICE OF ONE

Comic books themselves were at the heart of this movement, and giveaway and premium collections of comic strips not only appealed to children and adults alike, but provided the impetus for the birth of the modern comic book format itself. It could be said that without the concept of the giveaway comic or the marketing push behind it, there would be no comic book industry as we have it today. Well-known now is the story of how in spring 1933 Harry Wildenberg of Eastern Color Printing Company convinced Proctor & Gamble to sponsor the first modern comic book, Funnies on Parade, as a premium. Its success led to the first continuing comic book, Famous Funnies, and the rest, as they say, is history.

In 1935, while working on the printing presses of Eastern Color developing how modern comic books get printed, Juliun J. Proskauer came up with an idea for printing "Comic-Books-For-Industry." In July 1936 he made his first sale through his newly formed William C. Popper & Co. to David M. Davies, then advertising manager for Seagram's Distillers Corp. for three million copies of Seagram's Merrymakers in time for the 1936-37 Christmas season. "Thus was a new industry born," wrote Printing News in August 1945.

Even a casual perusal of the listings in this section of the Guide will dazzle the reader with the endless variety of purposes that this medium has served. Yes, promos have been used to hawk products from athletic equipment to zithers and zip codes, but comics are too versatile an art form to be confined to a few uses. They've swayed elections in cities (The O'Dwyer Story, 1949), in states (Giant for a Day: Jacob Javits, 1946) and nationwide (The Story of Harry Truman, 1948); solicited for charities (Donald Duck and the Red Feather, 1948); addressed health issues (Blondie, 1949, mental hygiene); discouraged kids from smoking (Captain America Meets the Asthma Monster, 1987); coached youngsters in sports skills (Circling the Bases, 1947, A.G. Spaulding); explained scientific complexities (Adventures in Science, 1946-61, GE); pleaded for social justice (Consumer Comics, 1975); espoused religious causes (Oral Roberts' True Stories, 1950s); protected the environment (Our Spaceship Earth, 1947); encouraged tourism (Wyoming, The Cowboy State, 1954); conveyed a sense of history (Louisiana Purchase, 1953); taught about computers (Superman Radio Shack Giveaway, 1980); trained employees (Dial Finance Dialogues, 1961-70) and executives (Beneficial Finance System, Managing New Employees, 1950s); cautioned safety (Willy Wing Flap, 1944(?)); announced corporate annual results (Motorola Annual Report, 1952); defended free enterprise (Steve Merritt, 1949); hammered communism (How Stalin Hopes to Destroy America, 1951); fought discrimination (Mammy Yokum & the Great Dogpatch Mystery, 1956, B'nai Brith); aided young workers in job-hunting (The Job Scene, 1969); battled the scourge of sickle cell anemia (Where's Herbie, 1972, U.S. H.E.W.); inspired the overcoming of adversity (Al Capp by Li'l Abner, 1946); fostered reading (Linus Gets a Library Card, 1960); recruited for the armed forces (Li'l Abner Joins the Navy, 1950); beguiled readers into learning languages (Blondie, 1949, Philadelphia public schools); and even instructed in such delicate matters as birth control (Escape from Fear, 1950 (revised 1959, etc.),

READ ALL ABOUT IT

The impact of this new approach to advertising was not lost on the business world. Contrary to modern belief, comic books were hardly discounted by the adults of the time...at least not those who had the marketing savvy to recognize an opportunity - or a threat - when they saw one. In the April 1933 issue of Fortune magazine, an article titled "The Funny Papers" trumpeted the arrival of comics as a force to be reckoned with in the world of advertising and business, and what's more, a force to fear as well. At first providing a brief survey of the newspaper comic strip business (which for many of the magazine's readers must have seemed a foreign topic for serious discussion), the article goes on to examine the incredible financial draw of comics and their characters:

"Between 70 and 75 per cent {sic} of the readers of any newspaper follow its comic sections regularly...Even the advertiser has succumbed to the comic, and in 1932 spent well over $1,000,000 for comic-paper space."

"Comic Weekly is the comic section of seventeen Hearst Sunday papers...Advertisers who market their wares through balloon-speaking manikins {sic} may enjoy the proximity of Jiggs, Maggie, Barney Google, and other funny Hearst headliners."

Although the article continues to cast the notion of relying on comic strip material to sell product in a negative light, actually suggesting that advertisers who utilize comics are violating unspoken rules of "advertising decorum" and bringing themselves "down to the level" of comics (and since when have advertisers been stalwart preservers of good taste and high moral standards), there is no doubt that they are viewing comics in a new light. The comic characters have arrived by 1933...and they're ready to help sell your merchandise too.

Fortune wasn't the only one to take notice as World War II came and went. In 1948, Louis P. Birk, the head of Brevity, Inc., an important promotional comics publisher said, "Comics are serious business." In an article in Printers' Ink magazine, he estimated that more than 80 different "comic booklets" had been produced and more than 45,000,000 million copies distributed in the five years before 1948. But of course, comics were serious business long before businessman/historian Birk noted the fact for posterity.

THE MARCH OF WAR AND BEYOND

Through the relentless currents of time, comic strips, books, and the characters that starred in them became more and more an intrinsic part of American culture. During the turmoil of the Great Depression and World War II, comic characters in print and celluloid form entertained while informing and selling at the same time, and premium and giveaway comics came well and truly into their own, pushing everything from loaves of bread to war bonds.

In the 1950s and '60s, there was a shift in focus as the power of giveaway and premium comics was applied to more altruistic endeavors than simply selling something. Comic book format pamphlets, fully illustrated and often inventively written, taught children about banking, money, the dangers of poison and other household products, and even chronicled moments in American history. The comic book as giveaway was now not only a marketing gimmick--it was a tool for educating as well.

The 1970s and '80s saw another boom in premium and give-

The promotional title "March of Comics" was a prolific comic that ran for 36 years and 488 issues featuring a variety of subjects and characters. (#25 shown) away comics. Every product imaginable seemed to have a licensing deal with a comic book character, usually one of the prominent flag bearers of the Big Two, Marvel or DC. Spider-Man fought bravely against the Beetle for the benefit of All Detergent; Captain America allied himself with the Campbell Kids; and Superman helped a class of computer students beat a disaster-conjuring foe at his own game with the help of Radio Shack Tandy computers.

Newspapers rediscovered the power of comics, not just with enlarged strip supplements but with actual comic books. Spider-Man, the Hulk, and others turned up as giveaway comic extras in various American newspapers (including Chicago and Dallas publications), while a whole series of public information comics like those produced decades earlier used superheroes to caution children about the dangers of smoking, drugs, and child abuse.

MARVEL SALUTES THE REAL HEROES THE MEN AND WOMEN OF THE U.S. MILITARY NOT FOR RESALE

Today, promotional comics continue to be used as a marketing tool to reach both children and adults alike. This 2005 comic was produced by Marvel Comics as a salute to the men and women of the armed forces.

Comics also turned up in a plethora of other toy products as the 1980s introduced kids to the joy of electronic games and action figures. Supplementary comics provided “free” with action figure and video game packages told the backstory about the product, adding depth to the play experience while providing an extra incentive to buy. Comics became an intrinsic part of the Atari line of video cartridges, for example, eventually spawning its own full-blown newsstand series as well.

As the twentieth century gave way to the twenty-first, giveaway comics were still being produced for inclusion in action figure and video game packages, as well as in conjunction with countless consumer items and corporations. It seems that the medium still has a lot to offer for all those companies desperate to make the most of their market share.

A COMIC BY ANY OTHER NAME

One of the earliest names for promotional comics was "special purpose comics." In their pursuit of superheroes, collectors have allowed promotional comics to lie fallow - under-appreciated and uncollected. Without a legitimate name, these products were given sundry other appellations - industrial comics, promos, giveaways, premiums, promics - each accurate but only for a small segment of the unorganized but lusty and lively medium. Perhaps no one name can cover all the variations and purposes of this branch of comic art, but for practical reasons if we accept the general premise that these comics were created to promote an idea, a product or a person, then "Promotional Comics" is probably as convenient a catch-all title as we can come up with.

We used the phrase "for practical reasons" because the word "practical" goes to the heart of promotional comics more than it does for any other comics product. What greater testimony is there to the medium's impact on American culture than to note their use by hard-headed, profit-minded business people and corporations? They invest their money and they expect results.

Today, premium comics continue to thrive and are still utilized as a valuable marketing and promotional tool. "Free" comics are still packaged with action figures and video games, and offered as mail-away premiums from a variety of product manufacturers. The comic industry itself has expanded its use of giveaway comics to self-promote as well, with "ashcan" and other giveaway editions turning up at conventions and comic shops to advertise upcoming series and special events. Many of these function as old-fashioned premiums, with a coupon or other response required from the reader to receive the comic.

As for the supplements and giveaways printed all those years ago, they have spawned a collectible fervor all their own, thanks to their atypical distribution and frequent rarity. For that and the desire to delve deeper into comics history, we hope that by focusing more directly on this genre, we can enhance our understanding of this vital component in the development and history of the modern comic book.

Whether you’re a collector or not, we’re all motivated by that desire to get something for nothing. For as long as consumers are enticed by the notion of the "free gift," promotional comics will remain a vital marketing component in many business models, but they will also continue to fight the stigma that has long been associated with the industry as a whole. “Respectable” sources like Fortune may have taken notice of the power of comic-related advertising 71 years ago, but after all this time comics still fight an uphill battle to establish some measure of dignity for the medium. Perhaps the higher visibility of promotional comics will eventually prove to be a deciding factor in that intellectual war.

See ya in the funny papers.

K. K. Publications/Western Publishing Co.: 1946 - No. 488, April, 1982 (#1-4 are not numbered) (K.K. Giveaway) (Founded by Sig Feuchtwanger)

Early issues were full size, 32 pages, and were printed with and without an extra cover of slick stock, just for the advertiser. The binding was stapled if the slick cover was added; otherwise, the pages were glued together at the spine. Most 1948 - 1951 issues were full size,24 pages, pulp covers. Starting in 1952 they were half-size (with a few exceptions) and 32 pages with slick covers.1959 and later issues had only 16 pages plus covers. 1952 -1959 issues read oblong; 1960 and later issues read upright. All have new stories except where noted.

Covers only to #2-4 (set) 1000

NOTE: Eight copies (plus one coverless) were discovered in 1974 in the estate of the deceased publisher. Covers only to issues No. 2-4 were also found which evidently were printed in advance along with #1. #1 was to be distributed only through motion picture movie houses. However, it is believed that only advanced copies were sent out and the motion picture houses not going for the idea. Possible distribution at local theaters in Boston suspected. The "pay" copy (graded at 9.0) was discovered after 1974, bringing the total known to nine. The last panel of Sub-Mariner contains a rectangular box with "Continued Next Week" printed in it. When reprinted in Marvel Mystery, the box was left in with lettering omitted.

Discovered with business papers, letters and exploitation material promoting Weekly Comic Magazine for use by newspapers in the same manner of The Spirit weeklies. Interesting note: these are dated three weeks before the first Spirit comic. Letters indicate that samples may have been sent to a few newspapers. These sections were actually 15-1/2x22" pages which will fold down to an approximate 8x10" comic booklet. Other various comic sections were found with the above, but were more like the Sunday comic sections in format.

The Pioneer Age

The American Comic Book: 1500s-1828

by Eric C. Caren ©2007

Want to avoid an argument in social discourse? Steer clear of politics and religion. In the latter category, the most controversial subject is human evolution. Collectors can become just as squeamish when you start messing with the evolution of a particular collectible. In most cases, the origin of a particular comic character will be universally agreed upon, but try tackling the origin of printed comics and you are asking for trouble. Perhaps I will make more friends than enemies amongst comic collectors if I first admit that in my own field of expertise, rare newspapers and other news forms – broadsides, tracts, newsletters, periodicals, etc. – 35 years of experience has left me somewhat at a loss to tell you what the first newspaper was. Actually, to be fair to myself, I could give you a list of at least a dozen good candidates and then it would be subjective as to which item on the list qualified as the godfather. It so happens that journalism and comics are not such distant cousins, and because a picture paints a thousand words, I have provided you with a number of pictorial exhibits to accompany this treatise. First printed comic? Ancestors of my Silver Age companions growing up in the 1960s? Yes, centuries before there was a Spider-Man, an Incredible Hulk, and the Fantastic Four, there were comics and cartoons!

My friend and fellow newspaper collector, Dr. Stephen A. Goldman, has always lived by the old maxim, "Knowledge is Power," and to that end he keeps an enormous personal library of books relating to journalism, history, and collectibles. Many years ago, I was perusing through the spines of a myriad of reference books in his print library (pre-Internet) and hit upon a title that really intrigued me – The Early Comic Strip by David Kunzle, published by The University of California Press in 1973. The subtitle of the tome is Narrative Strips and Picture Stories in the European Broadsheet from c. 1450 to 1825. Kunzle gets down to business in the flap copy. He states that "because the 'comic strip' has never been adequately defined, no one has known where to look for its ancestors…In this book the 'comic strip' is defined as a mass produced series of narrative images printed either on a single sheet, or else strung across several sheets…" The Kunzle book opened a whole new world for me, and I started adding many early items to my news archive. These would share space in the comics division of the archive with more familiar friends like the Yellow Kid, Little Nemo, and the Brownies.

In this article, I would like to share some of our mutual cousins with you in the hopes that you will be inspired to look back at what I am calling "The Pioneer Age" of comics. There are many things out there from the 16th to the 19th centuries that would be interesting for comic connoisseurs to collect. While some items illustrated within this article are virtually unobtainable, others can be found, and many other similar items are out there just waiting for inspired collectors to seek them out. All of the items pictured are taken from originals in my personal collection, with the exception of the Franklin snake cartoon which is proudly owned by Dr. Goldman. As far as I know, his example is the only one in private hands.

Before we begin, a bit of terminology is imperative. The terms 'broadsheet' and 'broadside' regarding works of the 16th and 17th centuries are fairly interchangeable and they essentially refer to the modern equivalent of a poster. Today, technically speaking, a broadside is a single sheet of paper printed only on the recto and a broadsheet is a piece of paper with printing on both sides. The earliest comic item illustrated in Kunzle is a ten-panel religious broadside probably printed in Strasburg (then Germany) circa 1460. Ten panels, biblical – hmm, what could it possibly depict? Guttenberg had invented moveable type only a few years earlier and used his printing press to print a now famous bible in Mainz, Germany, so it is no surprise that this early comic would be religious in nature. Non-secular matter would dominate the printing arts for well over a century to come. However, Kunzle does present us with a satirical and rather racy comic broadsheet done by one Casper of Regensburg, with a title that roughly translates to "My Heart doth Smart." This piece is replete with a picture of an alluring half-clothed maiden just out of her German bathing-house being admired by a kneeling young male observer. Kunzle dates this piece to circa 1485.

The earliest comic piece in my archive is a German broadside dated 1569 [Figure 1]. It is an illustrated attack on the Spanish Catholics led by the notoriously cruel Duke of Alva (center) who had recently occupied the Low Countries (Belgium and The Netherlands) and committed atrocities on the resident Protestant populace. It is half-allegorical, with the foreground consisting of the Devil and a nun blowing ill wind into the ear of the Duke of Alva who has in turn chained up the women of the Low Countries, and half-journalistic, with the upper half depicting the execution of Egmont and Horn in Antwerp.

The next two exhibits are particularly interesting to me. They are the work of the Hogenberg family of Cologne, Germany. Franz Hogenberg, and later his son Abraham, issued approximately 500 current event illustrated news broadsides starting in the 1560s and ending around 1620. The father had already become famous for his extremely detailed and accurate city and town views that he had published with a partner named George Braun in atlas format. With correspondents all over Europe sending the Hogenberg family news and the city views already compiled, the Hogenbergs were able to have their news broadsides on the streets for sale within weeks of political and military events taking place in England and on the European Continent. In some cases, the news sheets were out of their print shop within days of the actual event, particularly when the event occurred in Germany. These sheets were of uniform size, approximately 10" x 13", sometimes numbered and interesting in that the graphics were always the dominant part of the broadside. Usually, text was relegated to a few lines of rhyming verse beneath the copperplate engravings. As literacy in this period was primarily confined to the nobility, this was a most pragmatic vehicle for dissemination of news – and often propaganda – to the populace at large. The picture told the story and the text could be read to groups of people who might remember it due to its catchy rhyming format.

A fair percentage of these news sheets were composed as strip narratives. One example of this is from 1589 [Figure 2] and shows the murder of King Henry III of France by the monk Jacques Clement near Paris. This four-panel broadside includes the stabbing of the king and concludes with Mr. Clement being drawn and quartered by four horses. The next work illustrated here is a 6-panel narrative strip with no text dating from 1617 [Figure 3]. The first panel depicts the shooting in Paris of the Italian Concini, who had ruled France while Louis XIII was still a young boy. The second panel shows the release of the birds from their cages to symbolize the new independence of the young King Louis, and the rest of the panels involve the common people attacking the corpse of Concini in various vicious ways.

The next piece is also the earliest English language piece in my collection to employ word balloons. It is a trompe l'oeil, or collage, caricature satirizing the catastrophic South Sea Bubble, which ruined many investors in a manner similar to our own Tech Stock "New Economy" bubble of the 1990s. It is titled "The Bubblers Medley, or a Sketch of the Times/Being Europe's Memorial from the Year 1720" [Figure 4]. The most interesting scene to comic historians would have to be the one in the upper right corner depicting a number of men in a London coffeehouse – where merchants would regularly gather to read and discuss the latest news – speaking with word balloons. One of the gentlemen seated at a table sarcastically announces "I was to have took S. Sea [stock] at 2000 but chose rather to live here like a Knave than go to Jayl [sic] like a Fool."

The first successful American newspaper was the Boston News-Letter begun in 1704. From that point until the French and Indian War, there were precious few illustrations in any colonial newspaper. Some of the best information on early illustration in colonial newspapers can be found in the book Journals and Journeymen by Clarence Brigham, author of the most important bibliography of colonial newspapers. In a chapter simply entitled "Illustration," Brigham points out that the first illustration in an American newspaper was a simple woodcut of a flag in an issue of the Boston News-Letter from January 26, 1708. Except for advertisements and title devices, Brigham could not find another illustration until 1733, when John Peter Zenger inserted a crude map of Louisburg into his New York Weekly Journal. Then, after perhaps one more map of Louisburg in 1745 came something in 1754 that was to have a lasting effect in the hearts and souls of the colonials right through the fight for independence.

Brigham tells us "Benjamin Franklin, in the Pennsylvania Gazette of May 9, 1754, published what may well be called the earliest American newspaper cartoon. That year, at a time when the prospect of a war with the French was imminent, a congress of the colonies was called at Albany to be held in June. Franklin, in a plea for united action, published an article on the situation on May 9. Accompanying the article was a cartoon woodcut engraving of a snake divided in eight parts [Figure 5]… Under the snake was the motto 'Join, Or Die…' The segmented snake device was of great importance in calling the attention of the colonists to the necessity of union, and was revived at the time of the Stamp Act controversy in 1765 and again during the movement toward independence in 1774. That year, Isaiah Thomas used the snake cartoon device the full width of the first page in his Massachusetts Spy, and added a dragon, representing Great Britain, facing the snake…" [Figure 6]

The next time I find illustration in an American newspaper is at the time of our ratification process for the U.S. Constitution. The Massachusetts Centinel in 1787-1788 offered a series of what I call 'Federal Edifice Pillar' cartoons. Each time a state would ratify the Constitution, a new pillar would be added to the latest edifice cartoon. In Figure 7, we see the August 1788 cartoon with a headline reading "On the erection of the Eleventh Pillar of the great National Dome, we beg leave most sincerely to felicitate 'Our Dear Country.'" The cartoon thus shows that New York has ratified the Constitution. North Carolina's pillar is about to join New York according to the headline, which reads "Rise it Will," and lastly a fragmented Rhode Island Pillar is followed by a pointing hand which in turn is followed by the caption "The foundation Good – it may yet be SAVED." Under the cartoon can be found a dozen lines of verse called "The Federal Edifice." I have never seen any other illustrations in American newspapers dated before 1800. Therefore, it is safe to conclude that of the very few illustrations that were produced in American newspapers during the 18th century, the majority of them are cartoons!

Magazines of the 18th century offered more illustrations, perhaps because most of them were printed monthly, thereby giving the printer more time to produce an engraved plate or portrait to accompany the text of the periodical. Most of the illustrated magazines offered little in the way of cartoons; a notable exception was the Royal American Magazine printed in Boston. The famous silversmith and patriot, Paul Revere, produced the most famous cartoon of the era for this Boston magazine in June 1774 when he satirized the tea taxes and the closing down of Boston Harbor with a full page engraved cartoon entitled "The able Doctor or America Swallowing the Bitter Draught." This allegorical piece shows an Indian woman (representing colonials) having a pot of tea forced down her unwilling throat; a document labeled "Boston Port Bill" is thrown down at her simultaneously. The engraved cartoon was boldly signed in the lower right corner "P. Revere Sculp."

Much has been written about the icon "Bloody [Boston] Massacre..." by Paul Revere. It is claimed as an ancestor by collectors of newspapers, broadsides, printed Americana and, alas, comic/cartoon aficionados. I would add that nostalgia played a factor in my getting one for the collection many years ago (remembering it from history books as a young student). My friend Dr. Stephen A. Goldman says of Paul Revere's 1770 engraving of the Boston Massacre that it "has various elements common to early political cartoons. The piece has a distinct comic-like appearance, contains descriptive text (in verse), and is partly news, opinion, and propaganda. Revere in this work reveals himself to have much in common with later political cartoonists such as Harper's Weekly's Thomas Nast (19th Century) and the Washington Post's Herb Block (20th Century)" (for the image, see the color gallery later in this book).

of Paris (1783). The full title page contends that the magazine will be filled "With a Most Delicious Banquet of Amorous, Bacchanalian, Whimsical, Humorous, Theatrical and Polite [Not!] Entertainment." Almost every issue of this magazine contains a cartoon including word balloons. I have chosen one that is particularly delightful [Figure 8]. This is the first issue of the magazine, and it contains a plate entitled "Florizel granting Independency to Perdita." In it, a British aristocrat grabs the arm of a young maiden and his word balloon reads "Submit to my Royal Will." Seated on a sofa, the maiden responds "Declare me Independent and Then —."

Another London periodical from April 1783, The European Magazine, contains a cartoon including a buffalo. It is believed that this is the first time that the buffalo was used to symbolize the young American nation. The plate is headed "Amusement for John Bull and his Cousin Paddy or, the Gambols of the American Buffalo, in St. James Street" [Figure 9]. An enormous 12" x 20" fold-out political cartoon was included in the January 1799 issue of The Anti-Jacobin Review and Magazine [Figure 10]. I am not familiar enough with the politics of the day to interpret the cartoon, but it is notable for its size and its extensive use of word balloons.

The earliest English language periodical identifying itself as a "Comic Work" which I have come across is The New Wits Magazine [Figure 11], printed in London. The printing on the very top of the outer wrapper reads "This Comic Work (which will be completed in Twenty-four Numbers, making three Volumes) may be had of every liberal bookseller in the United Kingdom – It is published regularly every fortnight without any interruption whatever." The comic plate inside the issue is entitled "The Whiskers" and is dated December 1805. This is a remarkable issue in many ways; first of all, the pages are uncut, the original outer wrapper is present, and best of all, the plate is annotated in pencil and signed by the most famous British illustrator of the 19th century – the illustrator for many of Charles Dickens' first editions, George Cruikshank. The blank space above the "Whisker" cartoon is filled with a pencil notation reading "engraved from a drawing by my father I. Cruikshank" and is signed in the same pencil with the initials "GCk." Isaac Cruikshank (c.1756-1811), father of George, was also a noted caricaturist. This then is George's own copy of a comic magazine illustrated by his father!

I have an issue of a Hartford, Connecticut newspaper entitled the Connecticut Mirror dated January 7, 1811. The front page contains what is known as a carrier's address. Newsboys would deliver a special issue either at Christmas or New Years, as in this case, with verse that would be specially prepared for that edition; to solicit tips, the newsboys used these carrier address issues. This particular title chose to grace the front page not only with verse but also three crude comic illustrations [Figure 12]. I am almost certain that the cartoons satirize Napoleon, as here is a sample of the accompanying comic verse: "…From deeds of bold and rash emprize, to softer scenes we turn our eyes. Great Bonaparte's tender heart, Grows weary of his home-made queen, the mild, the beauteous Josephine…" It was not unusual to lampoon Napoleon, especially in Britain. "The Corsican Munchausen--Humming the Lads of Paris" [Figure 13] is a delightful hand-colored engraved cartoon "Published December 4, 1813" in the London Strand. Little Napoleon is spewing a multitude of word balloons ending with a particularly biting one that reads "Did I not burn Moscow – and leave 400,000 brave Soldiers to perish in the snow for the good of the French Nation?"

One of the most famous political cartoons in American history was first published in the Salem Gazette in Massachusetts on March 30, 1813. The front page contains "The Gerry-Mander, Essex South District Formed into a Monster!" [Figure 14] The expression gerrymandering has become famous when a geographical area is re-districted for the benefit of one political party over another. Elbridge Gerry, then Governor of Massachusetts, re-districted the state to get more Republican state senators than they otherwise would have netted. The cartoon puts the new district and the towns involved in a picture to resemble a winged dragon-like monster. Another Massachusetts newspaper called the Columbian Centinel issued a front-page endorsement in 1817 for John Brooks for Governor. Underneath this unabashed partisan endorsement is a cartoon of "The Good Ship Massachusetts Ready for Sea" [Figure 15] with all of the sails featuring either political slogans or the names of the candidates – Brooks, and his running mate for Lieutenant Governor, William Phillips.

Up until this point all of the American illustrations that I have discussed have been political cartoons of one sort or another. This would all change with the introduction of a comic paper called The Idiot, or Invisible Rambler, published under a pseudonym, "Samuel Simpleton." Printed in Boston in 1818, this publication was the earliest to present a recurring comic character that spoke with word balloons. This then is my choice for the 'Grandfather of all American Comics.' The comic is titled "Journal of Br. Jerry's Tour to the Ohio, (Continued)" [Figure 16]. The April 18, 1818 issue features the comic at the top of the first of the three columns on the front page of this four-page publication. It depicts two men on horses; one says to the other, "I am Going to Ohio." The other responds, "I have been." Ohio in 1818 was the Western frontier; it should be remembered that Lewis and Clark made their overland venture to the Pacific only about a dozen years earlier. Here, for the first time in American periodical publishing, do we encounter a secular and non-partisan comic of fictitious characters who speak with word balloons. Many of the elements that would later lead to familiar comic strip and comic book stylistic conventions are first found here.

Another really special publication in my holdings is an 1821 weekly British humor magazine in original green outer wrapper called The Pasquin or General Satirist [Figure 17]. I own issue #4, which has inserted into it a hand-colored word balloon cartoon relating to 'medical quackery.' One can only imagine the work that went into issuing a magazine with a hand-colored engraved cartoon. A poor patient stands before a doctor who is consulting with a mechanical robot made up of medical devices and tools. The consensus seems to be to “Bleed Him.” The colored cartoon is titled “A Consultation at the Medical Board.”

Did you know that the first full front-page illustration in an American newspaper was a cartoon? On Oct. 20, 1828, The New Hampshire Journal depicted a series of six coffins headed with skulls and bones. Each coffin has a biography describing various poor sods supposed to have been killed by General Andrew Jackson in duels, etc. Titled “Monumental Inscriptions” [Figure 18], who knows if it helped or hurt Jackson in his run for President. At any rate, he won the election and was re-elected President four years later.

An interesting sidelight to the history of comics as they relate to newspapers and periodicals would be something that we might consider a distant cousin of everything in this Guide. I have the third issue of a series called "The American Comic Almanac" [Figure 19], dated 1833 and published in Philadelphia "With Whims, Scraps and Oddities," and of course lots of comics.

Bell's Life in London, a popular British newspaper in the first half of the 19th century, issued a one-shot on June 24, 1831 called The Gallery of 140 Comicalities [Figure 20]. It is subtitled "Which has appeared from time to time, in the most Popular Sporting Sunday Paper, 'Bell's Life in London'." The first British comic book? Let the Brits fight that one out!

The Boston Notion of 1841 not only had a comic nameplate, called a masthead by some, but some front pages of this title carried a column headed "Series of Comical Designs, Executed for The Boston Notion" [Figure 21]. Later in the 1840s, we start to see the advent of comic magazines in America styled after the successful British humor magazine Punch. The Victorian Age of comics dawned with titles such as Yankee Doodle, and John Donkey. Books composed of comics like Obadiah Oldbuck have previously been discussed in articles on the Victorian Age like the one featured in this edition of the Guide. One last note: It has previously been asserted, quite correctly, that Harper's Monthly Magazine started reprinting British comics in the back pages of its magazines in the early 1850s. But what about a regular comic feature in an American newspaper? Take a look at the May 31, 1856 issue of Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper and you will find a page titled "Comic Department" [Figure 22]!

Eric C. Caren was born (a collector) in 1959. By the age of 5 he had collected stamps, coins and baseball cards. He started collecting rare newspapers at the age of 11, after stumbling upon an abandoned house full of them in Rockland County, NY where he lived. In high school in the mid-1970s he apprenticed with a rare book dealer in Connecticut and actually set up as a dealer at a comic book convention in NYC sometime around 1975. He graduated from the University of Maryland with a Business degree in 1981. His first job was director of a gallery that dealt in rare newspapers in London in Covent Garden Market soon after it opened. He established The Caren Archive, a full-time business selling historical collectibles in 1983. He co-founded HCA Auctions with Dennis Holzman. He is a former Director of The Ephemera Society of America, a Member of The American Antiquarian Society, a Member of the Antiquarian Booksellers Association of America, and a Consultant to The Newseum, which will re-open in Washington DC on Pennsylvania Avenue in several years (his first newspaper collection will be the most substantial part of their permanent collection). He is a partner with Stephen A. Goldman in the business that bears his name as well as in OldNews, Inc. He has authored nine books using rare newspapers - The "Extra" series with Castle Books - and has recently co-authored his 10th book, "The Civil War" Smithsonian Institution Headliners Series with Dr. Stephen A. Goldman. Reprints of papers from his and Dr. Goldman's archive are sold at The Smithsonian Institution and The Holocaust Memorial Museum.

Davy Crockett's ALMANACK, OF WILD SPORTS OF THE WEST, And Life in the Backwoods.

The Comic Almanac(k) debuted in America in 1831 with the earliest-known titles starting heavy with humor and sporting crude woodcut single panel cartoons. Ellm's American Comic Almanac was one of the first. By 1835 Davy Crockett, one of the nation's earliest national folk heroes, began issuing his own version. In the late 1840s the Comic Almanac(k)s began to offer tall-tale sequential comic strips which became somewhat commonplace in the 1850s, fueled by the advent of the California Gold Rush. They were instrumental in the development of the American comic strip and we will be reporting more new finds next year after more research into American folklore.

We have a lot of new discoveries to share with you again this year as amply evident in the price index which follows this year's history lesson. A quantum leap has finally been achieved in the area of introducing the comic book collecting world to American Comic Almanac(k)s as well as a huge multitude of American humor periodicals, many of which contained sequential comic strips.

This Victorian Era section is devoted to comic strips and books published during the years the United States expanded across the North American continent, fought a Civil War, shifted from an agrarian to an industrial society, "welcomed" waves of immigrants, and struggled over race, class, religion, temperance, and suffrage - and all of it depicted and satirized by generations of mostly now long-forgotten cartoonists. The social attitudes, beliefs, and conventions of 19th century America, the good as well as the bad, are to be found in abundance. Perhaps the first question to pop into most readers' minds will be, "What, beyond the happenstance of publication date, are Victorian Era comics?"

There has been a long slow-motion evolution of the comic strip which was not invented in America, contrary to many previous history books on the subject. One must examine many aspects of concurrent popular culture. The main aspect that we believe most distinguishes Victorian Era comic strips from those of later eras was the extremely rare use of word balloons within sequential (multi-picture) comic stories. When word balloons were used, it was nearly always within single-panel cartoons. On the occasions when they appeared inside a strip, with very few exceptions, the ballooned dialogue was inconsequential. Nineteenth-century comics tended to place both narration and dialogue beneath comic panels rather than within the panel's borders as they were thought by many to interfere with the art. Many of these comics are to the word balloon-strewn post-Yellow Kid comics of the 20th Century as silent movies are to the later "talkies." Just as sound changed how stories were structured on film, so too did comic strips change when the words were moved from beneath panels to inside them, and dialogue rather than narration drove the story in conjunction with the pictures.

The Victorian Era of actual comic strip books began on different dates in different nations, depending on when the first publication of a sequential comic book on their soil is known to have occurred. For the U.S. this happened when the American literary periodical Brother Jonathan printed the 40-page, 195-panel graphic novel The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck as a special extra dated September 14, 1842. Almost six decades later, America's Victorian comics came to their end, replaced by the onslaught of Platinum Age books reprinting newspaper strips from Bennett, Hearst, and Pulitzer Sunday comic sections, among many others.

There is considerable overlap between Victorian Era and Platinum Age comic books and strips. Those publications that continued from one century into the next, such as Puck, Judge, and Life, have their pre-1900 issues listed within the Victorian Age section, while their post-1899 issues can be found inside the Platinum Age. Some non-sequential (i.e., single-panel) American comic items existing prior to 1842 are also listed herein, going back to 1795. These belong to what could tentatively be called the Age of Caricature (1770s through 1830s). This was a fertile period for the art in England, when Gillray and Rowlandson, and, later, Cruikshank, Heath, and Seymour were that nation's top cartoonists. During the same period in the U.S., there were no artists who made their living as caricaturists, though William Charles, printer and engraver, did produce about two dozen spirited cartoon broadsides from 1805 to 1820, the most important ones concerning events of the War of 1812.

In addition, one can trace origins of American comic books to the humorous Comic Almanacs which began in earnest in the early 1830s.

Plate #6 By D.C. Johnston, 1835
Parodying a passage from the Journal of Fanny (Frances) A. Kemble, a British woman who wrote a highly negative book about American Culture after returning from the U.S. Word balloon use abounds.*

The earliest known cartoon-like woodcut printed on paper in North America was in a Puritan children's book first published in 1646. Titled simply The Burning of Mr. John Rogers, it showed in flaming graphic detail what happens to those who stray from the flock and have to be burned at the stake. Dr. Wertham would have had a field day with that one!

Cartoon broadsides and other single panel images, often using word balloons, appeared from pre-Revolution days through the end of the 19th Century. The earliest known attributed cartoon, designed by the ubiquitous Benjamin Franklin, was "Heaven Helps Only Those Who Help Themselves," which first appeared in his pamphlet Plain Truth in 1747.

The most popularly remembered 18th-Century American cartoons are likely Franklin's "Join or Die" in 1754, representing the American Colonies as severed snake parts, and "The Bloody Massacre Perpetrated in King Street" -- Paul Revere's 1770 depiction of the Boston Massacre, which he pirated from the earlier Henry Pelham broadsheet cartoon "The Fruits of Arbitrary Power."

In September 1826, John Warner Barber, New Haven, Ct. (1798-1885) designed and self-published the broadside The Drunkard's Progress, Or The Direct Road to Poverty, Wretchedness and Ruin showing in four stages sequentially "The Morning Dram" which is "The Beginning of Sorrow, " "The Grog Shop" with its "Bad Company," "The Confirmed Drunkard" in a state of "Beastly Intoxication," and the "Concluding Scene" with the family being driven off to the alms house. It is an interesting set of cuts, faintly reminiscent of Hogarth. Barber began his career in 1819, age 21, engraving on wood. He devoted most of his career to the multitude of art chores associated with book production. As late as 1870 he was issuing Barber's Temperance Tracts, which built upon his 1826 original plus four panels showing the positive effects of living without alcohol.

The first American whose fame was based primarily on his cartoons appears to be David Claypoole Johnston (1798-1865). Johnston provided illustrations for various almanacs, books, and periodicals, including the masthead for *Brother Jonathan*s. Most notable of Johnston's comics work was his nine-issue series Scraps, which he self-published from 1828 to 1849. This series was highly influenced by George Cruikshank's series Scraps and Sketches, which first appeared in 1827. Because of the resemblance, Johnston became known in his day as "the American Cruikshank." Each issue of Johnston's Scraps consists of four large folio-sized pages, printed on one side, with nine to twelve single-panel cartoons per page, and each page often organized around a theme. Also popular was his comic album Outlines Illustrative of the Journal of F A K (1835), which parodied passages from the journal of recently published observations on America by British actress Fanny Kemble.

Johnston, himself a failed actor, had an interest in the theater his entire career. In addition to producing a number of prints depicting American actors in famous roles, he collaborated with actor Henry J. Finn to produce the 1831 (American) Comic Annual, with Finn as Editor and Johnston as artist, published by Richardson, Lord and Holbrook, Boston. It featured almost 30 full-page Johnston-designed copper engravings and woodcuts. Also that year, Finn solo produced Finn's Comic Sketch Book, a twelve-page album similar to Johnston's Scraps with upwards of half a dozen single-panel cartoons per page. It was published by Peabody and Co, of New York in business from 1831-1843. (Finn died tragically in a steamboat accident Jan. 13, 1840.)

Perhaps Johnston's most interesting contribution to the history of the comic strip in American came in 1837, when he produced the sequential comic broadside, Illustrations of the Adventures & Achievements of the Renowned Don Quixote & his Doughty Squire Sancho Panza (27.4 x 30.4 cm). This blank-reverse engraved print was an elaborate twelve-panel satire of the Andrew Jackson-Van Buren administration. It likely sold for 25 cents, seeing distribution in Boston, New York and Philadelphia. Much later, in 1863, Johnston drew another sequential comic broadside, The House the Jeff Built (27.5 x 36.7 cm), a bitter indictment of Jefferson Davis and the Southern slavocracy.

In July 1839, Wilson and Company, a newly formed New York printing firm, began publishing a mammoth newspaper by the name of Brother Jonathan. The publisher, J. Gregg Wilson had employed the newspaper format for Brother Jonathan to circumvent the higher postage rates imposed on magazines, but Brother Jonathan was a newspaper in format only -- it contained not a shred of news, instead specializing in serialized fiction, some of it written by Americans but most of it pirated from foreign sources. Despite the cost savings, the mammoth format had its limitations; when opened it measured a whopping three feet by four feet. So, once Brother Jonathan was an established success, Wilson and Day began in January 1841 the simultaneous publication of a magazine-sized quarto edition of Brother Jonathan that reprinted the contents of the mammoth edition.

Later that same year, to capitalize on the name recognition of their successful twin publications, Wilson and Company started issuing book-length Brother Jonathan Extras in the same format as the quarto magazine. These reprints are counted among the earliest paperback books in America. Most of the Extra numbers were pirated European novels. For example their eighth extra was the first American printing of a Charles Dickens novel.

But for their ninth Extra, they did something no American publisher had ever done before -- they pirated a graphic novel, Rodolphe Töpffer's The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck. By reformatting Oldbuck from its original small oblong strip design to fit Brother Jonathan's standard quarto format Wilson and Company inadvertently made this edition (alone) of Obadiah Oldbuck resemble a modern comic book. Oldbuck's arrival on the shores of the New World would directly inspire a wave of American imitators. The STRANGE and WONDERFUL Adventures of BACHELOR BUTTERFLY
200 COMIC DRAWINGS

The Strange and Wonderful Adventures of Bachelor Butterfly by Rodolphe Töpffer (New York, 1846) was America's 3rd comic book; Wilson & Company's second comic book, this time out staying with the original European format. Below: sample pages 15 & 16.

Even though in 1904 (in its September 3 edition), The New York Times accurately identified the Brother Jonathan Extra as the first American comic book as well as Wilson & Co. utilizing Tilt & Bougue's original printing plates as well as still being in print for sale in New York at such a late date, Töpffer has already been largely forgotten in the New World. It is high time Töpffer received credit long overdue as the inventor of the modern comic strip, laying previously long-held myths to rest.

Töpffer (1799-1846) was a playwright, novelist, artist, and teacher from Geneva, Switzerland, who in 1827 had begun producing what he called "picture novels," sharing them with his friends and students. His earliest editions were self-published via lithography on transfer paper as they use the word "autographie" in their imprints. The earliest printers were J. Freydig, Frutiger (1830s) and Schmidt (1840s). These first sequential comic books, scripted in Töpffer's native French language, found their way to Paris and became an instant hit. According to Gombrich in Art and Illusion (1960), "Töpffer recognized that he could rely on the reader to supplement from their own lives what was omitted between the panels. This is crucial in the development of the sequential comic strip."

The demand for his comic books soon outstripped the supply, and pirated editions, redrawn by others, were created by Parisian publisher Aubert to capitalize on this. In a world where international copyright conventions did not exist, this was perfectly legal, if morally questionable. Thus, in 1841, London publisher Tilt and Bogue commissioned George Cruikshank to create an English version of Töpffer's Les Amours de M. Vieux Bois by pirating Aubert's pirated edition of the Geneva original.

This English translation, co-financed by George Cruikshank himself, sported a new cover page by George's brother Robert, based on a montage of Töpffer's scenes. Confirmation of this fact came when George Cruikshank's personal copy surfaced in auction recently with the inscription "Copied from a French book by my Brother Robert" above the title page with the same scene. This is the translation that was reprinted by America's Wilson and Company as The Adventures of Mr. Obadiah Oldbuck utilizing the original Tilt and Bogue printing plates.

Tilt and Bogue followed up their success by translating into English two additional stories of Töpffer's seven published graphic novels: Beau Ogleby, circa 1843 (originally Histoire de M. Jabot), and Bachelor Butterfly two years later (from Histoire de M. Cryptogame). David Bogue also published picture-story strip books by John Leighton using the pseudonym Luke Limner. He wrote and drew beautiful comic books titled London Out of Town or The Adventures of the Browns At The Seaside; Comic Art-Manufactures; and The Ancient Story of the Old Dame and Her Pig starting in 1847, but none of these seem to have ever been republished in America. They follow a definite Töpffer influence. This growing body of comic book production was made easier by the spreading understanding of transfer paper lithography, otherwise the panels would have had to have been drawn and lettered mirror reverse. Gombrich referred to Töpffer's comic books as "the innocent ancestors of today's manufactured dreams... everywhere in these countless episodes of almost surrealist inconsequence we find a mastery of physiognomic characterization which sets the standard for such influential humorous draftsmen in the 19th century as Wilhelm Busch in Germany."

A Register of The New York City Book Trades 1821-1842 by Sidney F. & Elizabeth Stege12, Huttner (The Bibliographical Society of America, NYC, 1993) mentions Benjamin H. Day bought into Brother Jonathan's publisher, Wilson and Company, in this year, becoming at some point an equal partner with owner J. Gregg Wilson. The Register lists them both as publishers of Brother Jonathan at the same address of 162 Nassau Street. Other historical artifacts state Day eventually became sole-owner and publisher. Exactly when has not yet been determined, though we have figured out with certainly before 1850 .

This is the same Benjamin H. Day who started the first successful penny newspaper in 1833, The (New York) Sun, transforming it in four short years into the largest circulation daily in the world at that time. He sold out his ownership of the Sun to his brother-in-law during the financial "panic" of 1837, a mistake he regretted the rest of his life. He re-emerged heavily involved in Brother Jonathan definitely by 1840 and as a partner by 1841. Brother Jonathan's offices were right next door to Tamany Hall. (See the first 20 minutes of the 2002 movie Gangs of New York to visualize the period atmosphere and their customer base.) According to The Brothers Harper by Eugene Exmen (Harper & Row, 1965), on page 125, "Brother Jonathan... offered in its weekly edition and also in special supplements very cheap reprints of English novels. In effect, it began a price-cutting war against the older established 'pirates' among the book publishers..." Day, it appears, had found the perfect project on which to build a new empire.

Desirous of repeating the success they had with Obadiah Oldbuck, Wilson and Company published the first American edition of Bachelor Butterfly in 1846. Three years later, they reformatted Obadiah Oldbuck back into its original British shape using lithography, dropping a handful of comic panels and altering the text to hide these deletions. Soon thereafter, they published other comic books for a steadily growing market that they had helped to stimulate. In recognition of their significant role in the dissemination of sequential comics, Wilson and Company deserve to be remembered as the first comic book publisher in America.

Back in Europe, perhaps inspired by his involvement with Töpffer's Obadiah Oldbuck, George Cruikshank soon created several sequential comic books of his own. These too found their way to America. The Bachelor's Own Book, published first in Britain in 1844, became the second known U.S. published sequential comic book when it was reprinted by Burgess, Stringer and Company the following year. Next was Cruikshank's masterpiece The Bottle, the Hogarthian-style tale of a man whose addiction to alcohol brings himself and his family to ruin. After debuting in London in 1847, it was reprinted the same year in a British-American co-publication between David Bogue and Americans Wiley and Putnam. Both printings were in huge folio form, available in either black and white or professionally hand-tinted versions. In 1848, the story saw American print again, this time in smaller form, placed at the front of the otherwise prose volume Temperance Tales; Or, Six Nights with the Washing-tonians. It continued to be reprinted by a variety of publishers into the early 20th Century. The Bottle was even reproduced onto painted glass slides and then projected by magic lantern onto a screen for the moral edification of temperance audiences. The Drunkard's Children, Cruikshank's sequel to The Bottle, was issued July 1, 1848 as a British-American-Australian co-publishing venture, but was less successful, and had not nearly as many reprints.

The most clearly sequential, as well as fun, of George Cruikshank's comic books was The Tooth-Ache, first issued in London in 1849. It was reprinted in America later that same year by Philadelphia map maker J.L. Smith. An additional concurrent version was also issued from Boston.

When closed, this booklet appears an unassuming 5-1/4 inches tall by 3-1/4 inches wide. Its striking feature is that the book folds open accordion style, stretching the entire 43-panel story along one single strip of paper, which when fully extended is seven feet, three inches long! The Tooth-Ache was issued in both black and white and professionally hand-colored editions. Abridged editions of the story, printed in black and white and with a "normal" page-turning rather than fold-out presentation, appeared inside promotional giveaway comics issued by American companies in the 1880s.

Thanks to Töpffer, Cruikshank, and a handful of enterprising American publishers, the 1840s should be remembered as the decade when America first fell in love with the comics. It had seen the U. S. publication of six sequential comic books, as well as the importation of other comics with foreign imprints. America's growing interest in graphic humor was further stimulated by the growth of two other fields: the cartoon broadside and the humor magazine.

As mentioned before, the cartoon broadside had been a part of the American scene since pre-Revolution days, but it did not flourish until stone lithography (introduced in 1818 and in wide use by the 1830s) made the reproduction of images relatively fast and cheap. From the early 1830s into the mid 1840s, the leading producer of cartoon broadsides in America was New York printer H. R. Robinson, who either drew his own cartoons or employed others, especially E. W. Clay, to do it. Clay is notable for having produced the first sequential comic broadside in America. Published in 1834 and entitled, "This Is the House that Jack Built" (50 x 32 cm), the nine-panel parody of the classic nursery rhyme was an attack on the Jackson Administration. The dominant theme of American cartoon broadsides was political, as befitted a nation where politics was the leading spectator sport. As the American electorate grew increasingly educated and prosperous, the demand for cartoon broadside also increased. During the 1840s, lithographers in New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, entered the field to satisfy that demand. The best known of these, Nathaniel Currier, later Currier and Ives, joined the fray in 1848. The firm employed many artists, but its chief political cartoonist was Louis Maurer and its chief comic artist was Thomas Worth.

Davy Crockett's Alamnac #14, 1848, contains a 17 panel comic strip detailing tall tales of his life culminating with Crockett's death in The Alamo in 1836.

Except for the three previously cited sequential cartoon broadsides, nearly all of the cartoon broadsides published in America from 1832 to 1876, its dominant era, were single panels. From the 1860s onward, broadside series on a single comic theme became common, the most famous being Thomas Worth's Darktown series. These can be loosely categorized as sequential comics since they employed the same characters and formed a story of sorts when hung together on a wall, as was the publisher's expectation. Sequential art or not, the cartoon broadsides nearly always employed the speech balloons that later became one of the defining characteristic of the American comic strip.

During the same decade that sequential comics and cartoon broadsides were growing in popularity, the illustrated American humor magazine made its debut. The British comic weekly Punch, founded in 1841, was an immediate success, both in England and the United States. It was a handsomely printed quarto, initially twelve pages and later sixteen, with a repeating cover design, backed by a page of small advertisements, humorous text interspersed with comic spot art, and a single panel full-page cartoon. A significant subset of Punch's subscriber base was located in the U.S., to which thousands of copies were exported on an ongoing trans-Atlantic basis. Inevitably, enterprising American publishers attempted to repulse this invader with a home-grown comic weekly. The first, Yankee Doodle, came to town (New York, that is) on October 10, 1846, for one year. Judy (November 28, 1846 to February 20, 1847), The John-Donkey (January 1 to October 21, 1848), and The Elephant (January 22 to February 19, 1848) soon followed. None of them was successful, but all of them continued to feed the growing American interest in comic art.

American-created sequential comic book. Brothers James and Donald Read, who had worked for a time as cartoonists on Yankee Doodle, were the creators of *Journey to the Gold Diggins by Jeremiah Saddlebags. This spirited send-up of the California gold rush craze was published in June 1849 by Stringer and Townsend, the late publishers of Judy, and, soon after, by U. P. James of Cincinnati. This Töpffer-influenced comic book chronicles the adventures of its hero Jeremiah Saddlebags in his get-rich-quick quest for gold in California. It is highly sought by collectors of Western Americana. Interestingly, the back cover of the Stringer and Townsend edition carries an advertisement for Rose and Gertrude - a Genevese Story, one of Rodolphe Töpffer's non-comics prose novels.

Stringer and Townsend was making something of a name for itself as a publisher of comic art. It will be remembered that it was one of the 1845 participants in the American publication of The Bachelor's Own Book. And, then, in 1846-47, it published Judy. Its decision to issue Jeremiah Saddlebags was all in due course.

The Gold Rush proved to be a gold mine for American comic artists. Aside from being a featured topic in the 1849 edition of David Claypool Johnston's Scraps, in comic almanacs, and in Currier cartoon prints, it was the subject of several other significant sequential series. The first, The Adventures of Mr. Tom Plump (a fat man who nearly starves to death in his failed attempt at California Gold riches), saw print in 1850. The second, The Adventures of Jeremiah Old-Pot (a twelve-part burlesque narrative of a New York businessman who attempts to get rich selling tin in price-inflated California), ran throughout 1852 in Yankee Notions. Though the narrative was distinctly American in its humor, the artwork was probably German in origin. Yankee Notions' Publisher, T. W. Strong, built his business on recycling old woodcuts with new captions attached. It should be noted that the Old-Pot series, borrowed or otherwise, was the first sequential art to appear in an American humor magazine. *Yankee Notions, published from 1852 to 1875, also has the distinction of being the first comic monthly published in America.

"Moses Keyser the Bowery Bully's Trip to the California Gold Mines," was a 13-page comic story that appeared in Elton's Californian Comic All-My-Nack for 1850. It was reprinted at least twice in the circa 1850-51 booklet The Clown, Or The Banquet of Wit and later again in Sam Slick's Comic Almanac in 1857. The Clown is also notable as the earliest known anthology of sequential comics, with the bonus that each multi-panel story is by a different artist. Many of the artists are as yet unidentified, and how much of it is original American material versus that reprinted from Europe is presently unknown. But verified are cartoons by George Cruikshank, Elton (American), the Read brothers, Grandville (French), and Richard Doyle (British). The Doyle contribution reprints the comics story "Brown, Jones and Robinson and How They Went to a Ball," which originally saw print in the August 24, 1850 issue of Punch. This is the first known American appearance of these Doyle characters, and was almost certainly pirated.

Richard Doyle's The Foreign Tour of Messrs. Brown, Jones, and Robinson is basically a travelogue in illustrated form, told via humorous episodes, part sequential cartoon sequences, and part snapshots of moments jumping forward in time. This halfway sequential format was ideal for most 19th Century cartoonists, who, with rare exception, had not quite grasped how to maintain a single sequential story for much longer than two dozen successive panels. Doyle had simplified Töpffer's formula in a manner most artists could attempt to emulate. Episodes of "Brown, Jones, and Robinson" originally appeared in Punch in 1850, until a dispute between the Roman Catholic Doyle and Punch's editors over an anti-Papal joke ended with Doyle's resignation. Doyle redrew and expanded the story into a single album, first seeing print in 1854 from British publisher Bradbury and Evans.

New York Publisher D. Appleton brought the album to America, reprinting it in 1860, 1871, and 1877. Next, Dick and Fitzgerald of New York pirated Doyle's story sometime in the early 1870s. Doyle's format from Foreign Tour was emulated again and again. Examples include: the 1857 Mr. Hardy Lee, His Yacht, by Charles Stedman; the 1860s- 1870s G. W. Carleton-published Our Artist In... series, set in various Latin American countries; the Augustus Hoppin 1870s sketch novels On the Nile, Crossing the Atlantic, and Ups and Downs on Land and Water; and Life founder John Ames Mitchell's 1881 (pre-Life) The Summer School of Philosophy at Mt. Desert. D. Appleton, the official, authorized American publisher of Foreign Tour, even commissioned an American artist - Toby - to create a sequel comic album involving Doyle's characters visiting the U.S. and Canada, published in 1872 as The American Tour of Messrs Brown, Jones and Robinson. In terms of influencing the development of mid-19th Century American comics, Doyle's Foreign Tour ranks with the works of Töpffer, Cruikshank, and Busch.

Doyle was also the author of an equally popular earlier cartoon series for Punch, entitled, In Manners and Customs of Ye Englyshe, Mr. Pips Hys Diary, which was reprinted in 1849. In this work, Doyle told his story using a deliberately primitive almost stick-figure art style, combined with the Hogarthian structure of large single panel cartoons leaping forward in time with each picture.

Manners and Customs of Ye Harvard Studente, which ran in the first year of the Harvard Lampoon (1876-current), shows the clearest influence. The series by then student Francis Gilbert Attwood was collected in 1877 by Houghton Mifflin. Attwood followed it up with Manners and Customs of Ye Bostonians, again in the pages of the Harvard Lampoon, but it is unknown whether that series was ever reprinted in book form. Attwood later became one of the regular artists in Life.

The Extraordinary and Mirth-provoking Adventures by Sea and Land of Oscar Shanghai, inspired by Bachelor Butterfly, was issued May 1855 by Garrett and Company, Publishers, No. 18 Ann Street, New York. Oscar Shanghai has many misadventures including being swallowed by a whale, making a trip in a flying machine to Africa, where he is shot out of a huge bow by a "Black Prince" for refusing to marry a local princess of color. After more adventures, he makes it back home.

Oscar Shanghai's first publisher was confirmed in 2002 with the discovery of a very rare 36-page catalog from 1856 of books, pamphlets and prints handled by B.H. Day (successor to Wilson and Company) who was by this time publishing Brother Jonathan as a twice-a-year holiday pictorial only. The catalog has a few crossover advertisement pages from an associate publisher, Garrett and Company. This rediscovered treasure, which sold for $750 in 2002, contains within a sequential strip of one panel per page over 32 of those pages titled "Peter Piper in Bengal," by John Tenniel, reprinted from four 1853 issues of Punch. In the narrative, Peter Piper tries his hand hunting all different kinds of wild game with many misadventures.

Amongst the many varied type of "Cheap Books" for sale in this rare catalog are the comic books The Adventures of Obadiah Oldbuck, Bachelor Butterfly's Queer Love Adventures and Misfortunes, and The Fortunes of Ferdinand Flipper, plus the aforementioned Oscar Shanghai. All were priced at "25¢ per copy, postage free, refunds paid out in stamps." There is also an advertisement for a comic book entitled A Day's Sport - Or, Hunting Adventures of S. Winks Wattles, a Shopkeeper, Thomas Titt, a "legal gent," and Major Nicholas Noggin, a Jolly Good Fellow Generally by Henry L. Stephens (1824-1882) of Philadelphia.

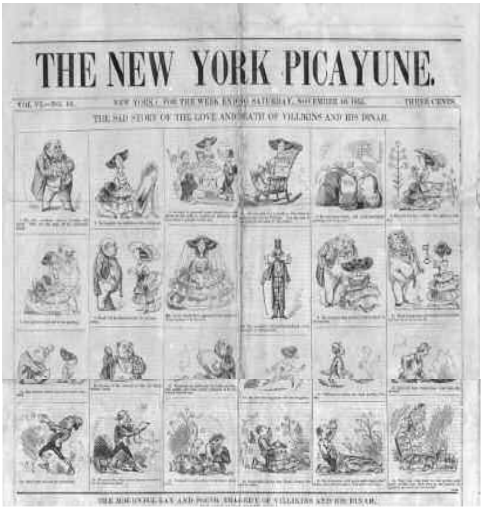
Stephens, later the political cartoonist for Vanity Fair (New York, 1859-1863) and a leading children's book illustrator, produced his first work, Illustrations of the Poets: From Passages in the Life of Little Billy Vidkins, a small wrappered album of 32 comic woodcuts, in 1849. It was first published by S. Robinson, of Philadelphia, and reprinted with variant titles several times in the 1850s including Yankee Notions. It is likely that Little Billy Vidkins was printed before Jeremiah Saddlebags, though more research is needed before making this claim.



THE NEW YORK PICAYUNE.
THE SAD STORY OF THE LOVE AND DEATH OF VILLKINS AND HIS DINAH.

The New York Picayune v6 #46, Nov 10, 1855, later edited by Frank Bellew, regularly ran comic strips, this one right on the cover.

Garrett and Company was also responsible for the 1856 publication of The Sad Tale of the Courtship of Chevalier Slyfox-Wikof, Showing His Heart-Rending Astounding and Most Wonderful Love Adventures with Fanny Elssler and Miss Gambol. This book parodied the very public relationship between the then-famous wealthy American aristocrat Henry Wikoff, and the even more famous European actress/ dancer Fanny Elssler. It is dated thusly because Wikoff's memoir is pictured in the comic book.

Apparently in late 1854 Garrett and Company formed a brief two-year partnership with Dick and Fitzgerald, officially becoming Garrett, Dick and Fitzgerald in November 1856, while continuing to operate out of the same 18 Ann Street address in New York. One month later they issued Richard Doyle's British published graphic novel The Foreign Tour of Messrs. Brown, Jones, and Robinson, reformatting it into the same oblong shape as Garrett's two prior comic books (which in turn were formatted in imitation of Töpffer's albums). This information came to light just this year. The interested scholar is encouraged to check out the new listings for Garrett's The Home Circle in the index.

In 1858, Garrett appears to have dropped out, leaving Dick and Fitzgerald alone with the former's book stock, his place of business, and most importantly, the printing plates for his comic books. For reasons unknown, Dick and Fitzgerald steered away from reprinting Garrett's comic books for more than a decade. But in the 1870s they resumed publication - not only of the three albums published by Garrett, but also of Obadiah Oldbuck and Bachelor Butterfly from Wilson and Company, and Ferdinand Flipper from Brother Jonathan - all of them also making use of the original printing plates. The inclusion of books from Brother Jonathan, Wilson and Company, and Garrett and Company all within the same promotional Peter Piper catalog from B.H. Day suggests that these early publishers of comic books had many over-lapping fields of interest,, and that Dick and Fitzgerald became the inheritor/acquirer of all of it. Dick and Fitzgerald also reprinted in the 1870s the earlier William T. Peter published Ichabod Academicus (how that title might have connected, if at all, with B.H. Day's business remains unclear). We can now say, though, that an evolving group of a handful of publishers was responsible, over a span of 46 years, beginning with the very first graphic novel published in America in 1842, for keeping in print in America a cluster of slightly over half a dozen graphic novels.

Tebbel's History of Book Publishing in the US (vol. 1, pages 351-2) states that Burgess and Stringer was dissolved in late 1840s and became two firms, Stringer and Townsend, and Burgess and Garrett. Burgess retired in 1850 and his nephew William Brisbane Dick stepped into the partnership, whereupon the new company was renamed Garrett, Dick and Fitzgerald. Garrett retired in 1851 and the firm became Dick and Fitzgerald. The firm persisted under that name until 1917.

Collections reprinting cartoons from Punch saw print in the U.S., such as Merry Pictures by the Comic Hands, imported for the 1859 Christmas Season, plus various John Leech, George Du Maurier, and Phil May books which appeared from the 1850s through 1910s. Finally, many American weekly newspapers and weekly and monthly magazines, humorous and non-humorous, reprinted cartoons from Punch. Such inclusions often became a prelude to switching to original material by American artists, if that publication find's cartoon section find American cartoonists of sufficient talent.

Harper's Monthly, the leading American monthly, was a prime example. Soon after it commenced publication in November 1850, it began to carry a few pages of single panel cartoons reprinted from Punch at the rear of each issue. This evolved into reprinting sequential comic pages from the British periodical Town Talk, and then, starting December 1853, original sequential comics by the great Frank Bellew.

Bellew (1828-1888) should be regarded as the "Father of American Sequential Comics." Born in India, educated in France and England, he emigrated to America in 1850. His earliest work shows an influence from Doyle, but he rapidly developed his own unique art style. Bellew's comics, both sequential and single panel, graced nearly every American comic periodical published from the 1850s into the 1870s.

A month after the publication of the anonymous first installment of Jeremiah Old-Pot in Yankee Notions, Bellew began contributing his six-part, 18-panel comic series, "Mr. Blobb in Search of a Physician" to The Lantern, a New York comic weekly published from January 10, 1852 to July 2, 1853. The series ran in six of the nine issues published from January 31 through March 27, 1852. This was followed in April and May by the 16-panel, three-issue comic sequence "Mr. Bulbear's Dream", which concluded with the main character awakened from his dream by falling out of bed, exactly like Little Nemo would do five decades later.

These two series were just the beginning for Bellew, who contributed a voluminous amount of work to the New York Picayune (1850-1860) (which he also edited for a time in 1857-58), The Comic Monthly (1859-1881), Momus, an 1860 comic daily, The Phunniest of Awl (1864-1867) (which he also edited), Punchinello (1870), and Wild Oats (1870-1881), to name the most prominent.

The Comic Monthly deserves special mention. Started in March 1859 and published by J. C. Haney and Company, of 119 Nassau Street, New York, The Comic Monthly was a profusely illustrated 16-page folio, the same size as Harper's Weekly. It focused its graphic satire on politics, the theater, and the comedy of everyday life. A preponderance of the purely comic satire took the form of sequential art. Here are random samplings of highlights from issues from 1860:

- February: "A Day of Humiliation, Fasting, Supplica-tion, and Prayer (four panels, unsigned), "New Year Calls under the Influence of Hard Times" (twelve panels, unsigned), "Young Trouble-some; or, Master Jacky's Holidays" (nineteen panels covering three and half pages, unsigned);
- April: "Four Years After Marriage" (sixteen panels, unsigned), "Our Masked Ball" (twelve panel centerspread, Bellew), "Trials of a Witness" (eight panels, Bellew);
- May: "Precocities of Young Springles" (seven panels, unsigned), "The Fight for the Championship" (twenty-four panel centerspread, Bellew), "Steam Applied to Music" (three panels, unsigned), "The Course of True Love" (four panels, Bellew);
- June: "Further Particulars of the Fight" (nine panel cover, Bellew), "The Man Who Went to See the Fight" (twelve panels, unsigned);
- July: "Explaining American Politics to an Intelligent Foreigner" (twelve panels, unsigned), "The Meerschaum Mania" (two panels, Bellew), "The Art of Stump Speaking" (ten panels, unsigned), "Our Little Friend, Tom Noddy" (three panels, unsigned); "The Japanese in New York" (twelve panel centerspread, Bellew), "The Observant Child" (three panels, unsigned), "Mr. Dibbs Goes to Pike's Peak and Comes Back Again" (fourteen panel back cover, unsigned);
- September: "The Zouave Fever" (four panel cover, unsigned), "Mr. Lupell" (two panels, Bellew), "The Prince of Wales in America" (twenty-four panel centerspread, J. H. Howard), "D'ye Think It's True?" (three panels, Bellew);
- October: "The Duties of the Wide Awake" (four panels, Bellew), "Our Charley (two panels, unsigned), "The Three Young Friends" (eighteen panel back cover, unsigned);
- November: "The Hanlon's (sic) At Home" (nine panel back cover, unsigned);
- December: "The Target Excursion" (seventeen panel centerspread, signed with an unidentifiable monogram); "The Sporting Critic" two panels, Bellew).

The Comic Monthly also published many multi-panel cartoons grouped under a single heading, which were not strictly sequential in nature. Bellew was the monthly's chief artist, assisted by Thomas Nast, A. R Waud, and others. Some of the unsigned art was certainly by Bellew, some by journeymen artists, and some of it pirated from European journals.

The Comic Monthly was not the first folio-sized humor magazine. Those laurels go to The New York Picayune, which began as a newspaper, switched to a folio in 1856, adopted Punch's format for thirty-five issues in 1857-58, and returned to a folio for the remainder of its run.

Frank Leslie's Budget of Fun, the greatest of the folio monthlies, began in January 1859 and was published until June 1878. Its star cartoonist during the sixties was William Newman (c. 1817-1870), one of the founding artists of Punch. As we have noted, The Comic Monthly began two months later.

Frank Leslie was born Henry Cart in Ipswich, England in 1821. He became a very skilled engraver before coming over to America in 1948. He first worked as manager for P.T. Barnum's New York Illustrated News for several years. in 1850 he legally had his name changed to Frank Leslie. He died in 1880 and his wife continued the numerous publications he was publishing. Many of Frank Leslie's periodicals had a lot of sequental comic art.

Quarto-sized monthlies to compete with the successful Yankee Notions were also proliferating. Nick-Nax was the first (May 1856 to December 1875), followed by Phunny Phellow (October 1859- 1876) and Merryman's Comic Monthly (January 1863 to December 1875), to name the most prominent.

Enterprising publishers continued to attempt an American comic weekly in the style of Punch. The most notable efforts, Vanity Fair (1859-1863), Mrs. Grundy (1865), and Punchinello (1870), were distinguished but unsuccessful.

Nearly all of them, weeklies and monthlies, to varying degrees, featured sequential comic art. By the time of the American Civil War, sequential comic art was a part of the American graphic landscape.

While Bellew stood out for his sequential comics, Thomas Nast (1840-1902) brought a new style to American political cartoons, of which he is regarded the father. Even though he created several sequential strips early in his career (especially for Nick-Nax in 1859), Nast made his name in the pages of the national news periodical, Harper's Weekly, for which he worked from 1862 until 1886. Nast was influenced more by the dark wood engravings of Franco-German illustrator Gustave Dore than by the cartoonists of Punch. His somber cartoons were a novelty in American cartooning. Nast in the pages of Harper's Weekly (and Newman in the pages of the Budget of Fun) popularized the extravagant double-page folio-sized cartoon, which had no precedent in European or American cartooning, save for the separately published cartoon broadsides. This format would come to full maturity after 1876 in the pages of Puck (1876-1918) and then Judge (1881-1947).

As Nast grew in prominence and success, American cartoonists increasingly emulated him. U.S. humor publications evolved towards an amalgamation of Nast and Punch, rather than sheer imitation of the latter. After the War, with Nast's style of cartoons more entrenched in American readers' minds, efforts to launch Punch-like American periodicals floundered quickly. Mrs. Grundy, ironically most famous for its cover design by Nast, died after a mere twelve issues (running July 8 to September 23, 1865). Punchinello (April 2 to December 24, 1870) struggled nine months before its backers gave up. Punchinello had been financed by Tammany Hall politicians Tweed and Sweeney, as counter-propaganda against Nast's ongoing assault upon their corruption. They attempted to buy and threaten Nast into silence, to no avail.

American comics continued their pull away from Anglo-Franco imitation with the infusion of a third major European influence – the German humor magazine. The German-American community swelled significantly after the failed revolution of 1848. These émigrés brought with them a culture of humor, expressed most flamboyantly in their native humor magazines, the most famous being Kladderadatsch, Fliegende

Blätter, and Münchener Bilderbogen. As high in quality, as were the graphic artists who contributed to them, one German comic artist in particular excelled beyond the rest, his stories breaking out and crossing over into English language translations, the demand for which resulted in numerous printings. This artist, of course, was Heinrich Christian Wilhelm Busch (1832-1908).

Busch's work appeared in English in the 1860s in both British and American periodicals, often uncredited. For example, four of Busch's strips appeared in English in the pages of Merryman's Monthly in 1864, while in 1879 his graphic story "Fipps der Affe" was serialized across a 10-issue run of Puck as "Troddledums the Simian." The earliest known English language appearance of Busch in book form was The Flying Dutchman, or The Wrath of Herr von Stoppelnoze, in 1862, from New York publisher G. W. Carleton. Carleton not only pirated Busch's strip, but went so far as to credit the entire story to American poet John G. Saxe, with Busch's cartoons mere illustrations accompanying Saxe's prose!

The next known English language Busch book was A Bushel of Merry Thoughts, an 1868 London-published anthology collecting various Busch strips. Some of these same stories later appeared in the U.S.-published The Mischief Book (1880), newly translated and with a few more Busch tales added. One of these additions was "Hans Huckebein," a tale of a mischievous pet raven who in the end gets drunk and accidentally hangs himself. It became, at least in the States, Busch's second most popular sequential comic story. The unrepentant bird was promoted to title character in two later collections: the rare Hookeybeak the Raven and Other Tales in 1878 and Jack Huckaback, the Scapegrace Raven, circa 1888. There were also at least three trade card series in the 1870s and 1880s that reprinted the ending sequence, as Fritz Spindle-Shanks, The Raven Black.

The most popular Busch tale, though, was easily Max und Moritz, which in the U.S. saw print as Max and Maurice - A Juvenile History in Seven Tricks. Published in Boston in 1871, this English language version saw at minimum of 60 reprintings by the century's end, plus countless more printings thereafter. A separate British translation debuted in 1874, under the title Max and Moritz. It is well known that the later Rudolph Dirks comic strip series, Katzenjammer Kids, beginning in late 1897, was based on Max und Moritz.

According to documents found by comics historian Alfredo Castelli, Katzenjammer Kids may not have been pirated as has been assumed but was licensed by William Randolph Hearst instead. Hearst's New York Journal was published in different language editions for New York City's immigrant communities. In the German edition, the strip was published under its original name, Max und Moritz. Numerous other translations of Busch were published in America - too many to name in this article. Several can be found in the Victorian Age Price Index.

The most significant humor magazine of the 1870s, prior to the founding of the German-language Puck in 1876, was Wild Oats (1870-1881), which for part of its run also published a German-language edition, Schnedereddeng. In terms of the quality of its cartoons and comics, this New York City publication was in 1872 at an artistic level Puck would not achieve until 1880. Published by Winchell and Small (later Collin and Small) and distributed through the New York News Company, Wild Oats carried a cross-section of old and new generation comic artists, from the more established W. M. Avery, Frank Beard, Frank Bellew, E.S. Bisbee, Michael Angelo Woolf, and Thomas Worth, to up-and-comers such as Livingston Hopkins, Frederick Burr Opper, Palmer Cox, and James A. Wales.

Wild Oats began carrying sequential comic strips as early as #26, dated March 14, 1872, with the Livingston Hopkins strip pictured on the next page (we do not know anything yet about the first 25 issues). The very next issue has a Worth double-page spread titled "The Political Humpty Dumpty... Horace Greeley" told in eleven panels plus the sequential fictional "Graphic Account of the Assassination of Queen Victoria" and "Love As the Angels Love." "The Doings of the Japanese Embassy At Washington" related in twelve panels by W. M. Avery follows up in #28 April 11, 1872. An unknown hand drew "The Physiology of Moving" in six panels in #30. Hopkins returns with a beautiful intense 28-panel double-page spread in #31 May 23. Hopkins and Worth alternated for many issues with sequential comic strips on baseball, horse racing and other pertinent subjects of the day. In #45 December 5, 1872, E.S. Bisbee contributed his first sequential in seventeen panels and Worth showed up in "Humor and Pathos of a New England Thanksgiving" in eleven panels. Issue 47 expands the concept with a twelve-panel job by Bisbee, twenty-panel effort on one page by Hopkins and a three-panel effort by Worth. And on it goes through 1873 as well - comic strip after comic strip. Issue 58 June 5, 1873, includes a particularly humorous nineteen-panel double-pager drawn by someone still unknown titled "The Terrible Adventures of Messrs. Buster and Stumps, with the Indians" which begins with two white men heading out west in an effort to exterminate Indians - and their misadventures of not quite getting the job done. It reads across both pages in a unique evolution similar to Popeye #2052 (found in the Platinum listings). Issue 65 contains two nine-panel Thomas Worth strips "Only a Mad Dog Scare - Another Lesson For Nervous People" and "Only a Cholera Scare - Something For Nervous People to Read and Ponder Over." Issue 66 Sept 18, 1873, has the very funny Hopkins twelve-panel strip as well as two more ten-panel Worth strips on the delights of Hunting and Fishing plus one by Hopkins titled "The Adventures of Mr Old Party with Jersey Mosquitoes" in twelve-panels. All told, four comic strips in this issue. They obviously liked what they were doing, judging from the exuberance of the work.

The next issue has Worth's nine-panel report on "The Adventures of Young Muttonhead among the Free Lovers" which was all about the "free sex" convention recently held in Chicago. Issue 68 has a nine-panel "An Adventure with a New Jersey Mosquito" which smacks of Winsor McCay in subject and even art style. Maybe McCay was inspired by this for his later animated cartoon as well as earlier Rarebit Fiend. We'll never know for sure. On through 1875, Wild Oats presented sequential comic strips issue after issue. With #148, October 27, 1875, Frederick Opper contributes his very first Wild Oats cover, a political cartoon on inflation then rampant in the US. He does covers through at least #161 before a short break and then comes back with many more. In #158, January 5, 1876, Palmer Cox - some five years before inventing The Brownies - begins a wonderful series of 24-panel double page spread comic strips, with a couple sample titles being "The Adventures of Mr. and Mrs. Sprowl And Their Christmas Turkey-A Crashing Chasing Tearful Tragedy But Happily Ending Well" and "Bachelor Broke and Widow Snuggi: A Pictorial Account of Their Sleigh Ride and What Became of It."

Wild Oats #190 August 16, 1876 by Frank Bellew Sr., Father of American Comic Strips. This one titled "Rodger's Patent Mosquito Armor."

Even though he had been contributing many covers and interior single panel jobs to Wild Oats for years, Frank Bellew does not show up with his first comic strip until #190, August 16, 1876, with a nine-panel effort he titled, "Rodger's Patent Mosquito Armour." By this time America's "Father of the sequential comic strip" had inspired many other cartoonists to try their hand telling stories with words and pictures.

Another highly desirable American graphic novel, sought especially by collectors of Western lore, is Quiddities of an Alaskan Trip by William H. Bell which debuted in 1873. Bell was Timothy O'Sullivan's assistant photographer on the 1871-74 expeditions of Lt. George Wheeler, surveying and mapping the western territories for the U.S. government. The story panels are laid out within ornate frames like those of stereograph cards, such as Bell was involved in creating on the expedition. It involves a parody of a trip from Washington, D.C., to survey the newly purchased territory of Alaska, which at the time was derisively referred to as "Seward's Folly." Bell published Quiddities in Portland, Oregon, in 1873, meaning that he drew it while he was on just such an expedition.

The seemingly disparate influences of Thomas Nast and German comics came together in the work of Austrian immigrant Joseph Keppler (1838-1894). Like many cartoonists in America, Keppler desired to rival Nast. Unlike most, he possessed the talent and drive to accomplish it. Keppler, trained as an artist but working as an actor, began contributing comic art to Kikeriki (1861-1923) in his native Vienna. He emigrated to St. Louis in 1868, where he took his first stab at starting a comic weekly, the German language Die Vehme (Aug 28, 1869 - Aug. 20, 1870). Seven months later, still in St. Louis, he tried again, launching another German language humor periodical, titled Puck. This German Puck began on March 18, 1871, joined by an English language version one year later, but both ended on Aug. 24, 1872.

Keppler moved to New York City and began working for Frank Leslie. His cartoons appeared in Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, Frank Leslie's Budget of Fun, and the Leslie-owned Jolly Joker and Day's Doings. (To capitalize on the 1876 Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, Leslie published in that year a paperback collection of Centennial-related humor, Centennial Fun, most of which was Keppler's work.) Four years after the first Puck died, Keppler was ready to try again. He re-launched the German language edition of Puck in New York City on September 27, 1876.

This Puck was both familiar and exotic. Its format of an extravagant centerspread cartoon sandwiched between front and back cover cartoons had by this time become something of a comic periodical standard, certainly for the monthlies. But Puck was different from what had come before. The cartoons were lithographed, not engraved, which lent to them a softer, more pleasing quality, and they were in color, something virtually without precedent in American comic periodical literature.

Initially, the magazine's cartoons were tinted in just one color, but Puck appeared, ambitiously, every week, and the coloring set it apart from anything else on American stands. The parallel English language edition of Puck was launched six months after the German version, on March 14, 1877. This English edition of Puck was a money-loser for several years, kept afloat by the German edition's profits and the determination of the English edition's literary editor, H.C. Bunner, not to give up. By 1880, Puck was a huge success. It became the new model for American humor publications. In time, Keppler hired other artists, most notably Frederick Burr Opper, Eugene Zimmerman ("Zim") and F. M. Howarth, and added black and white sequential comics to the magazine's interior and then, with increasing frequency in the early 1890s to the magazine's back cover. Funny Folks by F. M. Howarth, 1899, collected many early sequential comics from Puck; one of the titles many consider bridges the Victorian and Platinum Ages of comics. Puck was the model that inspired William Randolph Hearst to add a color comics section to his Sunday Journal in 1895.

Leslie's Young America ran comic strips during its two year run 1881-82. Many are quite good. This example from #15 (10/15/81) reminds us of Zim.

With the first issue dated October 29, 1881, Puck's chief rival, Judge, was born. Founded by Puck artist James A. Wales, it also featured the work of Thomas Worth and Livingston Hopkins. Judge made several forays into Puck's talent pool over the years. Its best capture was Eugene Zimmerman ("Zim"), who became for Judge the star artist that Frederick Burr Opper was for Puck.

Judge struggled financially for several years, and likely would have ceased publication had it not been for Puck's powerful performance during the 1884 election. Puck's success galvanized Republican powerbrokers into recognizing the importance of the political cartoon weekly. They financed newspaperman W. J. Arkell's purchase of Judge in 1886 to turn it into a reliable Republican house organ.

Numerous other Puck imitators emerged in the 1880s but quickly died. Note should be made of two that did not: the Puck-like San Francisco Wasp, which debuted August 5, 1876 (too early for it to be considered a Puck knockoff), and the black and white Texas Siftings, which debuted on May 9, 1881. Though neither was as successful as Puck or Judge, both cut their own paths, managing to survive as cartoon humor magazines into the 1890s.

Also worthy of mention is the New York City newspaper The Daily Graphic (March 4, 1873 to Sept 23, 1889), which claims the distinction of being the first regularly illustrated daily newspaper in the world, published every day except Sundays and holidays. The majority of its illustrations were portraits or depictions of news events, but nearly every issue contained some comic drawing, many of them gracing the front cover.

With so many pages to fill on a daily basis, The Daily Graphic became a rotating door for many young American cartoonists in the early stages of their careers (making one suspect that it was not the best paying gig in town). Within its pages, like needles to be found in the haystack of its more than 4800 issues, is early work by Livingston Hopkins (who mysteriously appears, vanishes, reappears, etc., for months to whole years at a time, right up to his 1884 departure to Australia), pre-Life work by Kemble, pre-Harper's appearances by A.B. Frost and W.A. Rogers, pre-Puck and Judge Opper, C.J. Taylor, Hamilton, and Gillam. Old hats, too, appear at times, such as Michael Woolf and Frank Bellew, Sr.

Further, The Daily Graphic regularly plundered British periodicals for its back and sometimes center pages, not only perpetrating the usual swipes of single-panel Punch cartoons, but also stealing sequential strips from Punch's two main rival publications, Judy and Fun. This included occasionally reprinting (albeit at random) episodes of continuing British strips "The British Workman" by James Sullivan, and "McNab of that Ilk" by James Brown, though, strangely enough, not Marie Duval's Ally Sloper, despite the fact that The Daily Graphic did reprint some of Duval's non-"Sloper" strips. ("Ally Sloper" was a continuing sequential strip character who debuted in 1867, lasting into the 1920s, and had very successful solo British book collections of his strip appearances published as early as 1873, more than two decades prior to Yellow Kid in McFadden's Flats).

Livingston Hopkins, whose art style changed like a chameleon from one year to the next, exhibited a definite Duval influence in his work within a year following the publication of the first Ally Sloper collection. Given that Hopkins worked for The Daily Graphic during the same period in which this newspaper was stealing cartoons from Sloper's home publication, Judy, this can hardly be considered coincidental. Hopkins contributed a daily comic strip to The Daily Graphic in 1874-75, complete with word balloons. By the time Hopkins was preparing to emigrate to Australia to become lead cartoonist for the Sydney Bulletin, his art style was an imitation of Kemble's, who was also working at The Daily Graphic.

Life debuted on January 4, 1883, founded by J.A. Mitchell, and modeled after the Harvard Lampoon. It quickly rose to become the third main pillar of late 1800s American humor periodicals. Smaller in size, black and white, and priced the same as Puck and Judge, it nevertheless succeeded by appealing to a more genteel audience. Its earliest artists included Kemble and Palmer Cox, but its foremost artist was Charles Dana Gibson, becoming world renowned as the hand behind the graceful, aristocratic "Gibson Girls."

Unlike Judge, which had to become a low-brow imitation of Life to survive in the next century, and Puck, which attempted but failed to become an American version of the highbrow European humor magazines, Life transitioned into the 20th century virtually unaltered, and thrived. By the mid-1880s, with Puck, Judge, and Life all solidly in place, American comics and cartoon humor had come very much into their own, no longer looking first at Europe to take their cues.

Almanacs began to appear in America starting in 1639. Humor was introduced as early as 1647 by Samuel Danforth. A very important one was Leed Almanac beginning in 1687. John Tulley produced the first humorous almanac in 1688. James Franklin, brother of Ben, began the Rhode Island Almanac in 1728 using the name "Poor Robin" and his younger brother began Poor Richard's Almanac in 1732. Farmer's Almanac began in 1792 and used some humor.

Sequence by A.B. Frost, from the MidSummer Puck 1887.

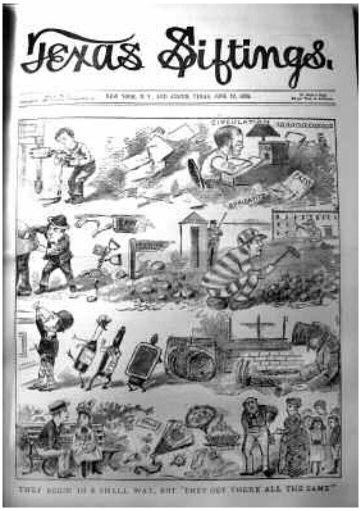
The first comic almanac totally devoted to humor was published by Charles Ellm in Boston in 1831 and featured the artwork of D.C. Johnston. Perhaps the most famous comic almanacs (certainly the most valuable) are the Davy Crockett series (1835-1856) which began in Nashville, Tennessee. The comic periodicals all ended up issuing comic almanacs beginning with Yankee Notions in 1856 and continuing into the 1890s with a one-shot comic almanac published by Judge for the year 1894.

Beginning in the 1850s, a new breed of almanacs appeared. Usually created by medicine and farm product companies, they were distributed for free to promote the company's product. Competition amongst companies, whose goal was to get customers to read the almanacs and the advertisements contained therein again and again, meant that attention-getting humorous cartoons soon found their way back into these giveaway pamphlets. Initially their cartoons were done cheap, either poorly drawn or pirated from elsewhere, such as those found in the Hostetter's and Wright's almanac series. More elaborate promotional almanacs eventually did evolve, though, and amongst the best of these was Barker's Illustrated Almanac, first produced for the year 1878, and annually into the 1930s. Each Barker's Almanac contained ten to twelve full page cartoons, wonderful and bizarre in design, frequently racist, but also comically manic and crammed with details in a manner similar to Outcault's much later Yellow Kid pages. The cartoons in Barker's Almanac were so popular that in 1892, The Barker, Moore, and Mein Medicine Company published their first edition of Barker's Komic Picture Souvenir, reprinting nearly 150 pages of cartoons from their almanacs.



Texas Siftings.

Texas Siftings v6#7 June 19, 1886 ran a whole slew of sequential comic strips for many years and is yet another sleeper for collectors to hunt.

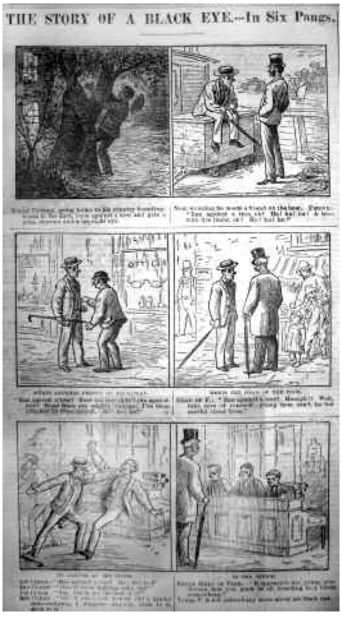
This first Barker's Souvenir features a wrap-around color cover depicting people headed towards the Columbian World's Fair Exposition, which was to be held in Chicago the next year. It is the earliest confirmed "premium" comic book, sent to customers who mailed in a box label and outside wrapper from two different Barker's products. The Souvenir album was Barker's most in-demand premium. It was reprinted as a thick unnumbered booklet three more times in the 1890s, with the contents reorganized each time. Later, between 1901 and 1903, Barker's broke the album into three separate "Parts," each of which required still more box labels and wrappers to obtain. The 3-part series of reprint albums expanded to four parts circa 1906 or 1907. Both the 3 and 4-part album series had multiple printings.

Also very American in character were the country's promotional comics, which flourished throughout the latter half of the 19th century. They trace their beginnings to Comic Almanacs, which flourished in England and the United States since they first appeared in the 1830s. The first promotional comics which did not double as almanacs began to appear in the 1870s. They included the aforementioned reprints of Cruikshank and Busch strips, reprints of strips lifted from American sources (A.B. Frost's strip "The Bull Calf" was a particular favorite), and original material placing the product being promoted as the focus of the story. These original short cartoon dramas were in many ways similar in storyline to those found in modern television advertisements, except that the clothing is Victorian, and the claims, pre-F.D.A. and F.C.C., were unabashedly wild, over-the-top, and blunt. Chewing tobacco and snuff saved romances, calmed crying babies, and made the sick well. Stove polish that propelled you to wealth and power. Corsets that brought you a husband. The objective, of course, in an era before TV or radio, was to make each comic handout so entertaining that customers would want to keep and read the advertisement again and again.



THE STORY OF A BLACK EYE.—In Six Pangs.

Young Men of America #527, Oct 13, 1887, by Frank Bellew towards the end of his illustrious career. By this time, he had the sequential comic art form down in most aspects, having published hundreds of them.

The more wonderful graphics and outrageous claims tended to come from tobacco companies, who were using comic books and strips to sell their products more than a century before cries against "Joe Camel." The most elaborate of these were printed full color, and unfolded into a single long strip, just like Cruikshank's The Tooth-Ache from the 1840s, though usually limited to just the cover plus seven panels.

Examples are the Jackson Chewing Tobacco comics How Adolphus Slim-Jim Used Jackson's Best and Ye Veracious Chronicle of Gruff and Pompey, and Durham Smoking Tobacco's Home Made Happy - A Romance for Married Men. The artists of these comics are mostly unidentified, but their level of skill was equal to anything in Puck and Judge. The Home Made Happy Comic, in fact, was produced for Durham by The Graphic Company -- the publisher of The Daily Graphic, the aforementioned 1870s illustrated newspaper which included cartoons.

The earliest known anthology devoted to collecting the comic strips of a single American artist was A.B. Frost's Stuff and Nonsense in 1884. The next known American collection came in 1888, the very rare Frederick Burr Opper anthology, Puck's Opper Book. Both proved popular, so more Frost and Opper collections followed, to be joined within a few years by reprints collecting the cartoons and strips of Keppler, Kemble, Zim, Gibson, Mayer, Taylor, Frank Bellew's son "Chip," Howarth, Woolf, etc.

Puck, Judge, and Texas Siftings all began monthly Library series - 8-1/2" x 11" magazines, mostly black and white, which organized previously published material around one theme or one artist. For example, the first Puck's Library (July 1887) was titled "The National Game," and gathered beneath one cover Puck material poking fun at the game of baseball. The third (March 1888) and ninth (November 1889) issues of Judge's Serial (later named Judge's Library) were devoted entirely to the work of Zim.

Life tended more towards hardcover collections, such as its annual ten-issue series The Good Things of Life (1884-1893), which included cartoons and strips by Palmer Cox, T.S. Sullivant, Hy Mayer, and others. The Good Things of Life was published initially by the firm of White, Stokes, and Allen, but which by the fourth book, had become simply Frederick A. Stokes. Stokes published a number of other cartoon books in the 1880s and 1890s, the majority of them reprint collections. The experience he gained at this time with these reprint albums placed Stokes in the perfect position to pick up the wealth of material about to be created for the comics supplements of William R. Hearst's newspapers, making Stokes the first major publisher of the coming Platinum Age.

In 1892, Charles Scribner's Sons published A. B. Frost's Bull Calf and Other Tales. It contains sequential comic strip art on quite a few pages as well as single panel cartoons. By 1898, Charles Scribner's Sons also issued Kemble's The Billy Goat and Other Comicalities as a 112-page hardcover, which also has sequential comic strips.

In the early 1890s, the slum children cartoons of artist Michael Woolf (many of which were reprinted in the 1896 collection 99 Woolfs from Truth and in the posthumous 1899 collection Sketches of Lowly Life in a Great City) were popular. Truth magazine, which followed Puck's format of color front cover, back cover and centerspread cartoons, but in style was more akin to the aristocratic Life, was initially unable to secure Woolf's services, creating an opportunity for the young cartoonist Richard F. Outcault, who desired to break into one of the weekly comic periodicals.

It was in his Woolf-inspired slum children cartoons for Truth that Outcault's prototype of the Yellow Kid first emerged. The bald, sack-clothed youngster made four appearances in Truth, starting with #372 on June 2, 1894, prior to his newspaper debut.

During the rise of Yellow Kid's popularity, he appeared in American comic magazines in parodies drawn by others, with politicians, even Hearst and Pulitzer, dressed up as the Yellow Kid. Such cartoons are known to have appeared in Judge, Life, The Bee, and Vim plus various newspapers across the country. More about the Yellow Kid's importance can be found in the Platinum Age section of this book.

While comics definitely have their roots in Europe, and the earliest American comic books either reprinted or emulated those of Europe, the direction of influence was by no means one way. By at least the 1870s, American cartoons were being published and seen in the Old World, as evidenced by the arrest in Spain of the on-the-lamb corrupt Tammany Hall politician Boss Tweed by Spanish police who recognized Tweed from a Nast cartoon.

European piracy of American cartoons was just as lucrative as the American piracy of Europeans. In the 1880s and '90s, the comics of Zim, Chip Bellew, and Charles Dana Gibson all saw reprint in Europe. In April 1899, Pictorial Comedy, a monthly magazine destined for a ten-year run, commenced publication in London. It was made up entirely of cartoons reprinted with permission from Puck and Life. F.M. Howarth's domestic comedies from Puck were favorites in France. American Hy Mayer was commissioned to create original comics work for Black and White (Britain), Le Rire (France), and Fliegende Blätter. Michael Woolf's slum children cartoons saw print in the British periodical Pick-Me-Up, during the same years that top British artist Phil May's first published work debuted in that publication. May later became famous for his Woolf-inspired street children cartoons as well as his influence on the development of comics in Australia.

As the 19th Century ended, American comics were coming to the fore worldwide, soon to explode into a position of dominance with the Platinum Age revolution brought about by the emergence of the color comic supplement in America's newspapers and the arrival of Richard F. Outcault's Yellow Kid.

END NOTE: Victorian Era comics were issued in many relatively obscure formats compared to what most of us are used to today. The Victorian Era section can only grow as there are many more heretofore undiscovered comics from the 1800s which have fallen off the radar of history. Some may wonder why some of the earlier items listed contain as of yet no prices. The reason is simple. These books are part of a relatively "new" market which is still establishing itself.

High-grade copies are almost unheard of in almost all instances. Some books may truly have only a handful left in existence. We are sure there are some known to have been published which no (as of yet) known copies have survived the ravages of time and neglect.

Each year expect another quantum leap in our ever-expanding knowledge of the fascinating earliest origins of the comic strip as it relates to North America. Your input in helping this section of the Guide grow and mature is most welcome!

COLLECTOR'S NOTE: Some of books listed in this section were published well over a century before organized comics fandom began archiving and helping to preserve these fragile popular culture artifacts. Consequently, copies of most all of these comics almost never surface in Fine+ or better shape. Most are in the Poor to VG range. If you want to collect these only in high grade, your collection will be extremely small. This year the price blanks are filled in on most items. The past few years we had been more concerned with simply establishing what is known to exist. The prices given for Fair, Good and Fine categories are for strictly graded editions. If you need help grading your item, we refer you to the grading section in this book or contact the authors of this essay. Items marked Scarce, Rare or Very Rare we are trying to figure out how many copies might still be in existence. We welcome help from any interested parties at Robert@BLBcomics.com

For ease ascertaining the contents of each item of this listing and the Platinum index list, we offer the following list of categories found immediately following most of the titles:

E - EUROPEAN ORIGINAL COMICS MATERIAL; Printed in Europe or reprinted in USA
G - GRAPHIC NOVEL (LONGER FORMAT COMIC TELLING A SINGLE STORY)
H - "HOW TO DRAW CARTOONS" BOOKS

NOTE: Barker's Almanacs were actually issued in November of the year preceding the year which appears on the almanac. For example, the 1878 dated almanac was issued November 1877. They were given away to retailers of Barker's farm animal medicinal products, to in turn be given away to customers. Each Barker's Almanac contains 10 full page cartoons. These frequently included racist stereotypes of blacks. Each cartoon contained advertisements for Barker's products. It is unknown whether the cartoons appeared only in the almanacs, or if they also ran as newspaper ads or flyers. Originally issued with a metal hook attached in the upper left hand corner, which could be used to hang the almanac.

Extremely unique comic book, put together by gathering 145 independent single illustrations and cartoons, by various artists, and stringing them together into a sequential story. The majority of panels are by Grandville. Also included are at least 19 signed Charles Martin, reprinted from 1847 issues of Yankee Doodle, 5 panels from D.C. Johnston, plus other panels by F.O.C. Darley, T.H. Matheson, and others. The story also contains several panels of Gold Rush content . Printed by E.A. Alverds. The 1851 date is derived from an advertisement found in the Oct-Dec 1851 issue of the Brother Jonathan newspaper. It ispossible, however, that it actually came out even earlier.*

NOTE: Highly sought by both Black Americana and Tobacciana collectors. Recurring mid-19th Century story about two African-American twin brothers who romance and marry a pair of African-American twin sisters. Although the text is racist at points, the art is not. Consists of 6 attached cards, printed on one side, which unfold downwards into a strip story of title card & 5 panels. Scrapbook hobbyists in the 19th Century tended to pull the panels apart and paste into their scrapbooks, making copies with all panels attached scarce. Note, there are numerous cartoon tellings of this same story, including several card series versions (with different art, and story variations, each time). But, the above is the only version which unfolds as a strip of attached cards. The cards from all the unattached versions are smaller sized, and thus distinguishable.

NOTE: Earliest known original sequential comic book by an American creator; directly inspired by Töpffer's Obadiah Oldbuck and Bachelor Butterfly The New York and Cincinnati editions were both published in 1849, one soon after the other. Antiquarian Book sources have traditionally cited that the Cincinnati edition preceded the New York, but without referencing their evidence. Conflicting with this, the Cincinnati edition lists the New York publishers' 1849 copyright, while the New York edition makes no reference to the Cincinnati publishers. Such would indicate that the New York edition was first. Both are very rare, and until resolved both will be regarded as published simultaneously. A New York copy with missing back cover, detached front cover, and G/VG interior sold for $2000 in 2000. Two copies sold at auction in 2006 for $11,500 and 12,000. (Prices vary widely.)

It contains an ad page for that publication; the material is perhaps reprinted from it. J.C. Haney licensed it to local printers, and so various publishers are found -- all printings currently regarded as simultaneous. (The Geo. H. Seminal inspiration for William Randolph Hearst to acquire as a "new comic" (following the wild success of Outcault's Yellow Kid) to license M&M from Busch and hire Rudolph Dirks in late 1897 to create a New York American newspaper incarnation. In Hearst's English language newspapers it was called The Katzenjammer Kids and in his German language NYC newspaper it was titled Max & Moritz, Busch's original title. At least 50 other reprints versions are reputed to exist printed thru 1900. Translated from the 1865 German original. We are still sorting out the edition confusion.*

Early 19th century books are often found rebound, with original cover and/or title page gone. To distinguish editions having no cover or title page: the British oblong editions (published by Tilt & Bogue) use Roman Numerals to number pages. American oblong shaped editions use Arabic Numerals. British are printed on one side only. This is the earliest known English language sequential comic book. Has a new title page with art by Robert Cruikshank.*

NOTE: Art by Joseph Keppler, F. Opper, F.M. Howarth, C.J. Taylor, W.A. Rogers. This was a separate, parallel run of Puck, published during the 1893 Chicago World's Fair from within the fairgrounds, and containing all new and different material than the regular weekly Puck. Smaller sized and priced the same, this originally sold poorly, and had not as wide distribution as Puck, and so consequently issues are much more rare than regular Puck issues from the same period. Not to be confused with the larger sized regular Puck issues from 1893 which sometimes also contained World's Fair related material, and sometimes had the words "World's Fair" appear on the cover. Can also be distinguished by the fact that Puck's issue numbering was in the 800's in 1893, while these issue number 1 through 26.

(This article was originally created by Robert L. Beerbohm and Richard D. Olson beginning in CBPG #27 1997 and is revised annually as new information comes to light.)

The Brownies' first book, 1877 by Palmer Cox, set a precedent for the Platinum Age, collecting and reprinting previously published material.*

The story of the success of the modern comic strip as we know it today is tied closely to the companies who sponsored and bought licenses from the copyright holder for the purpose of advertising products. Platinum Age comic books have come back into their own after languishing mostly forgotten for a few decades. With this series of comics history research updates now marking its first decade, these historically important books are seem by many now as very collectible. Online sources such as eBay and bookfinder.com have demonstrate that many of these Platinum books are actually not scarce at all as previously thought, though they are in any type of higher-grade condition. Even so, most Platinum Age books are much rarer than so-called Golden Age comic books, yet despite this scarcity, Mutt & Jeff, Bringing Up Father, The Katzenjammer Kids, and many more were more popular than say Superman and Batman when they were introduced. Recent research has come up with some more amazing rediscoveries. There is much that can be learned and applied to today's comics market by a simple historical examination of the medium's evolution over more than 160 years.

The Brownies in the Philippines by Palmer Cox, Oct 1904 - scarce original art from the book. President Roosevelt is pictured within these multitudes of Brownie madness, a Cox "signature trademark." Cox's stories are comic strip-oriented in nature of time sequence as he boldly took his Brownies around the world.

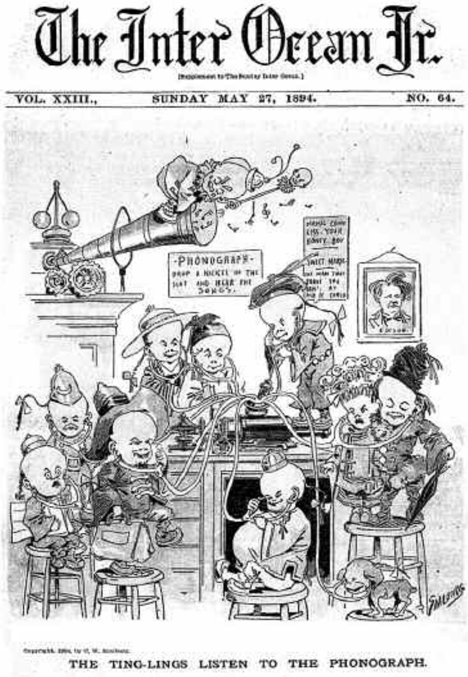
It should be noted that "ages" are applied to historical periods in the history of comics for convenience. In fact, ages typically overlap and there is no discrete beginning or ending for any given "age." This is the case with the Platinum Age, which clearly began with Palmer Cox's creation of The Brownies in 1883 even though it overlaps with the Victorian Age which ran through the end of the 19th Century. Cox introduced a qualitative change to the field, not an incremental quantitative change. Specifically, he produced art and verse for children in children's magazines and then merchandised those characters. He published work for children not only in books but in magazines and newspapers, and he merchandised his creations to an extent that had never been done previously.

Palmer Cox was born in 1840 near Granby, Quebec. He journeyed to Oakland, California in 1863, and began publishing cartoon, prose and poems in the local press and media outlets such as The San Francisco Examiner wherein by 1867 it has been reported he also began creating sequential comic strips, though none have yet surfaced.

His first book, Squibs of California, was published in 1874. He subsequently moved to New York in 1875 and almost immediately began working for the magazine Wild Oats, of which more is written about in the preceding Victorian Age history introduction as well as a sample of his sequential work. He drew dozens of sequential comic strips for Wild Oats, a humor magazine so scarce only one issue has been offered on eBay in the past six years.

Soon thereafter he became a major contributor to the Scribner publications, including The St. Nicholas, an illustrated magazine for young folk. His first cartoon for them was "The Wasp And The Bee," published in the March 1879 cover-date issue. While it is now clear that Cox used elves and brownie-like characters in his art for several different magazines as early as 1877 in Harper's Young People magazine as well as using Brownies-type characters beginning in the Feb 1881 issue of Wide Awake, the first true appearance of the Brownies in their own story using that title, a combination of art and verse was February, 1883, in St. Nicholas. Palmer Cox's The Brownies were the first North American comics-type characters to be internationally merchandised. Even though Cox was continuously doing sequential comic strips in magazines like Wild Oats, he left the popular medium of comics when he hit paydirt with The Brownies. For over a quarter of a century, Cox deftly combined the popular advertising motifs of animals and fairies into a wonderful, whimsical world of society at its best and worst.



The Inter Ocean Jr.
VOL. XXIII., SUNDAY MAY 27, 1894. NO. 64.
PHONOGRAPH - DROP A NICKEL IN THE SLOT AND HEAR THE SONGS.
THE TING-LINGS LISTEN TO THE PHONOGRAPH.

Chicago Inter Ocean Jr., May 27, 1894 Cover of The Ting-Lings by Charles W. Saalsburg, was inspired byPalmer Cox's The Brownies and later provided inspiration for Outcault's Yellow Kid.*

The Brownies' first book was issued in 1887, titled The Brownies: Their Book; many more followed. Cox also added a run of his hugely popular characters in Ladies Home Journal from October 1891 through February 1895, as well as a special for December 1910. With the 1892-93 World's Fair, the merchandising exploded with a host of products, including pianos, paper dolls and other figurines, chairs, stoves, puzzles, cough drops, coffee, soap, boots, candy, and many more. Brownies material was being produced in Europe as well as the United States of America.

Cox tried out The Brownies as a newspaper strip in the San Francisco Examiner during 1898, where he had begun his newspaper career over 30 years before, and then in the New York World in 1900. It was then syndicated from 1903 through 1907. He seems to have retired from regularly drawing The Brownies with the January 1914 issue of St. Nicholas when he was 74. A wealthy man, he lived to the ripe old age of 84, spending his last decade in his home he affectionately called Brownie Castle, back in Granby, Quebec.

By the mid-1890s, while keeping careful track of steadily rising circulations of magazines with graphic humor such as Harper's, Puck, St. Nicholas, Judge, Life and Truth, New York based newspaper publishers began to recognize that illustrated humor would sell extra papers. This is what The Yellow Kid taught these publishers. Thus was born the Sunday "comic supplement." Most of the super star favorites were under contract with these magazines. However, there was an artist working for Truth who wasn't. Roy L McCardell, then a staffer at Puck, informed Morrill Goddard, Sunday Editor of The New York World, that he knew someone who could fit what was needed at the then-largest newspaper in America.

Richard F. Outcault (1863-1928) first introduced his street children strip in Truth #372, June 2, 1894, somewhat inspired by Michael Angelo Woolf's slum kids single panel cartoons in Life which had begun in the mid 1880s. The interested collector should seek out a copy of Woolf's Sketches of Lowly Life In A Great City (1899) listed in the Guide for comparison study. Edward Harrigan's play "O'Reilly and the Four Hundred," which had a song beginning with the words "Down in Hogan's Alley..." also likely provided direct inspiration.

It's also probable that Outcault's Hogan's Alley cast, including the Yellow Kid, was inspired by Charles W. Saalburg's The Ting Lings, which began in the Chicago Inter Ocean Jr supplement post-dated May 1, 1894 in the April 29, 1894 edition of Chicago Inter Ocean. That first episode is titled: "The Brownies Welcome The Ting-Lings."

There is also a definite similarity in Mickey Dugan's appearance and clothing style to Saalburg's creation which we will now examine in more detail thanks to welcome, on-going research by long time comics historian Allan Holtz supplemented by living comics history legend Bill Blackbeard .

Charles Saalzburg was an artist who was also the genius behind color printing in newspapers. He seems to have pioneered the concept from whom all others learned their craft.

On June 23, 1892 the Chicago Inter Ocean introduced a section with mostly editorial cartoons titled the Illustrated Supplement, commemorating the Democratic National Convention held in that city. Early regulars included Thomas Nast and Art Young. Starting June 26, the Inter Ocean began steadily issuing this weekly four page supplement, typically featuring full page editorial cartoons on its front and back covers. In May 1893 the supplement began coming out twice a week, and even greater frequency to daily during the World Columbian Exposition held in Chicago later that same year as it was used as a wrapper to attract sales from fair goers. Art Young did some of the color cover art and comic strips for the early Fair supplements, printing them right at the Fair to goggle-eyed fair tourists. Thomas Nast did some art as well during a visit he made to the Fair.

. By September 10, 1893 the Inter Ocean introduced color, a multi-panel editorial comic strip by Charles Saalsburg. The supplement used yellow ink, a further nail in the coffin of various Yellow Kid myths which had clouded serious comics scholarship in earlier decades before being proven wrong.

On October 1, Tom E. Powers introduced their first sequential non-political comic strip in color, a humorous pantomime.

As the Exposition ended in November, the contents were soon aimed more at children, enhanced with color added to the center as well by December 24, 1893, then changing its title to Inter Ocean Jr in January 1894. This was accomplished easily by folding the single four page sheet into eight pages.

In the January 1894 Saalsburg began using Brownies-inspired characters in his color comic strips. The present theory is the Ting-Ling characters took over solo five months later in response to a presumed cease and desist letter which inevitably must have been issued from Palmer Cox to the Inter Ocean.

However, on July 8 1894, the Inter Ocean Jr stopped color and full page comics-type work in this supplement, devolving back to simple small spot art works. By mid-1894, color comics printing genius Saalburg had been lured to Pulitzer's New York World, becoming Art Director in charge of coloring for the new color printing press at the New York World. The color supplement was soon to be unleashed in the largest city in America.

By the November 18, 1894 issue of the World, Outcault was working for Goddard and Saalburg. Outcault produced a successful Sunday newspaper sequential comic strip in color with "The Origin of a New Species" on the back page in the World's first colored Sunday supplement. Long time pro Walt McDougall, a famous cartoonist reputed to have turned the 1884 Presidential race with a single cartoon that ran in the World, handled the cartoon art on the front page. Earlier, The World began running full page color single panels on May 21, 1893. McDougall did various other page panels during 1893, but it was Jan. 28, 1894 when the first sequence of comic pictures in a New York World newspaper appeared in panels in the same format as our comic strips today. It was a full page cut up into nine panels. This historic sequence was drawn entirely in pantomime, with no words, by Mark Fenderson.

The second page to appear in panels was an eight panel strip from February 4, 1894, also lacking words except for the title. This page was a collaboration between Walt McDougall and Mark Fenderson titled "The Unfortunate Fate of a Well-Intentioned Dog." From then on, many full page color strips by McDougall and Fenderson appeared; they were the first cartoonists to draw for the Sunday newspaper comic section. It was Outcault, however, who soon became the most famous cartoonist featured. After first appearing in black and white in Pulitzer's The New York World on Feb-ruary 17, 1895 and again on March 10, 1895, The Yellow Kid was introduced to the public in color on May 5, 1895.

Some have erroneously reported in scholarly journals that perhaps it was Frank Ladendorf's "Uncle Reuben," first introduced May 26, 1895, which became the first regularly recurring comics character in newspapers. This is wrong, as even Outcault's "Yellow Kid" began in Pulitzer's paper a good three months before Uncle Reuben. Until firm evidence to the contrary comes to light, that honor will forever be enshrined with Jimmy Swinnerton's Little Bears cartoon characters, found all over inside Hearst's San Francisco Examiner beginning October 14, 1893 with the first one called "Baby Monarch. Though never actually a comic strip, they nonetheless were the earliest presently-known recurring comics-type characters in American newspapers. In June 1895, a semi-regular "Little Bears" feature began. On January 26, 1896, children were introduced, the title eventually changed to "Little Bears and Tykes," forever confusing some scholars decades later. There never was a strip titled Little Bears and Tigers, as the Tigers were strictly for New York consumption when Hearst ordered Swinnerton to move to the Big Apple to compete better in the brewing comic strip wars.

The Yellow Kid's importance is widely recognized today as the first newspaper comic strip to demonstrate without a doubt that the general public was ready for full color comics. The Yellow Kid was the first in the USA to show that comics could increase newspaper sales, and that comic characters could be merchandised. The Yellow Kid was the headlining spark of what was soon dubbed by Hearst as "eight pages of polychromatic effulgence that makes the rainbow look like a lead pipe."

Ongoing research suggests that Palmer Cox's fabulous success with The Brownies was a direct inspiration for Richard Outcault's future merchandising work. The ultimate proof lies in the fourth Yellow Kid cartoon, which appeared in the February 9, 1895 issue of Truth. It was reprinted in the New York World eight days later on February 17, 1895, becoming the first Yellow Kid cartoon in the newspapers. The caption read "FOURTH WARD BROWNIES. MICKEY, THE ARTIST (adding a finishing touch) Dere, Chimmy! If Palmer Cox wuz t' see yer, he'd git yer copyrighted in a minute." The Yellow Kid was widely licensed in the greater New York area for all kinds of products, including gum and cigarette cards, toys, pinbacks, cookies, postcards, tobacco products, and appliances. There was also a short-lived humor magazine from Street & Smith named The Yellow Kid, featuring exquisite Outcault covers, plus a 196-page comic book from Dillingham & Co. known as The Yellow Kid in McFadden's Flats, dated to early 1897. Check out the covers in "The Platinum Age" three-page comic strip elsewhere in this Guide. In addition, there were several Yellow Kid plays produced, spawning other collectibles like show posters, programs and illustrated sheet music. (For those interested in more information regarding the Yellow Kid, it is available on the Internet at www.neponset.com/yellowkid.)

Mickey Dugan burned brightly for a few years as Outcault secured a copyright on the character with the United States Government by September 1896. By the time he completed the necessary paperwork, however, hundreds of business people nationwide had pirated the image of The Yellow Kid and plastered it all over every product imaginable; mothers were even dressing their newborns to look like Dugan. Outcault, however, kept regularly utilizing images of The Yellow Kid in his comics style advertising work confirmed as late as 1915. Outcault soon found himself in a maelstrom not of his choosing, which probably pushed him to eventually drop the character. Outcault's creation went back and forth between newspaper giants Pulitzer and Hearst until Bennett's New York Herald mercifully snatched the cartoonist away in 1900 to do what amounted to a few relatively short-run strips. Later, he did one particular strip for a year–a satire of rural Black America titled Pore Li'l Mose His Letters to his Mammy, and then his newer creation, Buster Brown, debuted May 4, 1902. Mose had a very rare comic book collection published in 1902 by Cupples & Leon, now highly sought after by today's savvy collectors. Outcault continued drawing him in the background of occasional Buster Brown strips for many years to come.

William Randolph Hearst loved the comic strip medium ever since he was a little boy growing up on Max & Moritz by Wilhelm Busch in American collected book editions translated from the original German (these collections were first published in book form in 1871, serving as the influence for The Katzenjammer Kids). One of the ways Hearst responded to losing Outcault in 1900 was by purchasing the highly successful 23-year-old humor magazine Puck from the heirs of founder Joseph Keppler. With Puck and its exclusive cartoonist contracts, he commanded, among others, the very popular F. M. Howarth and Frederick Burr Opper's undivided attention. Opper first burst upon the comics scene in America back in 1880. Within a year Hearst had expanded this National Lampoon of its day into the colored Sunday comics section, Puck-The Comic Weekly. At first featuring Rudolph Dirk's The Katzenjammer Kids (1897), Happy Hooligan and other fine strips by the wildly popular Opper and a few others including Rudolph's brother Gus Dirks, the Hearst comic section steadily added more strips. For decades to come, there wasn't anything else that could compete with Puck. Hearst hired the best of the best and transformed Puck into the most popular comics section anywhere.

Outcault, meanwhile, followed in Palmer Cox's footprints a decade later by using the nexus of a World's Fair as a jumping off venue. Buster Brown was an instant sensation when he debuted as the new merchandising mascot of the Brown Shoe Company at the 1904 St. Louis World's Fair in a special Buster Brown Shoes pavilion. The character has the honor of being the first nationally licensed comic strip character in America with this time Outcault in almost full control. Many hundreds of different Buster Brown premiums have been issued. Comic books by Frederick A. Stokes Company featuring Buster Brown & His Dog Tige began as early as 1903 with Buster Brown and His Resolutions, simultaneously published in several different languages throughout the world.

After a few years, Buster and Outcault returned to Hearst in late 1905, joining

Vaudevilles And Other Things, 1900, first printing. Carl Schultze later became famous for creating Foxy Grandpa.

This Sunday strip ran September 7, 1902 through January 11, 1903 and ran only in this one paper. It is entirely possible a very young Chicago-resident named Philip Wylie read "Hugo" since that was the same name he gave his super-heroic main character in his much-later book The Gladiator (1930). Other appearances have Hugo running with almost super speed.*

what soon became the flagship of the comics world. Buster's popularity quickly spread all over the United States and then the world as he single-handedly spawned the first great comic strip licensing dynasty. For years, there were little people traveling from town to town performing as Buster Brown and selling shoes while accompanied by small dogs named Tige. Many other highly competitive licensed strips would soon follow. We suggest getting Hake's Price Guide to Character Toys for info on several hundred Buster Brown competitors, as well as several pages of the more fascinating Buster Brown material.

Soon there were many comic strip syndicates not only offering hundreds of various comic strips but also offering to license the characters for any company interested in paying the fee. The history of the comic strip with wide popularity since The Yellow Kid has been intertwined with giveaway premiums and character-based, store-bought merchandise of all kinds. Since its infancy as a profitable art form unto itself with The Yellow Kid, the comic strip world has profited from selling all sorts of "stuff" to the public featuring their favorite character or strip as its motif. American business gladly responded to the desire for comic character memorabilia with thousands of fun items to enjoy and collect. Most of the early comics were not aimed specifically at kids, though children understandably enjoyed them as well.

Comic books have generally been associated with almost all of the licensed merchandise in this century. In the Platinum Age section beginning right after this essay, you will find a great many comic books in varied formats and sizes published before the advent of the first successful monthly newsstand comic magazine, Famous Funnies. What drove each of these evolutionary format changes was the need by their producers to make money so more books could be issued.

A very significant format was F. M. Howarth's Funny Folks, published in 1899 by E. P. Dutton and drawn from color as well as black and white pages of Puck. This rather large hardcover volume measured 16 1/2" wide by 12" tall. It contains numerous sequential comic strip pages as well as single gag illustrations. Howarth's art was a joy to behold and deserves wider recognition.

By Oct. 1900, Hearst had already caused Opper's Folks In Funnyville to be collected by publisher R. H. Russell, NY in a 12x9 hard cover format from his New York Journal American Humorist section. At the end of 1900, Carl Shultze had a first edition of Vaudevilles and Other Things published by Isaac H. Blanchard Co., NY. It measures 10 1/2" wide by 13" tall with 22 pages including covers. Each interior page is a 2 to 7 panel comic strip with lots of color.

There were also recently unearthed format variation second and third printings of Vaudevilles with the inscription "From the Originator of the 'Foxy Grandpa' Series" at the bottom of its front cover of the third printing. This note is lacking on the earlier first two editions, and it also switches format size to 11" tall by 13" wide. Discovered last year was a heretofore undocumented The Adventures of Foxy Grandpa - also issued in 1900 - new to the Platinum listings. The second number dated 1901 drops the words "The Adventures of..." from the title.

E. W. Kemble's The Blackberries had a color collection by 1901, also published by R. H. Russell, NY, as well as a few other comic-related volumes by Kemble still to be unearthed and properly identified. An earlier one was titled Coontown's 400 (1899) newly listed this year. While the title is definitely not "PC" by today's standards, Kemble's drawings are excellent slices of African-American life in the USA with some humor injected. Kemble did a good job documenting aspects of life.

Confirmed is the exact format of Hearst's 1902 The Katzenjammer Kids and Happy Hooligan And His Brother Gloomy Gus. They both measure 15 5/16" wide by 10" tall and contain 88 pages including covers. Confirmed also is the fact that there are two separate editions with different covers for the pictured 1902 first edition and a 1903 Frederick Stokes edition of Katzenjammer Kids and Happy Hooligan with differing contents. They both are two different books entirely, and what confuses many collectors is that they have identical indicia title pages, but so does an entirely different KK from 1905.

Settling on a popular size of 17" wide by 11" tall, comic books were soon available that featured Charles "Bunny" Schultze's Foxy Grandpa, Rudolph Dirk's The Katzenjammer Kids, Winsor McCay's Little Sammy Sneeze, Rarebit Fiend and Little Nemo, and Fred Opper's Happy Hooligan and Maud, in addition to dozens of Buster Brown comic books. For well over a decade, these large-size, full-color volumes were the norm, retailing for 60¢. These collections offered full-size

Sunday comics with the back side blank per page.

Though not the first daily newspaper strip, the very rare Brainy Bowers and Drowsy Dugan by R. W. Taylor is now crowned the first collection of strip reprints from a daily newspaper published in America. There are now four different collections of Brainy Bower known to exist.

The Outbursts of Everett True by A. D. Condo and J. W. Raper was first published by Saalfield in 1907 in an 88-page hardcover collection. It qualifies as the second daily comic strip collection as it predates the first Mutt & Jeff collection from Ball by three years. Condo & Raper's creation began its regular run several times a week in 1905 daily newspapers and lasted until 1927, when Condo became too sick to continue. This same Everett True collection was later truncated a bit by Saalfield in 1921 to 56 strips in just 32 pages measuring the standard 10"x10" Cupples & Leon size.

By 1908 Stokes had a large backlist of full color comic books for sale at 60¢ each. Some of these titles date back to 1903 and were reprinted over and over as demand warranted. Note the number of titles in the advertisement pulled from the back of The Three Fun Makers shown below.

With the ever-increasing popularity of Bud Fisher's new daily strip sensation, Mutt & Jeff, a new format was created for reprinting daily strips in black and white, a hardcover book about 15" wide by 5" tall, published by Ball starting in 1910 for five volumes. In 1912, Ball also branched out with at least the now-obscure Doings of the Van Loons by Fred I. Leipziger, a rare comic book in the same format as the Mutt & Jeffs.

Cartoons Magazine also began in 1912 and ran through 1921 before undergoing a radical format change. It is notable as a wonderful source for information on early comics and their creators. See also the Platinum index.

The next significant evolutionary change occurred in 1919, when Cupples & Leon began issuing their black and white daily strip reprint books in a new aforementioned format, about 10" wide by 10" tall, with four panels reprinted per page in a two by two matrix. These books were 52 pages for 25¢. The first ones featured Bringing Up Father and Mutt & Jeff; there were about 100 others.

By 1921, the last of the oblong (11"x15") color comic books were issued, with Cupples & Leon's Jimmie Dugan and The Reg'lar Fellers by Gene Byrne, and EmBee's The Trouble Of Bringing Up Father by self publisher George McManus. Of special historical interest, Embee issued the first 10¢ monthly comic book, Comic Monthly, with the first issue dated January 1922. A dozen 8-1/2"x9" issues were published, each featuring solo adventures of popular King Features strips. The monthly 10¢ comic book concept had finally arrived, though it would be more than a decade before it became truly successful.

Skippy by Percy Crosby debuted in the long-running humor magazine Life in the March 22, 1923 issue. By 1924 the first hard cover collection, Life Presents Skippy, was published. The newspaper comic strip debuted June 23, 1925 with the McClure syndicate. Hearst soon picked up a Sunday page a year later in mid-1926, then added a daily strip in 1929. By the 1930s it was red hot - think Calvin & Hobbes or Peanuts in popularity. In its day, it was one of the most popular comic strips ever created. Read the Modern era essay for more on Skippy's immense popularity.

Above, Mutt & Jeff #5 by Bud Fisher, 1916, is fairly scarce as there was only one printing. Below, Reg'lar Fellers by Gene Byrne, 1921, one of the very last large oblong comics.

In 1926, Cupples & Leon added a new 7" wide by 9" tall format with Little Orphan Annie, Smitty, and others. These were issued in both softcover and hardcover editions with dust jackets, and became extremely popular at 60¢ per copy.

Dell began publishing all original material in The Funnies in late 1929 in a larger tabloid format. At least three dozen issues were published before Delacorte threw in the towel. Even the extremely popular Big Little Book, introduced in 1932, can be viewed as a smaller version of the existing formats. The competition amongst publishers now included Dell, McKay, Sonnet, Saalfield and Whitman. The 1930s saw a definite shift in merchandising comic strip material from adults to children. This was the decade when Kellogg's placed Buck Rogers on the map, when Ovaltine issued tons of Little Orphan Annie material.

Merchandising from such pioneers as Sam Gold and Kay Kamen spearheaded this next transformation of the comics biz beginning in the early 1930s.

Upwards of a thousand of these Funnies On Parade precursors, in all formats, were published through 1935 and were very popular. Towards the end of this era of once-popular comic book formats, beautiful collections of Popeye, Mickey Mouse, Dick Tracy, and many others were published which today command ever higher prices on the open market as they are rediscovered by the advanced collector who appreciates and enjoys truly great classic comics.

COLLECTOR'S NOTE: The books listed in this section were published many decades before organized comics fandom began archiving and helping to preserve these fragile popular culture artifacts. Consequently, copies of most all of these comics do not often surface in Fine+ or better shape. eBay is proving that many items once considered rare actually are not, though they are in higher grades. Most Platinum Age comic books are in the Fair to VG range. If you want to collect these only in high grade, your collection will be extremely small. The prices given for Good, Fine and Very Fine categories are for strictly graded editions. If you need help grading your item, we refer you to the grading section in the front of book or contact the authors of the Platinum essay. Items marked scarce we are trying to ascertain how many copies might still be in existence. Your input is always welcome.

For ease of ascertaining the contents of each item of this listing, there is a code letter or two following most titles. A helpful list of categories pertaining to these codes can be found at the beginning of the Victorian Age pricing sections. Most measurements are in inches. A few measurements are in centimeters. The first dimension given is Height and the second is Width. His description of his Cockney driver, " Harold" is amusing. Also describes his experience visiting Chicago to speak out against Capone, his concerns over the evils of Prohibition, and the economy prior to the 1929 crash. This book reveals he was aware of the dangers of his outspoken views, and is prophetic, re: his later years as political prisoner. Also reveals his religious beliefs.*

These broadsheets were 22-1/2" x 33" in size. Starting circa 1915, Carey Fountain Pens began offering subscriptions for the broadsheets to other merchants, for window display in their stores as well. This collects, in B&W, the cartoons for 1915. An "Edition Deluxe" was also advertised, with all cartoons hand colored. It is currently unknown whether a reprint collection was only issued in 1915, or if other editions exist.*

The Golden Age and Beyond

The American Comic Book: 1929-Present

A Concise History Of The Field As Of 2006

THE MODERN COMICS MAGAZINE SUPPLANTS THE EARLIER FORMATS

by Robert Lee Beerbohm & Richard D. Olson, PhD ©2006

(This article was originally created by Robert Beerbohm and Richard Olson for CBPG #27 1997 and is revised annually.)

Although somewhat similar in appearance to comic books of the Golden Age of the superhero, the varied formats that comic publishing pioneers Stokes, Cupples & Leon and others popularized beginning in 1899 are quite different in appearance from today's comics. Even so, those many formats were consistently successful until the early 1930s, when they then had to compete against The Great Depression; the Depression eventually won. One major reason for a format change was that at a cost of 25¢ per book for the 10" x 10" cardboard style and 60¢ for the 7" x 8 1/2" dustjacketed hardcovers, the price became increasingly prohibitive for most consumers already stifled by the crushed economy. As a result, all Cupples & Leon style books published between 1929-1935 are much rarer than their earlier counterparts because most Americans had little money to spend after paying for necessities like food and shelter.

By the early 1930s, the era of the Prestige Format black & white reprint comic book was over. In 1932-33 a lot of format variations arose, collecting such newspaper strips as Bobby Thatcher, Bringing Up Father, Buck Rogers, Dick Tracy, Happy Hooligan, Joe Palooka, The Little King, Little Orphan Annie, Mickey Mouse, Moon Mullins, Mutt & Jeff, Smitty, Tailspin Tommy, Tarzan, Thimble Theater starring Popeye, Tillie the Toiler, Winnie Winkle, and the Highlights of History.

The Funnies #1, early 1929, Dell Publishing Company and Eastern Color. This was the very first original material newsstand comic book!

There had been Embee's Comic Monthly's dozen issues a decade earlier in 1922, and several dozen of Dell & Eastern's The Funnies tabloid in 1929-30. It contained only original material, went from a dime to a nickel and still it failed to catch a decent circulation.

A couple years ago it was discovered that Eastern Color and Dell were also co-partners in The Funnies. It is possible that Eastern came up with the idea and Delecorte agreed to publish it for general stand-alone distribution. Similar format Sunday sections of the same material have been discovered by comics historian Ken Barker to be published at the same time in the Montreal Standard, a Canadian newspaper; it appears to have been an effort to get a new comics syndicate off the ground. The effort was not too successful as The Standard dropped the sections after just a few months. Allan Holtz went through the E&P yearbooks and found that this section (presumably a preprint) was advertised from 1930-34 by Eastern Color Printing out of New York City.

This is a re-discovery of important magnitude as it pushes back the time known for Eastern Color Printing Company and Dell Publishing Company to be partners by four years into late 1928. They had almost discovered the winning formula which has ruled the format of comic books in America for the last 70 years. Unfortunately, it would be another four years before they successfully figured it out.

With another format change including four colors, page counts beginning at 32 (soon hitting a whopping 68), and a hefty price reduction (starting for free as promotional premiums due to the nationwide numbing effects of worldwide deflation), the birthing pangs of the modern American comic book occurred in late 1932. Created out of desperation, to keep the printing presses rolling, the modern American comic book was born when a 45-year-old sales manager for Eastern Color Printing Company of New York reinvented the format from the failed tabloid The Funnies.

Harry I. Wildenberg's job was to come up with ideas that would sell color printing for Eastern, a company which also printed the comic sections for a score of newspapers along the eastern seaboard, including the Boston Globe, the Brooklyn Times, the Providence Journal, and the Newark Ledger. Down-time meant less take-home pay, so Wildenberg was always racking his brains to keep the color presses running. He was fascinated by the miles of funny sheets which rolled off Eastern's presses each week, and he constantly sought new ways to exploit their commercial possibilities. If the funny papers were this popular, he reasoned, they should prove a good advertising medium. He decided to pitch a comics tabloid to various oil company clients.

Brand new research conducted late in December 2005 has discovered the existence of a no number introduction issue of Standard Oil Comics dated to December 1932. Evidently it was Rockefeller's Standard Oil which decided before Gulf Oil to entice customers with a comics giveaway.

There are at least 14 issues each of at least a 1933 A and a 1934 B series of a four page tabloid-size full color comics giveaway titled Standard Oil Comics. The A issues all contain Fred Opper's Si & Mirandi, an older couple who interact with perennial favorites, Happy Hooligan & Maud the Mule, drawn by the grand old master himself, Frederick Opper, who had been a professional cartoonist for over 60 years by this time. This new "no number" 1932 precursor instructed readers to listen to the Si & Miandi radio show, come in regularly to Standard Oil stations and pick up Standard Oil Comics.

The 1934 B series front Goofus "He's From The Big City" McVittle by Walter O'Ehrle, set in humorous farming scenarios. Interior strips include Pesty And His Pop & Smiling Slim by Sid Hicks. Considering the concept of Gulf Funny Weekly has been well known for decades while Standard Oil Comics remains virtually unknown, what we now know is Gulf copied Standard in almost all respects.

Gulf Oil Company also liked the idea and hired a few artists to create an original comic called Gulf Comic Weekly. Their first issue was dated April 1933 and was 10 1/2" x 15". Gulf copied Standard Oil by advertising their giveaway nationally on the radio beginning April 30th. Its first artists were Stan Schendel doing The Uncovered Wagon, Victor doing Curly and the Kids, and Svess on a strip named Smileage. All were full page, full color comic strips. Wildenberg promptly had Eastern print this four page comic, making it probably the first tabloid newsprint comic published for American distribution outside of a newspaper in the 20th Century. Wildenberg and Gulf were astonished when the tabloids were grabbed up as fast as Gulf service stations could offer them. Distribution shot up to 3,000,000 copies a week after Gulf changed the name to Gulf Funny Weekly with its 5th issue. It remained a tabloid until early 1939 & ran for 422 issues until May 23, 1941.

Top: Newly discovered Standard Oil Comics from Dec 1932. One copy presently known to exist. This rare giveaway ended in late in 1934. Standard Oil was the first to issue a regular giveaway using comics to bring in customers; Middle: Gulf Comic Weekly #1, April, 1933, copied what Standard Oil began. Gulf's weekly changed its name to Gulf Funny Weekly with #5; Bottom: Not to be outdone, by March 1934, Shell Oil began a huge comics promotion to compete with Standard and Gulf.

Recent research has also turned up "new" rediscovered comics material from other oil companies from this same time span of 1933-34. Perhaps spurred by the runaway success of first Standard Oil Comics, then Gulf Funny Weekly, these other oil companies found they had to compete with licensed comic strip material of their own in order to remain profitable.

Beginning with the March-April 1934 issue of Shell Globe (V4 #2), characters from Bud Fisher (Mutt & Jeff) and Fontaine Fox (Toonerville Folks) were licensed to sell gas & oil for this company. 52,000 eight foot standees were made for Fisher's Mutt and Jeff and Fox's Powerful Katrinka and The Skipper for placement around 13,000 Shell gas stations. Augmenting them was an army of 250,000 miniature figures of the same characters. In addition, more than 1,000,000 play masks were given away to children along with more than 285,000 window stickers. If that wasn't enough, hundreds of thousands of 3x5 foot posters featuring these characters were released in conjunction with twenty-four sheet outdoor billboards. Radio announcements of this promotion began running April 7th, 1934. It is presently unknown if Shell had a comics tabloid created to give away to customers.

In addition, new research has uncovered the Gilmore Oil Company issuing an eight page giveaway titled The Gilmore Cub. It appears to have carried "Starnge As It Seems" among other cartoon features by John Hix. At least one issue, v4 #2, May, 1938, is known to exist.

The authors of this essay are actively soliciting help in uncovering more information regarding these and potentially other oil comics giveaways.

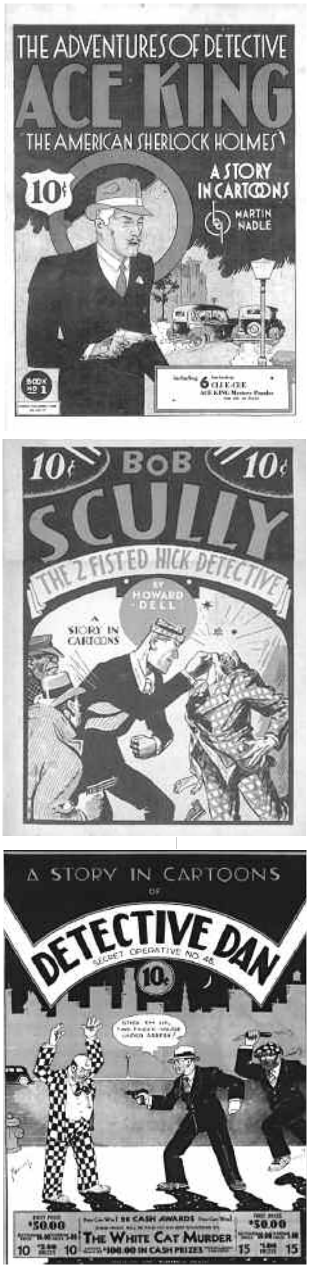
With the 1933 newsstand appearance of Humor's Detective Dan, Adventures of Detective Ace King, Bob Scully, Two Fisted Hick Detective, and possibly the still unrediscovered, but definitely advertised, Happy Mulligan, these little understood original-material comic books from Humor were the direct inspiration for Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster to transform their fanzine's evil character The Superman from Science Fiction #3 (January 1933) into a comic strip that would stand as a watershed heroic mark in American pop culture. The stage was set for a new frontier. The idea for creating an actual comic book as we know it today, however, did not occur to Wildenberg until later in 1933, when he said he was idly folding a newspaper in halves, then in quarters. As he looked at the twice-folded paper, it occurred to him that it was a convenient book size (actually it was late stage Dime Novel size, which companies like Street & Smith were pumping out). The format had its heyday from the 1880s through the 1910s, having been invented by the firm of Beadle and Adam in 1860 in more of a digest format. According to a 1942 article by Max Gaines (née Ginzberg), another contributing factor in the development of the format was an inspection of a promotional folder published by the Ledger Syndicate, in which four-color Sunday comic pages were printed in 7"x9".

According to a 1949 interview with Wildenberg, he thought "why not a comic book? It would have 32 or 64 pages and make a fine item for concerns which distribute premiums." All they did at Eastern Color that one fateful day is fold a tabloid newspaper format down to “dime novel” size running full color throughout on most of the comic strips, then staple it, and they hit upon their winning formula.

But they did not yet know this...as we will find out.

Working for Eastern Color at this same time were quite a few future legends of the comics business, such as Max Gaines, Lev Gleason and a fellow named Harold Moore (all sales staff directly underneath the supervision of Wildenberg), Sol Harrison as a color separator, and George Dougherty Sr. as a printer.

Janosik, Wildenberg, Gaines, Gleason and crew obtained publishing rights to certain Associated, Bell, Fisher, McNaught and Public Ledger Syndicate comics, had an artist make up a few dummies by hand. The sales staff then walked them around to their biggest prospects. Wildenberg received a telegram from Proctor & Gamble for an order of a million copies for a 32-page color comic magazine called Funnies on Parade. The entire print run was given away in just a few weeks in the Spring of 1933. Most copies no longer exist and it is now hard to find. All of them worked on the Funnies on Parade project. Morris Margolis was brought in from Charlton in Derby, Connecticut to solve binding problems centered on getting the pages in proper numerical sequence on that last fold to "modern" comic book size. Most of them were infected with the comics bug for most of the rest of their lives.



The Adventures of Detective Ace King, Bob Scully The Two Fisted Hick Detective & Detective Dan Secret Op. #48, early 1933, Humor Publishing Co. All issues Very Rare from the 2nd original newsstand comic book publisher; the direct inspiration for Jerry Siegel & Joe Shuster’s 1933 conversion of The Superman into a comic book due to a promise of publication. This earliest Superman was never published.

The success of Funnies on Parade quickly led to Eastern publishing additional giveaway books in the same format by late 1933, including the 32-page Famous Funnies A Carnival of Comics, the 100-page A Century of Comics and the 52-page Skippy's Own Book of Comics.

The latter became the first "new" format comic book about a single character. Out of all the comic strips on the market in 1933, Eastern Color’s growing comics market as devised by Harry Wildenberg, M.C. Gaines and Lev Gleason chose the Percy Crosby creation in Skippy’s Own Book of Comics to be its first standalone title. This first solo effort in their new 52-page newsprint Funnies On Parade format had an initial print run of half a million, as did their 100-pager.

The idea that anyone would pay for them seemed fantastic to Wildenberg, so Max Gaines stickered ten cents on several dozen of the latest premium, Famous Funnies A Carnival of Comics, as a test, and talked a couple newsstands into participating in this experiment. The copies sold out over the weekend and newsies asked for more.

Eastern sales staffers then approached Woolworth's. The late Oscar Fitz-Alan Douglas, sales brains of Woolworth, showed some interest, but after several months of deliberation decided the book would not give enough value for ten cents. Kress, Kresge, McCrory, and several other dime stores turned them down even more abruptly. Wildenberg next went to George Hecht, editor of Parents Magazine, and tried to persuade him to run a comic supplement or publish a "higher level" comic magazine. Hecht also frowned on the idea.

In Wildenberg's 1949 interview, he noted that "even the comic syndicates couldn't see it. 'Who's going to read old comics?' they asked." With the failures of EmBee’s Comic Monthly (1922) and Dell’s The Funnies (1929) still fresh in some minds, no one could see why children would pay ten cents for a comic magazine when they could get all they wanted for free in a Sunday newspaper. But Wildenberg had become convinced that children as well as grown-ups were not getting all the comics they wanted in the Sunday papers; otherwise, Standard Oil Comics, Gulf Comic Weekly and the premium comics would not have met with such success. Wildenberg said, "I decided that if boys and girls were willing to work for premium coupons to obtain comic books, they might be willing to pay ten cents on the newsstands." This conviction was also strengthened by Max Gaines' ten cent sticker experiment.

Famous Funnies Series One is the rare one, only 40,000 copies were printed.

George Janosik, the president of Eastern Color, then called on George Delacorte to form another 50-50 joint venture to publish and market a comic book "magazine" for retail sales as they did with The Funnies just a few years previously, but this time American News turned them down cold. The magazine monopoly remembered the abortive The Funnies from just a few years before. After much discussion on how to proceed, Delacorte finally agreed to publish it and a partnership was formed. Feeling cautious, they printed 40,000 copies for distribution to a few chain stores who agreed to try it out. Known today as Famous Funnies Series One, it clocks in at 68 pages, with half its pages coming from reprints of the reprints in Funnies on Parade and half from Famous Funnies A Carnival of Comics. It is the scarcest issue.

With 68 full-color pages at only ten cents a piece, it sold out in thirty days with not a single returned copy. Delacorte refused to print a second edition. "Advertisers won't use it," he complained. "They say it's not dignified enough." The profit, however, was approximately $2,000. This particular edition is the rarest of all these early Eastern comic book experiments.

In early 1934, while riding the train, another Eastern Color employee named Harold A. Moore read an account from a prominent New York newspaper that indicated they owed much of their circulation success to their comics section. Mr. Moore went back to Harry Gold, President of American News, with the article in hand. He succeeded in acquiring a print order for 250,000 copies for a proposed monthly comics magazine. In May 1934, Famous Funnies #1 (with a July cover date) hit the newsstands with Steven O. Douglass as its only editor (even though Harold Moore was listed as such in #1) until it ceased publication some twenty years later. It was a 64-page version of the 32-page giveaways, and more importantly, it still sold for a dime! The first issue lost $4,150.60. Ninety percent of the copies sold out and a second issue dated September debuted in July. From then on, the comic book was published monthly. Famous Funnies also began carrying original material, apparently as early as the second issue. With #3, Buck Rogers took center stage and stayed there for the next twenty years, with covers by Frank Frazetta towards the end of the run-some of his best comics work ever.

Delacorte got cold feet and sold back his interest to Eastern, even though the seventh issue cleared a profit of $2,664.25. Wildenberg emphasized that Eastern could make a manufacturer's profit by printing its own books as well as the publishing profits once it was distributed. Every issue showed greater sales than the preceding one, until within a year, close to a million 64-page books were being sold monthly at ten cents apiece; Eastern received the lion's share of the receipts, and soon found it was netting $30,000 per issue. The comic syndicates received $640 ($10 a page) for publishing rights. Original material could be obtained from budding professionals for just $5 a page. According to Will Eisner in R. C. Harvey's The Art of the Comic Book, the prices then paid for original material had a long range effect of keeping creator wages low for years.

Initially, Eastern's experiment was eyed with skepticism by the publishing world, but within a year or so after Famous Funnies was nonchalantly placed on sale alongside slicker magazines like Atlantic Monthly or Harper's, at least five other competitors tried this brand new format.

However, one other abortive periodical comics experiment was launched cover dated a full two months before the highly successful newsstand Famous Funnies format would have an important influence on a chain of events which led ultimately to Superman being published.

Comic Cuts #1, May 19, 1934, debuted published by H.L. Baker Co., Inc., 195 Main St, Buffalo, New York with editorial and executive offices at 381 Fourth St, NYC, same address as Famous Funnies #1, July 1934, was the first successful newsstand comic book, lasting until 1955.

ULTEM (Centaur) would use just a couple years later - this address housed a number of publishers fighting to exist during the Great Depression. The indica says H. L. Baker was President & Treasurer and J. D. Geller was Vice President and Secretary. It lasted nine issues with the final one cover-dated July 28. It appears Jake Geller, Windsor, Ontario, Canada, acquired American rights to a number of comic strips from the publisher Amalgamated Press, publisher of Comic Cuts in England. He partnered in the publishing with H. L. Baker and they acquired the backing of S-M News Co., Inc. as their distributor. Most distributors back then functioned on many important levels. It was common practice for the distributor back then to front the funds to pay the paper company and the printer, collecting the revenue from the 900 I.D. distributors located around the country after months of on-sale time, then paying the publisher.

In late 1934, army officer/diplomat turned pulp writer turned publisher Major Wheeler-Nicholson (1890-1968) formed the under-funded National Allied Publishing which introduced New Fun #1 (Feb 1935) at almost tabloid-size. New Fun was also distributed by S-M News. It is entirely possible Wheeler-Nicholson somehow convinced them he could produce a superior "home-grown" package as the imported strips were not selling well. New Fun was basically the same as Comic Cuts while also containing all original USA material such as carried in The Funnies (1929-30) from Dell/Eastern. With New Fun, what S-M News offered was more familiar American home grown. Coulton Waugh speculated in his 1947 history book The Comics on page 342: "...The Major had gone back to the 1929 idea of The Funnies, for the contents of New Fun were original material. (It should be recorded here that original art work had appeared in a one-color book called Detective Dan."

SKIPPY'S OWN BOOK of COMICS
48 PAGES... OVER 1000 SKIPPY AND OTHER PICTURES IN BRIGHT COLORS

Skippy's Own Book of Comics, 1934, had half a million issues printed. It was the very first single character comic book in this "new" format.

However, Lloyd Jacquet, a person definitely in a position to know better, wrote as Chapter One of a proposed "History of the Comic Book" in 1957, "When Major Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson set up his card table and chair in an eleventh floor office of the Hatha-way Building in New York that Fall of 1934, these most modest beginnings sparked off what can rightly be called the 'comic book era.' When he came back to the U.S. after his last stay abroad, he looked over the American newsstand, and thought that the European juvenile weekly papers, with their picture-story continuities, their colorful illustrations, and their low price would appeal to the American boys and girls in the same way. He knew that those European publications were made up of new material, specially drawn and produced for each little magazine. He also knew that the American presentation of such material would have to be different, and merely importing, or translating European produced features for republication here was not the answer. This was about the time I joined with him in his project. It was still embryonic, but beginning to take form under Nicholson's direction. We were in the depression then, & it was not too difficult to secure writers and artists - but it was a task to instruct them as to exactly what was wanted. We finally rounded up a small but gifted group of creative people, and we produced our first issue of a monthly magazine composed of original features and material, and which was called, simply, "FUN."

Around this same time in late 1934, M.C. Gaines left Eastern Color moving over to the McClure Newspaper Syndicate to become their manager of their Color Printing Department He immediately went to work convincing clients to issue promotional comics. Also, long-time comics publisher Whitman brought out the first original material movie adaptation, Tim McCoy Police Car 17, in the tabloid New Fun format with stiff card covers. A few years before, they had introduced the new comics formats known as the Big Little Book and the Big Big Book. The BLB and BBB formats would go toe-to-toe with Eastern's creation throughout the 1930s, but Eastern would win out with their new comics magazine format.

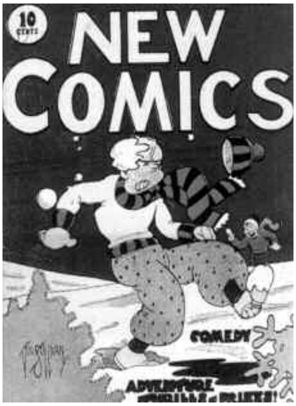
The very last 10" x 10" comic books pioneered by Cupples & Leon were published by the David McKay Publishing Company around mid-1935. Around this same time the Major published his 2nd comic book in which the editorial mentions amongst other exciting stories they were going to be showcasing the adventures of "hero supermen of the days to come."

By late 1935, Max Gaines (with his youthful assistant Sheldon Mayer) reached a business agreement with George Delacorte (who was re-entering the comic book business a third time) and McClure Syndicate (a growing newspaper comic strip enterprise) to be come editor of reprint newspaper comic strips in Popular Comics.

Also by late '35, Lev Gleason, another pioneer who participated in mercantiling Funnies on Parade and the early Famous Funnies, had become the first editor of United Feature's own Tip Top Comics with its first issue cover dated April 1936. In 1939 he would begin publishing his own titles starting with Silver Streak, created by the comics genius, Jack Cole, best known for Plastic Man. Gleason later created the crime comic book as a separate popular genre by 1942 with Crime Does Not Pay with a long run until 1955.

New Comics #1, Dec. 1935, was the Major's second entry into comic books, re-emphasizing the concept of "New!"



Wheeler-Nicholson introduced the concept of "the an-nual" into this new format with Big Book of Fun Comics #1 cover dated March 1936. It featured reprints from his earlier efforts in New Fun #1-5 as he struggled to make a go of it.

Industry giant King Features introduced King Comics #1 cover dated April 1936 through publisher David McKay, with Ruth Plumly Thompson as editor. McKay had already been issuing various format comic books with King Feature characters for a few years, including Mickey Mouse, Henry, Popeye and Secret Agent X-9, wherein Dashiell Hammett received cover billing and Alex Raymond was listed inside simply as "illustrator." McKay readily adapted to trying several formats. Soon many young comic book illustrators were copying Raymond.

The next month, William Cook & John Mahon, former disgruntled employees of Major Wheeler-Nicholson, issued their first issue of Comics Magazine #1 in May 1936.

This was followed by Henle Publishing issuing Wow What A Magazine, which contained the earliest comic work of Will Eisner, Bob Kane, Dick Briefer & others. By the end of 1936, Cook and Mahon pioneered the first single theme comic books: Funny Picture Stories #1 in Nov. 1936 (adventure), Detective Picture Stories #1 in Feb. 1937 (crime), as well as Western Picture Stories #1 in Feb. 1937 (the Western). The company would eventually be known historically as Centaur Comics, and serve as the subject of endless debate among fan historians regarding their earliest origins as to who the owners were, where they came from and where they went.

Dell issued the second western genre comic book titled Western Action Thrillers #1 in April 1937. It was ten cents for one hundred pages as well as 100 Pages of Comics 101, containing Big Little Book art reworked back into sequential comics.

Harry 'A' Chesler jumped ship from the Major, issuing his first comic books with Star Comics and Star Ranger Funnies, dated Feb 1937. Later that year, he sold these two titles to Ultem while remaining editor, and his newly set up art shop supplied contents. He then began Feature Funnies #1 in Oct. 1937, headlining Joe Palooka, at one time the #1 newspaper comic strip in America. Issue #2 sported a Rube Goldberg cover while #3 contains "Hawk of the Sea," Will Eisner's first work for what would soon become the Quality Comics Group when Everett "Busy" Arnold bought the company. Feature Funnies #3 also contains the first appearance of The Clock by George Brenner - the first costumed comic book hero.

titles out of the starting block. In late 1937 the Major began stumbling when he couldn't pay his printing bill to Harry Donenfeld. In recent interviews, Harry's son, Irwin, who as a 12-year old read the original art to the first issue of Action Comics #1 and Detective Comics #27 said "in 1932 my father and Paul Sampliner started Independent News with Liebowitz as the accountant. The company was begun with Paul Sampliner's mother's money. If it hadn't been for her investments into building the distribution as well as purchasing color printing presses, there might never have been a DC Comics. My father took over Wheeler-Nicholson's company with the Major's books literally on the printing presses. Harry had to absorb debt that could not otherwise be paid." Irwin told this writer "my dad did not originally willingly enter the comics business"

Soon after the Major lost control of his company, Action Comics #1 was published with a cover date of June 1938, and the first Golden Age of superhero comics had begun. Early in 1938 at McClure Syndicate, Max Gaines and Shelly Mayer showed editor Vin Sullivan a many times rejected sample strip. Sullivan then talked Donenfeld, Paul Sampliner and Jack Liebowitz into publishing Jerry Siegel & Joe Shuster's creation of "The Last Son of Krypton." This was followed in 1939 by a lucrative partnership for Gaines beginning with Harry Donenfeld as the All-American Comics Group.

While there's a great deal of controversy surrounding such labeling, the "Golden Age" is viewed by many these days as beginning with Action Comics #1 and continuing through the end of World War II. There was a time not that long ago that the newspaper reprint comic book was collected with more fervor than the heroic comics of the '40s. Prince Valiant FB #26, Flash Gordon 4C #10 and Tarzan SS #20 were some of the highest Holy Grails of collecting, but no more even though they contain fantastic art & story.

Today's marketplace dictates super heroes command the highest prices and are seemingly the most desirable. Maybe one day that pendulum will swing once again as there have been many years since they were introduced when super heroes almost disappeared completely from the racks.

The Atomic/Romance Age debuted with a bang by early 1946, revamping the industry once again as circulations soon hit their all-time highs with well over 1.3 billion periodical issues sold a year by the consignment honor system. By the early 1950s one in three periodicals sold in the USA was a comic book. 90% of all children admitted they read and enjoyed comics. There were dozens of genres being published. There were comic books for every taste and style. Hundreds of titles were being issued every month.

For many readers, the pinnacle was reached with the "New Trend" Entertaining Comics (E.C.) began delivering to the newsstands in 1950. The company still has a large following even today - a testament to its emphasis on quality art & story.

Comic book publishers glutted the market place by 1952-53. The attacks on comics begun the late 1940s came back anew in 1954 brought on by over-zealous church people and district attorneys with an agenda.

This continued until the advent of the self-censoring, industry-stifling Comics Code, created in response to a public outcry spearheaded by Dr. Frederic Wertham's tirade against the American comics industry, published as a book titled Seduction of the Innocent, which removed crime and horror comic books from the marketplace. Some of them were quite gruesome; however in his last book, The World of Fanzines, Wertham exhonerated comics fans for misinterpreting his data more than 20 years previous.

It took a year or two to recover from that moralistic assault, with many historians speculating the Silver Age of Superheroes began with the publication of Showcase #4 in 1956. Others point to the 1952 successful releases of Kurtzman's MAD #1 and Bark's Uncle Scrooge Four Color #386 as true Silver, since those titles soon broke the "million sold per issue" mark when the rest of the comic book industry was reeling from the effects of the public uproar fueled by Wertham. Within the Silver Era the term Bronze Age has been stated by some to begin when the Code approved newsstand comic book industry raised its standard cover price from 12 to 15 cents and Jack Kirby left Marvel for DC. As circulations plummeted after the Batman TV craze wore off by 1968 and the ensuing superhero glut withered on the stands, out in the Bay Area cartoonist Robert Crumb's creator-owned Zap Comics #1 appeared in Feb 1968, printed by Charles Plymell & Don Donahue on a small printing press. ning through the 1970s. During this decade the San Francisco Bay Area was an intense hotbed of comix being issued without a comics code "seal of approval" from companies such as Rip Off Press, Last Gasp, San Francisco Comic Book Company, Company & Sons, Weirdom Publications, Star*Reach, and Comics & Comix. Kitchen Sink prospered for many years in Wisconsin and many small press comix publishers scattered across the USA and Canada - all of whom created the Direct Sales Market. There were hundreds of people involved with an independent mind producing & distributing alternative underground comix, creating the direct market. Phil Seuling introduced DC, Marvel and Warren to this already developed for five years, San Francisco Bay Area-based, comix business system as a "new" way of selling comics in late 1973, acknowedged by Phil himself in his last interview in Will Eisner's Quarterly #3, Summer 1984.

After DC and Marvel joined the DM in a serious way in 1979, the last 20 years have generally been called the "Modern Age", although there are hints of a new age emerging since the mid-'90s. The jury is still out on naming it.

The comic book store as an industry came into its own in the 1980s. Thousands of fans & entrepreneurs opened stores, fulfilling a life's dream for many of them - fueled by a vibrant speculator's market which lasted until the early 1990s, its last hurrah being when DC "killed" Superman in 1992. The comic book marketplace has been rebuilding ever since. Much of that growth has been outside the super hero genre.

In each of the preceding eras, however, the secret for collectors has remained the same: buy what you enjoy. We did, and we are still collectors today! *Portions excerpted from Comics Archeology 101 © 2006 Robert L. Left, Conan #1, Oct. 1970, by Roy Thomas and Barry Windsor-Smith intro'd the sword & sorcery genre. Middle, StarReach #1, April 1974, published by Mike Friedrich, was the first comic book directed specifically at comic book stores. Right, Giant-Size X-Men #1, Summer, 1975, introduced the new X-team, which later on revolutionized the comic book store system with its phenomenal sales once Chris Claremont and John Byrne teamed up on the title.

GOING FOR THE BRONZE: LIFE AFTER THE SILVER AGE

by Michael Eury

It was 1970, and the Silver Age was over.

The Silver Age's innovations, the Julie Schwartz-edited revamps of Golden Age favorites and the Lee/Kirby/et al.-constructed House of Ideas, had grown familiar, and in some cases, stale. The bottom had dropped out of the TV Batman superhero boom and the Big Two and its competitors, reeling from declining sales, scratched their heads and pondered, "What do we try next?"

Their answer: Try everything! The 1970s was the decade of excess, after all, when there was no such thing as "too much" and nothing we, as a culture, wouldn't try. Hair got longer, music got louder, lapels got wider, bras got burned, movies got bloodier, drugs got mainstreamed . . . and Mom wore pantsuits while Dad sprouted muttonchops. Marvel and DC also got "with it," trying new genres, new ideas, and new formats, all in a hungry pursuit of the one thing there could never be too much of: money.

Today, Mom's pantsuits may have elastic waistlines and Dad's muttonchops-and hair-may be a distant memory, but the decade we now call the Bronze Age-1970–1979-was, arguably, the most influential of all of comics' landmark eras. It could have been comics' last dance, but instead it became a decade of renaissance, when through trial and error inroads were made that paved the way for the innovations of the 1980s, the 1990s, and the comic book industry we know today.

In their quest to find the next big thing, the first place publishers looked was outside of comics. For a mere $200 licensing fee ($50 beyond tight-fisted publisher Martin Goodman's budgeted $150), Marvel Comics writer/editor Roy Thomas landed the publication rights to Robert E. Howard's famed swordsman Conan. And while Marvel's Conan the Barbarian #1, written by Thomas, drawn by newcomer Barry (Windsor-) Smith, and cover-dated October 1970, didn't instantly ignite the comics world (Conan didn't look or read like the other material available, and early issues suffered from distribution challenges), before long the series developed a growing audience, and proved to publishers that they could sell material other than caped crusaders and lovesick all-American teens.

Sword-and-sorcery comics soon cut a swath through the stands, with licensed acquisitions Kull, Red Sonja, Thongor, and Solomon Kane joining Marvel's line, and DC countering with its acquisition of Fritz Leiber's Fafhrd and the Grey Mouser, in a 1973 series that made no attempt to hide the craze upon which it was capitalizing: Sword and Sorcery (original characters like the Warlord, Starfire, Stalker, Claw the Unconquered, IronJaw, and Wulf the Barbarian also premiered). Yet DC had already ventured into licensed terrain with its April 1972 cover-dated first issue of Tarzan (#207, continuing the numbering from previous publisher Gold Key). "[The estate of Tarzan creator Edgar Rice Burroughs] wanted their creative people on Tarzan," Carmine Infantino, at the time DC's Editorial Director, revealed, a request to which he responded, "No, I want my guys on the book"—actually his "guy," Joe Kubert, whose heralded stint as writer/artist/editor produced some of, perhaps the, finest illustrated Tarzan stories ever.

Tomb of Dracula (TOD), first seen in (cover date) April 1972, was not a licensed property but might have been had Bram Stoker's 1897 vampire novel not fallen into public domain. TOD and Werewolf by Night, which preceded it into print by two months in Marvel Spotlight #2, were Marvel's response to the 1971 lifting of the Comics Code Authority's prohibition against the depiction of vampires, werewolves, and the undead (although Morbius the Living Vampire, who debuted in October 1971's Amazing Spider-Man #101, was first out the gruesome gate), and spawned one of the decade's most popular trends. Frankenstein, Swamp Thing, Man-Thing, Bog Beast, Brother Voodoo, the Demon, and the Living Mummy were among the macabre protagonists in 1970s comics ("I pray that you will discontinue this corruption of impressionable young minds. . ." penned one concerned mother in response to Marvel's hellspawned super-hero, the Son of Satan). Some of them have resurfaced in the 2000s and have achieved acclaim beyond the four-color pages, including Ghost Rider, the star of a 2006 motion picture starring Nicolas Cage—who was weaned on Bronze Age comics (and chose his stage name from Marvel's own Hero for Hire, Luke Cage, another product of the 1970s).

Fu Manchu, the fictional "Yellow Peril" mastermind and subject of a series of novels by Sax Rohmer, brought his claw-fingered menace to comics in Special Marvel Edition #15 (December 1973), the first appearance of his created-for-comics son, Shang-Chi, better known as the Master of Kung Fu. Steve Englehart and Jim Starlin's response to the TV hit Kung Fu (1972–1975)—which itself was television's response to the trend of Hong Kong–born martial-arts movies and their patron saint, Bruce Lee—Master of Kung Fu became a long-running success for Marvel (most notably under Doug Moench and Paul Gulacy's tenure), and encouraged a gaggle of companions and imitators, including Sons of the Tiger, Iron Fist, Bronze Tiger, Lady Shiva, Karate Kid, and Richard Dragon, Kung Fu Fighter, as well as Seaboard/Atlas' 1975 copycat title The Hands of the Dragon.

Martial arts aside, Rohmer's Fu Manchu novels represented another 1970s' comics trend: pulp heroes. Doc Savage returned to spin racks in the form of a Marvel series in 1972. Dennis O'Neil and Michael Kaluta brought The Shadow to DC in 1973 (Jim Steranko, Alex Toth, and Bernie Wrightson were considered as the Shadow artist before then-newcomer Kaluta was signed). In 1975 DC also published four issues of Justice, Inc., starring the chalk-skinned globetrotter the Avenger, and Howard Chaykin's mid-1970s' Dominic Fortune (for Marvel) and the Scorpion (for Seaboard) mined this pulp vein.

Beyond the world of pop literature, Marvel found mass media a ripe market for exploitation. Rock stars KISS became super-heroes, even fighting Dr. Doom (premiering in a magazine-formatted comic featuring the audacious stunt of mixing the band's blood with the printer's ink!), and comics based upon popular sci-fi films Logan's Run, Planet of the Apes, Godzilla, and 2001: A Space Odyssey invaded the racks. DC was less ambitious in adapting cinematic properties, although its "DC TV Comic" line, including Welcome Back, Kotter, is noteworthy if for no other reason than the utter strangeness of it all.

No 1970s' screen property was more popular as a comic book than Star Wars, which premiered a few months before the May 25, 1977 release of the film, an anticipation-building maneuver brainstormed by Jedi master George Lucas. Roy Thomas was at the writing helm, and as he told BACK ISSUE in 2005, Lucas "had in mind the idea of Howard Chaykin as the artist." Star Wars' success title paved the way for other popular late-1970s' Marvel titles based upon sci-fi and toy properties, such as Battlestar Galactica, The Micronauts, and Rom.

Chaykin as Lucas' go-to artist illustrates another hallmark of 1970s' comics: the emergence of young talent. Comics publishing houses had been the exclusive domain of stuffed shirts in elbow-patched tweed jackets, but while looking outside of the field for new properties, the medium also looked within its fan base for the next talent wave. The transition, however, was not without its bumps in the road. As one of the "long-hairs" who broke the barrier, writer Denny O'Neil revealed, reflecting upon his visits to DC's headquarters, that "Steve Skeates and I were told by one of the functionaries not to walk past the Big Boss' office 'looking like that,' to take the long way around." "DC had been a closed shop," concurred Carmine Infantino, who "put aside a room for the freelance artists and writers, a place for them to go and discuss and enjoy each other's work." Another such site was Continuity Associates, the studio co-founded in 1971 by Neal Adams and Dick Giordano. Following the lead established in the late 1960s by visionaries Adams and his contemporary Steranko, who demonstrated that comics storytelling was not restricted to stodgy panel layouts or stereotypical dialogue, new artists and writers stormed the medium, daring to do things differently, Frank Brunner, John Byrne, Chris Claremont, Gerry Conway, Dave Cockrum, José Luis Garcia-Lopez, Steve Gerber, Michael Golden, Mike Grell, George Pérez, Mike Ploog, Frank Miller, Marshall Rogers, Bill Sienkiewicz, Walter Simonson, Len Wein, and Marv Wolfman, among their number.

Not to rest on their laurels, established talent became energized by this exciting new climate: John Buscema, Nick Cardy, Gene Colan, Gil Kane, Jack Kirby, Joe Kubert, Stan Lee, and John Romita, Sr. produced some of their best work in the 1970s, as did Curt Swan and Murphy Anderson with their "Swanderson" pairing on Superman. Marvel and DC took chances with traditional characters and with new characters existing within their universes. The coming of Kirby's Fourth World, Green Lantern/Green Arrow, Swamp Thing, Jonah Hex, the Punisher and Wolverine, Howard the Duck, Warlock, ethnic characters, and the new X-Men, plus the Joker's return to his homicidal roots and the deaths of Gwen Stacy and the Green Goblin, suggest that the most significant innovation of the 1970s might have been a willingness to

With new properties, new talent, and new characters bombarding the reader at a dizzying pace, little stability was to be found in the shapes of the comic books themselves. Publishers experimented with a variety of formats, in a move initially inspired by that perennial enemy of the long-time comic-book reader: the price increase.

Two years after jumping from a 12- to a 15-cent cover price, the 25-cent comic originated in the summer of 1971, as DC's titles, with their August cover dates, were now 48 pages (52 counting covers), hyped as "bigger and better" with roughly 22–25 new story pages backed up by 6–12 pages of Golden and Silver Age reprints. Marvel sucker-punched DC, delaying their price hike by one month (while blurbing their covers "Still 15¢"), then matching DC's price the next month, but trumping their original page count with 34–35 new story pages—and then undercutting their competitor by reverting to the standard 32-page format the following month, but at the cover price of 20 cents. DC, however, offered its readers something that Marvel's streamlined package could not: history. Newer readers sampled adventures of long-retired characters like Starman and Sandman, or more recently cancelled heroes including Deadman, keeping them alive in the fandom consciousness and inspiring budding writers and artists to, in later years, resuscitate them.

Is there any format that "says" the 1970s more than DC's 100-page Super Spectacular? In June and July 1971, DC published a trio of 100-pagers—Weird Mystery Tales, Love Stories, and World's Greatest Super-Heroes—each priced at 50 cents and reprinting material from the publisher's rich past. By 1973, 100-pagers returned as reprint specials, following in the footsteps of the Silver Age's beloved Annuals and 80-page giants. Before long several of DC's regular titles were converted to a bimonthly 100-page format, with new lead feature (or features) backed up by classics from yesteryear. (In December 1976 DC similarly converted some of its character-heavy titles like Superman Family into its new "Dollar Comic" format, featuring all-new stories in an 80-page [later a 64-page] package.)

Sharing the Super Spectacular's page count but at a much smaller size, the digest-sized comic (which began in the late 1960s at Gold Key) gained prominence in the 1970s in an attempt to broaden comics' availability. DC experimented with a 1972 Tarzan digest, announcing but never releasing a Laurel and Hardy digest (DC did, however, release a Laurel and Hardy one-shot comic). By decade's end, DC, Marvel, and Archie were publishing a host of reprint digests, aggressively fighting for rack space in supermarkets' highly visible checkouts. DC's and Marvel's digests were cancelled by the mid-1980s, but Archie's remain a durable fixture today, and the digest has morphed into a popular format for manga.

Comics reprints gained a bookstore presence throughout the 1970s, including Bonanza's trio of hardcovers, Batman: From the 30's to the 70's, Superman: From the 30's to the 70's, and Shazam: From the 40's to the 70's, the latter of which, not experiencing reprintings like the Batman and Superman editions, being quite scarce in today's collectibles market. Fireside's full-color trade paperback collections of Marvel and DC material were popular, particularly the Stan Lee–sanctioned line of super-hero trades beginning with Origins of Marvel Comics (1974). Near the end of the decade, Tempo Books' black-and-white paperback reprints of 1950s and 1960s DC material could be found in bookstores and K-Marts, as could Pocket Books' full-color line of reprints of early Marvels.

The biggest reprint format of the 1970s, bar none, was the tabloid, measuring approximately 10 1/4" x 13 1/4" and called "Treasury Editions" by Marvel and "Limited Collectors' Editions" by DC. Offering the added bonus of printing comics art close to full size (the standard dimensions of comics artboard of the day was 10" x 15"), these oversized comics soon housed all-new as well as classic material, and became the spotlight format for influential projects, including DC and Marvel's first super-hero team-up, Superman vs. The Amazing Spider-Man (1976).

Tabloids were envisioned as a doorway for comics to hop off the claustrophobic, kid-centric spin rack and be shelved alongside compatibly sized periodicals, but the black-and-white (B&W) comics magazine was most attractive to publishers as a means of luring the older, more discerning reader to the comic-book art form. While the medium had previously dabbled in this arena, E.C.'s "Picto-Fiction" B&Ws of the 1950s being an early example, during the 1970s almost every comics house tried its hand at it, following the lead of publisher James Warren, the indisputable champ of black-and-whites since his 1964 launch of Creepy. Skywald's Psycho, Ross Andru and Mike Esposito's Up Your Nose and Out Your Ear, and Charlton's TV-licensed The Six Million Dollar Man were among 1970s' B&W comics magazine fare, but Marvel successfully milked this trend for several years, most notably with its long-running Savage Sword of Conan. A single issue each of Jack Kirby's ill-fated "Speak-Out" black-and-whites In the Days of the Mob and Spirit World, DC's 1971 attempt to stick an apprehensive toe in the B&W waters, was released under the banner of "Hampshire Distributor's Ltd." Always the trailblazer, Kirby had high hopes for finding a new audience with these magazines (he was developing two other titles, True Divorce Cases and Soul Love, but they were not produced), but spotty distribution of Mob and Spirit intimidated the publisher from releasing additional B&Ws.

The graphic novel was also born in the 1970s, thanks to Will Eisner's A Contract with God (1978). The biographical "comix" found in the undergrounds motivated Eisner to return to the fold after a hiatus, and at a time when he could have easily retired, Eisner essentially re-created the comics art form by producing this pioneering collection of intensely personal stories.

The final, but widest-reaching, breakthrough of the Bronze Age was merchandising. While popular comics stars had long been licensed for various products, comic-book characters became household names during the 1970s due to a ubiquitous barrage of Saturday-morning TV cartoons and primetime live-action dramas, action figures, records, coloring books, 7-11 Slurpee cups, lunchboxes, electric toothbrushes, Colorforms, clothing patches, View-Master reels, and Halloween costumes, culminating in Superman: The Movie's elevation of the comic-book film to blockbuster status in 1978. While the innovations of 1970s publishing rebuilt the industry from within, the non-comics retailing of its characters cemented their statuses as cultural institutions.

The correct title listing for each comic book can be determined by consulting the indicia (publication data) on the beginning interior pages of the comic. The official title is determined by those words of the title in capital letters only, and not by what is on the cover. Titles are listed in this book as if they were one word, ignoring spaces, hyphens, and apostrophes, to make finding titles easier. Exceptions are made in rare cases. Comic books listed should be assumed to be in color unless noted "B&W".
